STAND AGAINST SECRET TREATIES IN NEAR EAST MADE BY U. S.

mbassador Child, at Lausanne, Gives Three Big Powers a Jolt by Declaring America's Opposition to Creation of Zones of Commercial Influence.

XPLOITATION OF OIL FIELDS CHIEF ISSUE

ritish, French and Italian Delegates Reveal Their Impatience at U. S. Attitude; Resent America's Refusal to Take a Vote.

By the Associated Press.

LAUSANNE, Nov. 25.—America gave Great Britain, France and Italy a hard jolt today when her spokesman, Richard Washburn Child, declared that the United States Government has the support of the American public in its oppsition to all secret treaties and arguments, particularly those designed to create zones of economic and commercial influence, such as the San Remo tripartite agreement of 1920 which apportioned the Mesopotamian oil fields among the three big Powers.

Child's exposition was merely a restatement of Secretary of State Hughes aide-memoir of Oct. 30 in which he defined for the benefit of the British, French and Italian Governments the functions of the American observers to the Lausanne conference and broadly outlined America's open-door policy for the Near East—but was a restatement under conditions that made it sensational. It came as the conference was about to begin consideration of Turkey's Asiatic boundaries, and it was a clear warning that America will not remain silent if the three inviting Powers insist upon preferential rights in oil, mineral, railway and power development in present Turkish territory or in that which was lopped off by the war.

The Turkish delegates had already made clear that they would insist upon their country sharing in the Mosul petroleum fields of Mesopotamia which the three inviting Powers have reserved for themselves; consequently it was not displeasing to the Turks for the United States to go on record against the San Remo agreement.

It was not possible for the delegates of the inviting Powers to conceal their impatience at America's insistent reiteration of her policy, which they resent especially because of her refusal to accept a vote in the conference, to sign any report or accept any responsibility further than to act as an advisor.

Chance in Attitude.

The American observers, it was remarked, are dipping into the Lausanne conference and displaying a disposition to enunciate the American policy, which is quite unlike their waiting attitude at previous European conferences and which is causing much surprise among the other delegations. The new American attitude, however, is affording great satisfaction to the neutral countries represented here. Apparently authenticated reports that Italy is making her support of the Franco-British position of German reparation dependent upon her receipt of commercial opportunities equaling those of France and Great Britain in the Near East convinced the neutrals that the American pronouncement of policy was justified and timely.

Japan's position on the open door in the Near East is practically the same as that of the United States, and all the lesser powers which cannot single-handed care for their own rights rejoiced that a powerful [illegible] had taken the stand to insure free trade in the Levant.

Viewed as Result of Rivalry.

There can be no question that the Washington Government views the present situation in the Near East with its threat against world peace as a natural outgrowth of the commercial and economic rivalry among European Powers that has kept the region in a foment for years. The American solution would be to do away entirely with special commercial rights in Turkish territory.

The history of Near Eastern "settlements" holds slight hope, however, that such a result will flow immediately from the Lausanne gathering. The Washington Government

"TIGER" BECOMES FOOTBALL FAN AND GOES TO BIG GAME

Clemenceau Shares Honors With Harvard and Yale Teams as an Attraction.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 25.—Georges Clemenceau spent a typical American day today at the Yale-Harvard football game, witnessing such enthusiasm as is seldom visible on the other side. The Tiger insisted on seeing the match even at the expense of completely upsetting his Boston schedule.

Shortly after lunch his special arrived at New Haven, where automobiles were waiting to take the Tiger to the bowl. M. Clemenceau's car was decorated with the French and American flags and he was accompanied by army and police officers.

His presence was at once detected as he entered the bowl and he went to his seat to ringing cheers of "Viva la France" and "Good Old Tiger." M. Clemenceau waved his hat in reply and then settled down to have the whole business explained to him. The Harvard and Yale bands were then playing and parading, the Harvard band having struck up "The Marseillaise" as the Tiger made his entry.

M. Clemenceau paid the closest attention to the game, but thought it too rough. Also he considered that while the enthusiasm was wonderful, one looked too often at the antics of the cheer leaders and not at the game. Throughout the opening stages, hundreds of pretty girls stood up on their seats to catch a glimpse of the Tiger. His cheery appearance delighted them.

After the first half, President Angell of Yale came across to fetch M. Clemenceau over to the Yale side so that there should be no inter-university jealousy.

Clemenceau was piloted down and across the field only with the greatest difficulty, while college youths pranced around him shouting "Tiger, Tiger." His progress was made to frequent breaks of thunderous applause. As he was in midfield the cynosure of 100,000 eyes, Harvard again struck up "The Marseillaise," which Yale took on directly after its sister university had concluded. It was a stirring moment.

As we approached the Yale side, the hundreds of white and blue handkerchiefs shot up forming the word "Yale" and all cheered the Tiger tremendously as he advanced toward them. The Tiger's eyes lit up at the unusual welcome. Clemenceau occupied a seat next to a French lady.

At the close of the match Clemenceau was again roundly cheered as he walked back across to the Harvard side. By this time the snake dance begun and the Tiger almost got mixed up in it.

Driving to the Angell home for tea he was presented with a medal by former President Hadley and later returned to the New Haven Railroad station for his journey to Chicago.

FLYING CLUB TO SPONSOR AIR CIRCUS AT BRIDGETON

Interest in Possible Obtaining of 1923 Aeronautical Meet for St. Louis Sought.

The Flying Club of St. Louis, which has about 150 members, will sponsor a flying circus at Lambert Field, Bridgeton, St. Louis County, this afternoon, to arouse public interest in the possibility of St. Louis obtaining the 1923 meet of the National Aeronautical Association.

Ten or 12 airplanes are being prepared to participate. A 30-mile race will be one of the events. It is probable that Miss Elvira Fizer, 18 years old, of Lexington, Mo., will give an exhibition of walking on one of the wings of a flying plane and keeping a position on the wing while the plane loops the loop. A parachute drop also is scheduled.

Bridgeton Field, which is about seven miles from the city limits, is reached over the St. Charles and Natural Bridge roads. The Bridgeton branch of the St. Charles electric line runs to within walking distance of the field.

BURNS FATAL TO CHILD OF 3

Mother Returned to Find Girl Before Stove, Her Clothes Burned Off.

Bernice Kurtz, 3 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Kurtz of 6002 Fyler avenue, died at the city hospital at 9 o'clock last night of burns suffered in the kitchen of her home during the afternoon. She was burned on the face, body and limbs.

Mrs. Kurtz said that she had gone to market and left their four children with her husband, who later went out. The oldest girl, Florence, 11, went out to carry some water, and Mrs. Kurtz returned, at 5 p. m. and found Bernice lying in front of the kitchen range, in which there was a fire, with her clothes burned off.

LOUISIANA CHIEF EXECUTIVE TO OPEN WAR ON K. K. K.

Offers $500 for Arrest of Five Masked Men Who Kidnaped and Beat Five Mer-Rouge Citizens.

TWO BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN SLAIN

Governor Declares Recovery of Bodies Will Be First Step, but That Prosecutions Will Follow.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

BATON ROUGE, La., Nov. 25.—Gov. John M. Parker, who has just returned from Washington, where he discussed with President Harding activities of the Ku Klux Klan in Louisiana, announces that he will unmask the Klan in this State as an organization inimical to law and order.

He has offered a reward of $500 for the arrest of the five masked men in Klan regalia who kidnaped five Mer-Rouge citizens in Morehouse Parish, near Shreveport, on the evening of August 24. Two of the captives have not been heard from and are believed to have been murdered.

"I am convinced that the missing men have been murdered," said Gov. Parker, "and when their bodies have been found there will be something to write about. We are going to prosecute the men responsible for this outrage whatever the costs. While there have been many instances of whippings and other persecution by men in Klan regalia, we are concentrating on the Morehouse Parish affair, as we are sure of our ground there."

The outrage had been the topic of daily discussion throughout the State for weeks after its occurrence and the talk had begun to subside when the Governor's recent visit to Washington revived it. The Governor is keeping his own counsel, but declares that there will be a reckoning for the klansmen of Morehouse Parish.

Klan May Be Campaign Issue.

The conversations indicate that klan activities will be an issue in the gubernatorial campaign of 1924, which will open next year, and it is already being asserted that the klan will have a candidate to succeed Gov. Parker. The Governor isn't worrying about that phase of the matter. Besides he is not seeking office.

He has the roster of klansmen in Morehouse and other parishes and declares that some of them were elected to enforce the law, but have winked at outrages committed by their hooded brothers. He knows more that will be disclosed in an official action, he says, but is taking care not to "flush the covey."

"We must first recover the bodies of those men," he added. "I have investigated their characters and find they had been good citizens."

The missing men are Fillmore Watt Daniel, 42 years old, of Mer-Rouge, automobile mechanic, formerly a sergeant in Company A, 336th Battalion of the Tank Corps, and T. F. Richards, 32, automobile mechanic of Mer-Rouge. Richards is married and has a wife and two daughters, 2 and 6 years old.

Three Men Thrown Out.

Daniel and Richards, together with the former's father, J. L. Daniel, 69, a farmer, and W. C. Andrews, 50, and C. C. Davenport, 22, of Mer-Rouge, were taken to the woods and flogged with straps by men in klan regalia. The assailants are believed to have been from Bastrop, eight miles from Mer-Rouge. J. L. Daniel, Andrews and Davenport were thrown out of an automobile three hours later at Colliston, 20 miles south of Mer-Rouge, and the car then was driven away with young Daniel and Richards. Gov. Parker says he knows the direction it took from Colliston and what disposition was made of the two men.

Of the three victims, who were thrown out at Colliston, Andrews was the most severely beaten. J. L. Daniel has offered a reward of $5000 for the arrest of the abductors. Davenport, who is a clerk in a store conducted by his father, is also a world war veteran.

The five men had been to a barbecue at Bastrop, given Aug. 24, to attract a crowd for discussion of a road bond issue. When residents of Mer Rouge started to return home about 6 o'clock that evening they found the road about half way between Bastrop and Mer Rouge blocked with an automobile to which was attached a trailer.

SENTENCES UP TO 2 YEARS FOR GETTING DRUNK IN TURKEY

All Intoxicants to Be Confiscated or Shipped Abroad, Under New Law.

By the Associated Press.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 25.—Under the Turkish prohibition law, published today, all alcoholic liquors in the country will be confiscated or shipped abroad, all persons convicted of manufacturing, importing or selling spirituous beverages will be fined and jailed and those found intoxicated will be liable to imprisonment from three months to two years.

Offenders occupying Government positions will forfeit their offices. There will be no appeal from these decisions.

MRS. O. H. P. BELMONT GIVES OPINION OF TWO BIG PARTIES

Unconcerned Regarding Recent Elections, Saying Republicans and Democrats Ignore Women's Party.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—The Democratic and Republican parties today received a gentle snub from Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, society leader, and president of the National Woman's party, who sailed on the Majestic for Europe. She will pass the winter at her home in the Riviera.

"My goodness," she said, when asked what she thought of the recent elections. "I haven't given them a thought. The Democrats and Republicans don't pay any attention to us these days. Why should we worry about them?"

She added that her party would continue to operate independently in national political affairs and that it would be an organization to reckon with in 1924. While in Europe she said she would arrange for the publication, in all European languages, of the history of the woman's party in the United States and its aims.

7 KILLED AND AT LEAST 30 INJURED IN MINE EXPLOSION

Cause of Blast at Cerrilos, N. M., Late Yesterday Not Determined, Manager Reports.

By the Associated Press.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Nov. 25.—Seven men were killed at at least 30 injured in an explosion in mine No. 4 of the Madrid-Cerrillos Coal Co. at Cerrilos, N. M., late this afternoon, according to Manager Virgil R. McKnight.

Thirteen of the injured were brought to hospitals here. McKnight said there were 13 or more injured being cared for at Madrid, near where the explosion occurred. Ambulances, doctors and nurses were sent from here and from Santa Fe. The cause of the explosion has not been determined, McKnight said.

ROME HONORS SARAH BERNHARDT

Actress Says She Feels Inspired by "Land of Art."

By the Associated Press

ROME, Nov. 25.—The theatrical and social public of Rome turned out in large numbers today to pay tribute to Sarah Bernhardt, appearing at the Costanzi Theater in "Regina Armand," by Verneuil.

Speaking with old friends here before the performance, she said she felt quite rejuvenated by the springlike sun and the mild weather of the Roman November.

"Like Antaeus," she added, "every time I touch the land of art and song which produced Dante, Raphael Michael Angelo and Loenardo Da Vinci, I feel the inspiration of art burn more strongly in my spirit."

DIVORCE DECREE VACATED AFTER TIERNAN MARRIES

Court to Investigate Possibility of Criminal Collusion When Professor Weds Two Days After Divorce.

NEW ATTORNEY APPOINTED IN CASE

Former Wife Declares She Was 'Tricked' Into Agreeing to Institution of Proceedings.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 25.—Judge Chester R. Montgomery tonight vacated the divorce decree which he awarded Prof. John Tiernan last Thursday and remanded the custody of the children back to the mother, Mrs. Augusta Tiernan. The new hearing was set for Dec. 11. Judge Montgomery removed Prosecutor Floyd O. Jellison from the case and appointed William E. Miller to defend Mrs. Tiernan. Attorney Miller is probation officer and his entrance into the case was brought in behalf of the children.

It is believed that this decision invalidated Tiernan's second marriage, which took place today at Crown Point, Ind. The bride is Mrs. Blanche Brimmer, a divorcee, and daughter of a Methodist minister of Hansell, Ia.

Mrs. Tiernan was principal in the recent criminal prosecution of Harry Poulin, a merchant here, involving the parentage of the youngest of her three children, a son.

Mrs. Tiernan's story, told to Judge Montgomery in chambers this afternoon and repeated on the witness stand after the lawyers in the case had been called, moved him to revoke his decree of divorce and to reopen the case.

New Lawyer Appointed.

Judge Montgomery practically accussed Jrosecutor Jellison of having failed to conduct a bona fide case for Mrs. Tiernan after he had been appointed by the court to represent her. Jellison attempted a defense, but was frequently interrupted by the court.

The Judge quoted Mrs. Tiernan's statement that Jellison, who was supposed to be representing her, had not even seen his client. He finally discharged him from the case and appointed Miller, Chief County Juvenile Officer, to represent Mrs. Tiernan, largely because of the interests of the children.

The new development in the case was decided upon in short order. Judge Montgomery opened court at 5:40 p. m. Prosecutor Jellison, George Sands, representing Tiernan, and Samuel F. Feiwell, Mrs. Tiernan's former lawyer, were present.

Statement of Judge.

Both Jellison and Sands attempted objections to the Court order, but the Judge ruled that he was not passing on the facts in the case pointing toward colusion, but merely was reopening the case so that the facts could be learned.

Mrs. Tiernan appeared, and told a story on several important points which was directly opposite from that told by Tiernan Thursday. She declared that she and her husband had not been separated since the original divorce complaint was filed, Oct. 7.

With downcast eyes, she asserted that she had participated in full marital relations up to the very day before the trial. She declared that instead of living in separate rooms at the Tiernan home, they had lived in the same room.

Mrs. Tiernan repeated her charge that she had been "double-crossed" into the divorce. She made her allegations under oath. Judge Montgomery said that he would have been justified in revoking the divorce given Prof. Tiernan without calling Mrs. Tiernan into court, but said that he did this so it might not appear that he had acted solely on the testimony of the woman given to him in his office.

She told of her husband's disappointment when their second baby was a girl, instead of the son for whom he longed. He then talked of divorce, she said. This was four years ago.

Mrs. Tiernan's Story.

"He asked me to sue him, saying that it would endanger his position at Notre Dame if he sued me," she said, "but I didn't want to, our babies were little, and I wanted to keep our home together. I believe he went to a local lawyer to see if he could have me divorced. That lawyer, Samuel Feiwell, called me on the phone and asked me if I would sue. After a time Mr. Tiernan took me to Mr. Jellison's office and wanted

WATER FAMINE IN PANA, ILL., LEAVES TOWN SHIVERING

Buildings Without Steam Heat and Temperature Is Below Freezing.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PANA, Ill., Nov. 25.—With steam-heated business houses and residences without heat due to exhaustion of the water supply at the city water works reservoir, Pana is shivering tonight with the mercury 12 degrees below freezing. Water famine developing yesterday has become serious with no relief in sight. All schools have been closed because there is no water for steam heating, while mammoth greenhouses, where there are more than 75,000 rose-bearing plants, are chilled and plants thirsting for water. Mines have been restricted and railroads shut off from supply while fire protection is wholly inadequate and sanitation seriously crippled. The city's only supply is the meager output from deep wells. This is the first real water famine the city has experienced in 30 years.

FOUR BODIES FOUND AFTER FIRE IN CATHOLIC COLLEGE

Eight Persons Missing, Canadian Priest Announces at Winnipeg.

By the Associated Press.

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 25.—Father Bourke announced tonight to the Canadian Press from the Archbishop Palace St. Boniface, that 8 persons were missing as a result of fire which destroyed the College there this morning. Father Bourke stated that four bodies had been recovered but not identified, leaving 4 still unaccounted for.

Asked about a rumor that the fire had been incendiary, Father Bourke refused to commit himself. He acknowledged the fire had started in the music hall in the basement of the college and that authorities were unable to account for a terrific explosion which followed the outbreak of fire.

It first had been reported that the fire started in the physics laboratory, but this was denied by Father Bourke, who stated that the laboratory was on the third floor.

ROBBER'S BULLET ON A FREAK TRIP UNDER SKIN OF VICTIM

Pellet Enters Right Side ad Is Removed From Lodgement Near the Spine.

A robber's bullet which struck Manuel Solomon, 33 years old, of 3142 Sheridan avenue, at 11:15 last night, performed a lucky freak. It struck him in the right side, near the breast, evidently hit a rib, which deflected it, skirted around beneath his skin and lodged near his spine, from where surgeons at the Baptist Hospital removed it.

Solomon and his wife returned home in their automobile from their grocery at 3839 Finney avenue, Mrs. Solomon carrying the day's receipts. She said two youths, who had loitered around the store during the evening, followed then in another machine. They were held up by two youths, who had revolvers, at their garage. Mrs. Solomon screamed and ran into the yard. One robber fired the shot that struck Solomon, then both robbers fled.

EFFORT TO BE MADE TO HEAR K S D CONCERT ON TRAIN

Loop Aerial to Be Installed in Wabash Railroad Club Car Tomorrow Night.

The Wabash Railroad will conduct a radio test tomorrow night on the passenger train to Kansas City, leaving St. Louis Union Station at 10:30 o'clock.

It is announced that a loop aerial, consisting of a coil of wire 18 inches square, will be placed on the floor of an all-steel club-car and that all windows and doors will be closed. It is expected to "pick up" the midnight concert, between 11 p. m. and 1 a. m., of Station K S D, the Post-Dispatch broadcasting station, as well as communications from other stations.

POWDER EXPLODES IN MINE; 14 MEN INJURED, 6 SERIOUSLY

Blast Caused When Visitor in Workings Threw Keg Onto Motor.

By the Associated Press.

CHEROKEE, Kan., Nov. 25.—The explosion of five kegs of powder at 10:30 a. m. today in the Cherokee Coal Company mine, known as the Old Hamilton No. 6 Mine, near here, resulted in injuries to 14 men, 6 of whom were seriously burned.

The explosion occurred, it is thought, when a visitor threw a 25 pound keg of powder onto a shorted storage battery motor, the keg and four others already on the motor igniting.

The men injured were back into the mine about a mile and a half and were just preparing to come to the surface.

TESTIFIES HOHENSCHILD KNEW HIS REPORTS ON BANK WERE "CROOKED"

Anthony Rolwes, Note Teller of Defunct Night and Day Bank, Describes How He Prepared False Monthly Statements.

DONE AT DIRECTION OF MEININGER, HE SAYS

State Also Presents Testimony That System of "Cash Items" That Wrecked Bank Was Known to Hohenschild and Other Directors for Nearly Year.

"Crooked" reports to the directors of the Night and Day Bank made to deceive them as to the bank's condition, were described yesterday afternoon in the testimony of Anthony Rolwes of 3513 Wisconsin avenue, note teller of the defunct bank, in the trial of H. H. Hohenschild, president of the bank, in Judge Killoren's court. Hohenschild is charged with assenting to acceptance of deposits in a failing institution. The bank closed Jan. 6 last, with a loss of about $1,000,000.

The importance of Rolwes' testimony as to Hohenschild was in his declaration that Hohenschild knew that incorrect statements were being furnished to the directors. Rolwes said he prepared the false statements under the direction of A. O. Meininger, cashier, and furnished them to the directors, while he furnished correct statements to Hohenschild and Meininger. He said Hohenschild once asked him about the difference between the statement furnishd to him and that prepared for the directors, and that he replied that it was "Meininger's work." Hohenschild said no more about the matter to him, Rolwes testified.

State's Most Important Point.

This, perhaps the most important point scored by the State thus far, ended a day in which the State also presented testimony that Meininger's system of "cash items," which wrecked the bank, was made known to Hohenschild and the other directors, nearly a year before the failure, by a State Bank Examiner.

The position of the defense, as shown by the cross-questioning carried on by Patrick H. Cullen, chief counsel, has been that Hohenschild, who was not a practical banker, did not know of the irregularities, and that these were due to a conspiracy of subordinates, among whom Cullen has specifically named Meininger, F. J. Schneider, general bookkeeper, and W. L. Kingston, head teller. Meininger is under numerous indictments, and Schneider and Kingston have testified against Hohenschild, Kingston completing his testimony yesterday.

The defense scored a technical point which may be used in Hohenschild's behalf. It showed that, by the bank's system of bookkeeping, deposits made after 2 p. m. were not entered on the bank's books as of that day, and that the money was put away by the teller receiving it, to be entered on the following day. The State is basing the present case on a deposit made at 7 p. m., Jan 6. The defense can now argue that the money in this case did not come legally into the control of the bank's officers on Jan. 5, as it was still in the teller's custody on the following morning, when the bank did not open. This will be equivalent to arguing that, though the man who took the money to the bank may have thought he was making a deposit, and though he may have lost the same share that depositors lost, still the bank' officer did not, in the eyes of the law, accept a deposit from him.

Time for Trial Limited.

The court admonished the lawyers that the testimony must be concluded by Wednesday night. Thursday will be the Thanksgiving holiday, and it will be necessary to complete the arguments Friday, to insure proper time for the jury to consider the case. A verdict must be obtained before Saturday midnight, or the case will end in a mistrial, as the term of court ends at that time.

Night sessions of the trial probably will be held, beginning tomorrow night. Circuit Attorney Sidener expects to complete the State's testimony by tomorrow evening. He will call Donald W. Ross, deputy state finance commissioner, tomorrow morning, and then will present the original of Ross' report to Finance Commissioner Hughes on the bank's affairs. This original will be obtained from Hughes' office in Jefferson City. The defense cut Ross' testimony short yesterday by objections of the defense, which insisted that Ross make no reference to this report without producing the original. The State offered to present a duplicate copy, which was in the office of the Recorder of Deeds, but the defense would not agree to this.

The members of the jury were permitted to go home last evening, with warnings against reading published accounts of the case or listening to any discussion of it.

Nature of Rolwes' Reports.

The statements prepared by Note Teller Rolwes, about which Rolwes testified yesterday, were monthly statements of overdue notes held by the bank. Rolwes testified that he prepared two separate statements of overdue notes each month. He said that he made out a correct statement in triplicate, giving copies to Hohenschild and Meininger and reserving the original for his own use. The other statement, he said, was prepared for the Board of Directors. It was gotten up under the direction of Meininger, and omitted certain notes mentioned in the statement prepared for Hohenschild and Meininger.

"What was the purpose of making those different reports?" asked Cullen on cross-examination.

"The purpose was up to Hohenschild and Meininger," replied Rolwes.

"There was nothing crooked about it, was there?"

"Yes, there was."

"You mean to tell us that you acted in a crooked manner in these transactions?"

"What I did, I did under Meininger's direction."

"Well, then, tell us what was wrong about it."

"The statements did not agree."

"Just what was the purpose of that?"

"The purpose was, not to let the directors know how much overdue paper was in the bank."

Bank Examiners Perplexed.

Rolwes previously had testified that when State Bank Examiners were in the bank in December, 1920, they worked on the accounts for four days and then "gave it up as a bad job."

"They tried to balance the books, but could not do it," he said. "They found discrepancies in my cage amounting to about $50,000. These discrepancies were the result of the conflicting statements I had been making for Hohenschild and Meininger and for the directors."

"What became of those monthly statements you say you prepared for the directors?" asked Cullen.

"I assume they went to the directors," replied Rolwes, "because that is what Meininger told me he wanted them for."

"Did you see them in the hands of the directors?"

"No, but I presume the minutes of the directors' meetings contain some reference to them."

"Name a man, woman or child,

CLEMENCEAU WILL SPEAK IN ODEON AT 2 P. M. SATURDAY

French War Premier, Who Will Arrive Thursday, Is to Be Guest at Home of Joseph Pulitzer.

RECEPTION PLANNED AT WASHINGTON U.

Proceeds of Ticket Sale, Above Expenses, to Be Given to "Tiger" for Benefit of French Orphans.

Georges Clemenceau, wartime Premier of France, will be the center of a public demonstration here Saturday, and will speak in the Odeon at 2 p. m. on that day, on the same theme which he has discussed in his New York and Boston speeches.

"The Tiger" will arrive in St. Louis Thursday evening from Chicago, following a stop at Springfield, Ill., to visit the tomb of Abraham Lincoln. His arrival will not be made a public occasion, and he will be driven to the home of Joseph Pulitzer, on Barnes road, St. Louis County, where he will remain Friday. No public appearance is scheduled for that day.

Saturday morning, members of the Citizens' Clemenceau Committee, occupying some 25 automobiles, will drive to the Pulitzer home, and will escort Clemenceau into the city. The line of machines, returning with the Guest, is to reach Skinker road and Forsythe avenue at 11 a. m.

The party will stop at Washington University, where students will gather in front of the administration building, and where a brief reception will be held.

Drive Over Art Hill.

A drive through Forest Park, over Art Hill, will give the visitor a view of the statue of Saint Louis, and of the city from the hill, a view which has been compared to that of Paris from Montmartre.

Leaving the park at the Lindell entrance, the line will proceed east on Lindell boulevard to Grand. School children will gather along Lindell, and groups will sing the Marseillaise hymn, as the guest passes. At St. Louis University, there will be a stop for greeting, and a demonstration by students.

The line will proceed over the Lindell-Locust route to Twentieth street, where 50 mounted policemen will wait to act as escort for the downtown portion of the parade. The route will be that followed by wartime parades—north on Twentieth street to Washington avenue, east on Washington to Broadway, which is to be reached at 12:30 p. m.; south on Broadway, to Olive street, west on Olive to Twelfth boulevard, north on Twelfth to Locust, west on Locust to Theresa avenue, north to Washington, west to Grand boulevard and north to the Odeon.

As the line of automobiles, eastbound, reaches Twelfth boulevard, the Sixth Infantry, from Jefferson Barracks, will fall in behind the police escort and ahead of the machines. The regimental band will furnish music.

Decorations With French Tricolor.

The Odeon will be decorated with the French tricolor and American flags, and similiar decorations are to be displayed along the line of the parade.

The Odeon address, at 2 p. m. Saturday, will be the only one which "the Tiger" will make. Every seat in the Odeon will be reserved, and the general charge for admission will be $1. The proceeds, above expenses, will be turned over to Clemenceau for the benefit of French war orphans.

Tickets for the Odeon address will be placed on sale at 9 a. m. Tuesday on the fifth floor of the Chamber of Commerce Building.

Loud speakers will be installed by the Bell Telephone Co., to make the address heard distinctly in all parts of the auditorium. The committee will be on the stage. Edward M. House, who is expected to accompany Clemenceau on his visit here, has stipulated that there shall be no handshaking on Clemenceau's part after the speech, as this tires him more than speaking.

STAND AGAINST SECRET TREATIES IN NEAR EAST MADE BY U. S.

must therefore be prepared to deal with the question to be raised later by whatever special rights in Turkey any Power may have under the peace treaty that is being negotiated. Ambassador Child was seeking to make this plain in his statement to the conferees today.

Safe Guarding of Christians.

The United States has specifically disclaimed any desire for special treatment in the Near East. On the contrary, the chief desire of the Washington Government in connection with the Lausanne proceedings is known to be that the Christian countries should stand united to maintain in substance the capitulations in Turkey which safeguard the Nationals of Christian states who might otherwise be subject to Moslem laws and customs.

But the possibility must be faced by the American observers that other states which enjoy or seek to obtain special commercial considerations in Turkish territory might be willing to forego certain of their rights under the capitulations in lieu of commercial concessions which could be of no value to American nationals. Such action, ratified by the forthcoming Lausanne treaty to which the United States will not be a signatory, would render the subsequent negotiation of a satisfactory treaty of amity with Turkey more difficult for the Washington Government.

That the United States would be willing to surrender any of the rather narrow rights its nationals have in Turkey under treaty or the wider exemptions they enjoy under the capitulations through "most favored nation" status, or at least until there has been in fact a complete reform and revision of the Turkish judicial system, is highly improbable. There can be no question, however, that Ambassador Child, in stressing the open door attitude of his Government, was looking ahead to conference discussion of the capitulations and other problems and the effect the boundary settlement are apt to have on those matters.

Problems to Be Taken Up.

The Turkish frontiers in Asia Minor and general economic, financial problems will be taken up by the Near East conference beginning Monday. Thus the conference is getting closer to affairs of more vital importance to Europe and the United States than the Thracian tangle.

Nothing has been definitely decided upon during the week's debate on Thrace, yet the trend of the discussion is interpreted by the delegates as indicating that the conference will not approve of the plebiscite in Western Thrace demanded by Turkey.

Lord Curzon made the point that Turkey was not within her rights in asking for a Western Thrace plebiscite, and warned the Ottoman Government that others might demand a plebiscite in certain parts of territories now claimed to be Turkish. "How would they appreciate a plebiscite in Constantinople?" he asked.

A "Double-Edged Weapon."

The Wilsonian plebiscite idea, Lord Curzon continued, was a double-edged weapon.

M. Ninchitch, Foreign Minister of Jugo-Slavia, delivered a striking address on the necessity of bringing permanent peace in the Balkans by establishing definite sovereignties in disputed points without fanciful arrangements calculated to disturb peace anew.

Child's Declaration in Accord With Government's Attitude.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Ambassador Child's exposition at the Lausanne Conference today of the American open door policy as applying to Turkey accords with the position consistently maintained by the Washington government.

While official comment was lacking, pending formal advices there is warrant for the statement that Mr. Child's presentation has the full approval of the Government.

It is noted here that in addition to reading the brief expression of the open door policy contained in the recent American memorandum to the allied powers, Child declared it to be the American conception that universal adherence to that policy would go far toward promoting world peace. In so doing, the ambassador stated, it can be said on authority, the thought that has been uppermost in the minds of Government officials here in their approach to the Mesopotamia oil question is the adjustment of far Eastern problems, at the Washington conference, and similar diplomatic exchanges.

It was largely that feeling which dictated to the reference by Secretary Hughes in his memorandum the allies on the Near Eastern crisis, to the tri-partite agreement of 1920 as typical of secret treaties and agreements prescribing, "zones of special commercial and economic influence" which are held by the United States to be not "consonant with the principle of the equality of economic opportunity."

CLEMENCEAU SAYS FRANCE FEARS RUSSIAN-TURK-GERMAN ALLIANCE IF SHE DISARMS

Former Premier Answers Critics; Suggests America Arbitrate and Guarantee Peace.

By FERDINAND TUOHY,
Of the Paris Bureau of the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.

BOSTON, Nov. 25.—Georges Clemenceau summoned me to the Higginson home on Commonwealth avenue here in order to reply to the criticisms of his mission and message as enunciated in the Senate, principally by Senators Hitchcock and Borah. I would preface the succeeding interview by two points.

First, Clemenceau is mighty glad that his plain suggestioning has provoked wide discussion. He is too good a publicist not to know that there are definite steps in the formation and crystallization of nationwide opinion.

Secondly, Georges Clemenceau's detractors should generously remember that they are assailing an old man whose continuity of thought and expression is no longer what it was and who is all too apt to get carried away into vague currents by his utterly sincere fear that France may have to go through what she has just survived.

"Not Wisely Shepherded."

The fact of his talking in a foreign tongue alone saps up a quantity of mental effort that otherwise would be employed in more forceful argument. Add to this a sorry lack of wise shepherding of the old man. He is permitted to stumble up steps of capitol height, to talk on endlessly here, there and everywhere; to get jostled and bothered by all and sundry. And if he comes through it all without a breakdown he is a wonder. Unfortunately his speeches lose considerably by the pace set.

"They are saying at Washington," began the Tiger, "that I am a militarist, that I want to get America to ratify the treaty, that I have no plan but to get her back into Europe—American guns and American money—and with the object of compelling Germany to execute the treaty. How they misrepresent me! How they would laugh back in France if they heard me called a militarist! Let Senator Hitchcock go there and hear for himself.

"All my life I have been against colonial expeditions, and in the peace-making I was attacked by my own people for being too lenient. And look how I have suffered for being too friendly with England, the traditional enemy, as Lloyd George once told me, of France."

"But," I broke in, "What they want from you is a plan."

"I did not come here," replied Clemenceau, "to tell Americans the circumstances under which they should re-enter Europe. That would be ungracious. I absolutely agree that the general European policy must be changed to the profit of the liberated peoples, including democratic Germany when she has owned up to her fault and done her utmost to atone for it.

Asks American Intervention.

"My motto is, let the past bury the past. I don't ask America to ratify anything. All I ask is that she shall intervene in the present situation because that is her duty to do in her own interest as well as in that of others."

"M. Clemenceau," I again interrupted, "Americans are asking you one or two concrete questions. First, why does France continue to keep black troops on the Rhine?"

"I can officially say that no African negroes remain in Germany," he replied. "There remain Arabs and Algerians, and they behave as whites. It is a lie to say that they outrage German women. One sergeant only has been convicted. Our garrisons in the south of France are filled with Algerian troops and our people don't object to their presence."

I pointed out that nevertheless a most valuable gesture would be for France to withdraw even her Algerians.

The Tiger shrugged his shoulders, saying that was for the home Government and entirely outside his mission.

"I have come here to present a general orientation of things, not to indulge in precise details," he said. "I came to try to appeal to the heart as a half way house to the conscience that England, France and America may not fall further apart through foolish, untrue words when the three peoples actually remain as closely knit as in the war."

I read Senator Hitchcock's free quotation of ex-Premier Nitti, bitterly assailing Clemenceau. The Tiger became a real tiger.

"I have a pretty extensive vocabulary (we were talking French), but I do not wish to employ the words I should like to in regard to Nitti," he barked.

"He is, and always has been an enemy of France and a friend of Germany. So, he, too, calls me a militarist? Why, you know well that all the real militarists in Paris do nothing but heap abuse upon me."

"Foch, Poincare and the rest?" I asked.

Condition of Disarmament.

"I mention no name," and the Tiger, now thoroughly alight, went on to give his real message to America: If America and England will just say the word that they will not allow France to be again attacked—they have only to say the word for they will not be called upon to fight—then France will set about at once a radical disarmament. Without that word France cannot disarm before even the possibility of a Lenin-Ludendorff-Kemal grouping at some future date. The word could be given conditionally. The first thing the Tiger wants America to do is to send a commission over to Europe to study the whole business on the spot and then make proposals setting forth the conditions under which America might agree to be arbiter and guarantor of European peace.

Clemenceau gave me clearly to understand that he has abandoned hope of the Germans ever paying what stands against their name. But he does want America officially to take cognizance of France's devastated regions and to take an interest in a practical scheme for their reconstruction.

He is insistent, too, that the guarantee of safety to France would automatically imply a similar guarantee to Germany, which is tantamount to saying that in giving the guarantee America would be crushing such French Chauvinism as still exists.

I told Clemenceau that Americans were curious to know what would have been expected of the United States had it remained in Europe after 1919.

The Tiger had a simple reply. America had only just to stay on and all manner of things that have since occurred would not have taken place. Wtihout a doubt Clemenceau has a supreme belief in the moral prestige of this country abroad.

Clemenceau concluded by saying that the kind of thing he desired to see was an intervention of America at such a conference as Lausanne, instead of just having an observer there. Turkey would be infinitely less troublesome and the looming anti-allies alliance retarded if the United States attended in an executive capacity. Clemenceau could not understand how Americans feel so keenly on the Turkish question and yet do nothing to influence it.

BRITISH DENY PERMITTING THE SINKING OF SHIPS

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—The British embassy in a formal statement today took exception to the recent declaration of former Premier Clemenceau of France, that Great Britain had "secured a guarantee" of national safety by letting the surrendered German fleet sink in Scapa Flow.

The statement said that the embassy had been authorized by the British Government to deny any implication that the British authorities had wilfully permitted the sinking of the German warships which were sent to the bottom by their German crews.

The statement follows:

"M. Clemenceau is reported in the press as having stated in a speech made by him on Nov. 21, at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, that Great Britain let it (the German fleet) go to the bottom of Scapa Flow and thus secured her guarantee.

"The British embassy is authorized to declare that any suggestion that the British Government wilfully allowed the German fleet to be sunk at Scapa Flow is not only untrue, but without any possible foundation in fact.

"By the terms of the armistice, in the negotiations for which France was one of the principals, the British authorities were not permitted to place any guard on board the German vessels and they were therefore unable to take any measures to prevent the German crews opening the sea cocks. The British authorities, powers were confined to insuring that the fleet did not steam out to sea or open fire.

"A statement in the above terms was issued by the British Government on June 21, 1919, a few hours after the German fleet had been sunk."

Denies He Charged British Wilfully Permitted Sinkings.

By the Associated Press.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 25.—Commenting on the British Embassy's statement concerning the sinking of the German fleet at Scapa Flow, Georges Clemenceau said tonight that he had not charged Great Britain with "willfully" permitting the warships to be sunk.

"The German ships were turned over to the control of the British and the German crews sank them," he said.

He declined to amplify further the statement he made in his Metropolitan Opera House address.

BIG GUNS OPEN IN HOUSE FIGHT OVER SHIPPING BILL

Opponents, After Three Days of Debate, Ready to Turn Loose Flood of Amendments Monday.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—The big guns on both sides were turned loose in the House battle today over the administration shipping bill.

When general debate, which had run for three full days, ended tonight, opponents of the measure were ready for the attempt to be made Monday to rake it fore and aft with amendments, while those who have urged its passage expressed belief that their forces could be held together to put it through, substantially as framed.

Meanwhile, absent members were urged to return. The assurance given the President last night by Representative Mondell, Republican leader, that there were votes enough to pass it, put the opposition to work with renewed vigor. Both factions figured closely on the probable vote to be cast Wednesday for and against the bill, opponents asserting that unless the administration was able to line up and count all its absentees it might be beaten. Telegrams came today from many absentees, seeking pairs.

The first real test of strength will be developed Monday when the House is called upon to vote on amendments, some of which seek to strike out vital provisions of the bill.

Principal Assault by Hardy.

As ranking Democrat of the Merchant Marine Committee, by which the bill was drafted, Representative Hardy of Texas made the principal assault on it today in a two-hour speech.

He was joined by Representatives Frear, Republican, Wisconsin; Representative Garrett, Tennessee, the Democratic leader, and others, while Representative Mondell went to the front with many Republicans in its defense. An assertion by Hardy that "there is not a paragraph in the bill that was not framed by the steamship owners," was denied by Representative Edmonds, Pennsylvania, ranking Republican of the Merchant Marine Committee, who declared he personally had written many of the provisions and that they were not put there at the behest of outside influences. In breaking into the wrangle, Representative John M. Nelson, Republican, Wisconsin, said he had received information that virtually every "demand" of the shipping interests had been incorporated.

Hardy charged that under the legislation proposed by the committee the Standard Oil Co. "will receive money from the Government for transporting its own products in its own tankers so it can sell oil costing 50 cents a barrel in Texas for $7 in Shanghai."

The end of the debate, Mondell declared, "found the opponents of the bill floundering and without a single definite constructive suggestion made or offered." The position of those opposing the measure, he said, "must be somewhat embarrassed in view of the fact that their attitude is exactly that which best pleases our foreign shipping rivals."

Declaring that the administration was called to authority by the American people with an emphatic mandate to carry out a constructive policy, Mondell told the House it must take an obstructive or reactionary attitude or move forward along constructive lines as the people expect.

Garrett today took sharp issue with the Republican argument that a proposal to compensate the Merchant Marine was in any way parallel to Government activities in road building, irrigating Western lands or making grants to railroads.

"If when I voted cheerfully for Western irrigation projects I was voting for a subsidy, the Western gentleman certainly put something over on me," he said, turning to Mondell.

"For Benefit of All."

"Those projects were for the benefit of all, not for a few."

Speaking as a Republican in opposition to the bill, Representative Tincher of Kansas said that if statements as to benefits to Standard Oil and Steel Corporation and United Fruit Co. were not true, they ought to be denied.

The benefit to the whole people under the shipping bill would be greater than Mississippi Valley appropriations granted by Congress, "and there was no subsidy there," said Representative Husted, Republican, New York. Pleading for ocean transportation, Representative Free, Republican, California, declared California producers had lost from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 this season because of lack of transportation on land and sea.

Testimony for State at Hohenschild Trial

outside of Meininger, Schneider, Kingston or yourself, who ever saw those statements you prepared for the directors."

Others Who Saw Reports.

"Mr. Hines saw them. So did the stenographer who typed them." He was not asked who Mr. Hines was.

"Mention some of the names you listed on the statement for Hohenschild and Meininger that were not on the statement you prepared for the directors."

"I can't give the names, but I can give the approximate figures."

"I don't want figures. I can't subpena figures, but I can subpena persons, so mention the names of some of the persons."

"I can't do it."

"Is your memory poor?"

"Ask Hohenschild."

"Well, I want you to tell me how you know, of your own knowledge, that the statements for directors went to the directors."

"Because after a directors' meeting, when I began making the two sets of reports, at Meininger's direction, Hohenschild came to me, with the report I had made for the directors and the one I had made for him and Meininger, and called my attention to the difference between the two reports. He asked me 'How come?' and I told him that was some of Meininger's doings."

"Is that all that was said?"

"Yes, Hohenschild never mentioned it to me after that."

Cullen asked Rolwes if the statements prepared for the directors were not merely memoranda of notes that required immediate attention of the directors, and if the preparation of those statements was not simply part of the routine work of the bank.

Why Reports Were Prepared.

"No, they were prepared for the purpose of deceiving the directors," Rolwes replied. "They did not include notes that Meininger had eliminated from my correct statement, and which he did not want the directors to see."

Rolwes testified that his copy of the December, 1921, statement, prepared for Hohenschild and Meininger, was in his cage the morning of Jan. 4, last, when the State Bank Examiners arrived, but that at midnight Jan. 5, when he went to the bank after Schneider's report had disclosed the $754,000 shortage, the copy was missing. He said he did not know what had become of it.

"You do know as a matter of fact," said Cullen, "that in December, 1920, Virgil Wall, who was in charge of the State Bank Examiners who went over the Night and Day Bank's accounts at that time, passed the bank as O. K at that time."

"I presume his report was favorable to the bank," replied the witness.

The directors of the Night and Day Bank, who are under indictment on charges similar to that against Hohenschild, are former Gov. E. W. Major, Judge W. H. Allen of the St. Louis Court of Appeals, P. A. McDermott, T. L. Mauldin and F. J. Cornwell Jr.

Cullen resumed cross-questioning of Teller Kingston at the beginning of yesterday's session. He asked about the bank's personnel, arrangements and methods. Kingston said there were 40 employes in all, of whom eight were tellers receiving and paying money, and two were other tellers. Some days there would be nearly 5000 depositors. Hohenschild and Cashier Meininger had their offices near together, about 20 feet from the tellers, "but Hohenschild was all over the place," the witness added. This remark brought a sharp reproof from Cullen, who said, "I didn't ask you that."

Customs of the Bank.

The banking hours, Kingston testified, were 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. for the public, but the official day's business was done between 9 and 2, and business after 2 p. m. went on the books as of the next day.

The tellers, at the end of business at 9 p. m., took the funds received since 2 p. m., and placed them in their individual lockers, with combinations known only to the individual tellers. The deposit slips were placed in a common pile, the deposits to be recorded on the books the following day.

This was the custom of the bank, he said, and this custom was followed on Jan. 5, the last day the bank was open. Cullen asked the witness what was done with the money next day, and he replied that the bank did not open on that day. He was asked whether Hohenschild, or any director had anything to do with that money. He said Hohenschild did not appear at the bank the next morning, and that the money was taken in charge by the bank examiners. It had not been placed on the books, he said, and was not disbursed.

Objection by Prosecution.

The effect of this testimony, as intended by Attorney Cullen, would be to show that the money deposited after 2 p. m. Jan. 5 was not legally received, and did not come under the control of Hohenschild as head of the bank. Objections to Cullen's questions, along this line, were made by the Circuit Attorney, and were overruled by the court.

Kingston said he was not friendly with Schneider except in a business way. He admitted having discussed the failure of the bank and the Hohenschild case with Schneider, but denied having said to Schneider that he was "sore" at Hohenschild because he had not obtained an increase in salary.

He said he was not an intimate friend of Meininger. He added that he considered Meininger as his superior, and did as he directed. The court sustained an objection made when Kingston was asked if he was testifying "in the same way."

Said He Went to Sidener.

Cullen asked if he and Schneider ever talked about the bank's failure while helping the examiners. Kingston said they did not. He was asked if Circuit Attorney Sidener had him reinstated after he was discharged by one of the examiners. He denied this, but admitted that he went to Sidener and told him about it.

Cullen started to read a published statement of Cashier A. O. Meininger that the directors and Hohenschild were not responsible. Sidener objected, but Cullen was permitted to read the statement in full. Kingston denied that he had read it or discussed it.

The Circuit Attorney then resumed the direct examination. Kingston was asked if he knew about a check of the Warren Castings Co. in the account of 1920. Cullen's objection to the question was overruled, when Sidener pointed out that the defense had opened the way for inquiring that far back, by going into certain 1920 accounts.

Not Allowed to Describe Check.

"Yes, there was a payroll check of the Warren Castings Co., for a large amount, among my cash items in 1920," Kingston replied.

He said the check was discovered by George W. Hobbs, then a State Bank Examiner, who took it up with the bank directors. He was not allowed to describe the check, it being held that a written instrument is the best evidence.

Kingston testified that while a deposit made after 2 p. m. would be posted on the bank's books as of the next day's business, in accordance with the hours of the Clearing House, yet the credit would go on the customer's own book as of the day the deposit was made. The State desired to bring this out as meeting the technical point indicated by the defense.

Ross Recalled.

Deputy State Finance Commissioner Ross, who was in charge of the liquidation of the bank, and who was the first witness for the prosecution, was recalled to tell more as to how the bank was closed.

Ross told of asking for Cashier Meininger the first day he was at the bank, Jan. 4, and being told by Hohenschild that Meininger was ill. He said he complained to Hohenschild after several hours that he had been unable to obtain a general statement of the bank's condition. He said he had not sealed the whole vault of the bank, but only those safes inside it the contents of which he and his assistants had checked, one of these being the loan and discount safe.

He said that when he left about 5 p. m. Jan. 4 the bank had $70,000 cash and $30,000 in cash items, and that when he left on Jan. 6 the bank had $85,000 cash. The effect of this was to show that $15,000 was taken in on the evening of Jan. 4 and on the 5th.

Depositor Testifies.

Harry Cook, manager of the Business Men's Gymnasium, 616 Washington avenue, the depositor who appears as complainant in this case, was called, and testified that, between 6 and 7 p. m., Jan. 5, he deposited $410, of which $140 was cash and the remainder checks, in the Night and Day Bank. In reply to Cullen's questions, he said he did not know Hohenschild, did not see him at the time he made the deposit, and dealt with one of the bank's employes.

Two witnesses were introduced to show Hohenschild's acquaintance with the bank's affairs. John B. Sweeney of 4811 Leduc street, paying and receiving teller, testified that in October, 1921, his accounts were found $500 short, and that Meininger directed him to report to Hohenschild. He said an examination was made under Hohenschild's direction, to discover the basis of the shortage or error, but that it was not found. He said he was under bond, and that the matter was handled with the bonding company.

Asked About Katz Check.

Joseph Becht of 5236 Cote Brilliante avenue, paying and receiving teller, testified that he went to Hohenschild in July, 1921, about checks of Meyer Katz for $16,500 which had been returned from the Clearing House with the notation of insufficient funds.

He testified that Hohenschild said, "We'd better pay these; I think Meininger has something for Katz." Meininger was absent that day. The witness said he paid the checks, and carried them as "cash items."

Cullen asked him whether Hohenschild had not said, "Katz is negotiating a loan," but he did not remember such a remark. The attorney asked if Katz did not borrow various sums, which he recited from a list, and if these were not loans approved by the board of directors. The sums made a total of $13,000. The witness said he did not know about this. He said he went to Hohenschild about small checks which came back to the bank, and that these were handled as matters of routine business.

Bank Examiner Testifies.

Roy Niemann of 3846 Botanical avenue, a State bank examiner, gave testimony which in the main repeated that previously given by Deputy Finance Commissioner Ross. He told of the attempt to get a cash statement at the bank Jan. 4. He said that his figuring on the night of Jan. 5 showed about $104,000 cash and cash items, when the books indicated that there should be $[illegible],620.02.

On cross-examination, Cullen asked Niemann, since he needed a daily statement for his guidance, if the officers of the bank did not equally need such a statement. He said they did, but that it was the duty of the officers to verify the statement. Cullen asked him if he meant that the officers should go through all the tellers' cages and check up all the accounts. Niemann repeated that it was their duty to verify the statement.

SEEKS MORE DETAILS OF FORD'S BOND PLAN

Acting-Mayor Aloe Would Learn How City May Eliminate Interest.

An inquiry of Henry Ford for more details of his suggestion that the city of St. Louis "beat the money brokers" by eliminating interest on the $88,000,000 of bonds proposed for issuance, has been made by letter by Acting-Mayor Aloe.

Ford's suggestion was made to a staff correspondent of the Post-Dispatch, who visited him in Detroit and reported a talk with him in this newspaper last Sunday.

"I take from the author's comment with reference to your idea," Aloe's letter says, "that this amount of bonded indebtedness could be issued in small denominations whereby the loyal St. Louisans could purchase them, they in turn to be returned in the form of taxes and thereby defeat the bankers and brokers of the commission and interest on the issue.

"I am interested in the thought and I as writing you to know if you will send me more thorough details of your proposition whereby municipalities might issue bonds and avoid the interest and brokerage charge."

TRADES COUNCIL SENDS FORD COPY OF BUILDING AGREEMENT

As incentive for Henry Ford to proceed to build a new assembly and distribution plant in St. Louis, as he has indicated his intention, the Building Trades Council has sent to Ford a copy of an agreement between the council and builders recently quite commonly used in St. Louis, wherein, in exchange for the employment of union labor, the council agrees that the work shall proceed to completion without interruption from labor troubles.

The council declares that this agreement has resulted in the completion of many projects before the date set at a saving to the builder. It proposes to Ford that he enter into such an agreement for any plant he may construct here, declaring that "the work will be done with speed so that the plant will be ready at the earliest possible moment and all of the work will be performed in a first-class manner."

Hoffman Estate Worth $15,000.

August H. Hoffman, 72 years old, president of the Northwestern Trust Co., who died at his home, 1452 Sullivan avenue, Nov. 15, left property valued at $15,000, according to a statement made yesterday by his nephew, August Tietjen, to whom were granted letters of administration. No will was found. Hoffman's heirs are his sister, Mrs. Anna Klein, and Tietjen.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 25.—Coach O'Rourke's St. Louis University eleven scored a decisive victory over Loyola University here today, score, 28 to 0. The Billikens played practically the entire game in Loyola's territory, and never had to fear about their own goal line for the closest the local team ever got was the 30-yard mark.

Loyola was not able to withstand the offensive attack of Hannegan, McConachie and Capt. Eggler, who ripped off end runs and delayed bucks that kept Loyola thoroughly bewildered. There were times during the game when Lolola's defense stiffened and twice they held when their backs were to the wall, forcing the visitors to either dropkick or try to score by passing.

St. Louis out-rushed Loyola, making 12 first downs against five. The Billikens were penalized 55 yards against Loyola's five. Captain White's kicking for Loyola kept the score from being much higher. He had the better of the punting with Hannegan, averaging better than 40 yards. If it had not been for White's good toe work, St. Louis would not have had any trouble, for time and again he managed to kick out of danger.

Hannegan Star of Game.

St. Louis did not resort to the open game much, but executed several good passes, one from Hannegan to Schaeffering for 30 yards, and another from O'Leary to Hannegan. Hannegan pulled it out of the air with one hand when it looked like Loyola was sure to block it.

The star of the game turned up in Hannegan. He seemed unable to stop when he skirted the ends and was responsible for two of the visitors' touchdowns. McKenzie's end run for 20 yards accounted for the first score. O'Leary scored in the third by picking up a fumble and dashing 30 yards.

Fumbling counted strongly against Loyola. Just when it seemed that they were about to make a march, either a bad pass from the center or a fumble by one of the backs, spoiled their chances.

Smythe's Brilliant Work Turns Tide in Favor of Soldier Team In Bitterly Contested Battle

Backfield Star Displays Uncanny Ability at Wending His Way Through Midshipmen's Downfield Tacklers — Outcome in Doubt Until the Final Whistle.

By Lawrence Perry.
(Copyright, 1922.)

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 25.—Army 17, Navy 14.

Thus stood the score at Franklin Field when Edward Thorp, the referee, blew his whistle, bringing to an end one of the most bitterly contested and generally thrilling football games ever played. Each team made two touchdowns. The Army's winning margin was a beautiful goal from placement, kicked by Garbisch, in the second period.

There was never a minute from the first to the last when the issue of this contest was not a matter of doubt. It was the lot of both elevens to fight through from behind and take the lead in the course of the struggle. Partisans of both teams were thus alternately lifted to the pinnacle of enthusiasm and dropped into the slough of despond. But in the end, when the players were mere vague figures on the gridiron, when the stands were huge blurs, punctuated by the flaring matches of spectators lighting cigaretts, it was the Army that emerged supreme.

Four years had the Cadets and their partisans awaited this triumph and in the gloom of the late November afternoon they made the most of their opportunity. Smythe, the gifted Army back field man, was the hero of the day. Throughout the afternoon he rampaged like a berserker and is was his stirring work in running back Navy punts which placed the Army in position for all of their scores.

Smythe Turned the Tide.

As the writer had predicted before the game, the Navy showed superiority in advancing the ball from scrimmage but Smythe, it was, who overturned all preliminary calculations by his uncanny ability to wend his way through the Navy's downfield tacklers.

Even granting that downfield play was the weakest part of the midshipmen's game, yet it would be foolish to assert that Smythe's speed and dodging were not the main elements in his success in converting Navy punts into boomerangs.

Contrary to general expectations the Army line did not outplay the Navy forwards. In fact, it was quite the other way. And as a ball-advancing combination the Navy quartet was more resourceful, versatile and proficient. But the Army had Smythe and he sufficed.

Holes Ripped in Army Line.

In the first quarter the Navy opened up a fine attack right at the outset, advancing the ball 80 yards by one forward pass and dashes off tackle. But Navy yielded the ball on the Army's 30-yard line—having advanced it from her own 20-yard mark—when she was forced to attempt a placement kick from scrimmage. It was the best sequential advance of the day and showed up weaknesses in the Army line that were not repaired until the beginning of the second half.

The Navy was the first to score. This came soon after the second quarter opened. The Navy had put the ball in play on the Army's 32-yard line, second down. A beautiful forward pass, McKee to Barchet, took the ball to the 10-yard line where, on the next play, McKee went between end and tackle for a touchdown.

Not long after this Smythe of the Army took a hand in the game. He caught a punt of Cullen's and ran it to the Navy's 30-yard mark where, after three plunges had failed, Garbisch went back to the 40-yard line and kicked a fine goal from placement.

The half ended with Navy leading, 7 to 3. But early in the third quar-

DARTMOUTH HUMBLES OLD RIVAL, BROWN, 7-0

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Nov. 25.—Dartmouth today humbled its ancient rival, Brown, before 30,000 football fans at Fenway Park here, 7 to 0. The Brown team, fresh from its conquest of Harvard last Saturday, had ruled a favorite and the Green was without the services of her star tackle, Neidlinger, for all but a few minutes of the last period.

Notre Dame to Play St. Louis U. in 1923 On Thanksgiving Day

KNUTE ROCKNE'S Notre Dame University football eleven will be the Thanksgiving Day attraction at Sportsman's Park in 1923, opposing the St. Louis University team, it was learned yesterday. In order to book the attraction it was necessary for St. Louis University to set a new record in the line of guarantees. As the Missouri University team was paid $5000 for its game here this season it is understood that the amount guaranteed Notre Dame was between that figure and $10,000.

St. Louis U. was offered an early October date on Rockne's schedule, but feared that the Browns might want to use their park next October and asked for a Thanksgiving date. The University officials decided that as the Missouri game here drew more than $10,000 they could safely meet Notre Dame's guarantee for the Thanksgiving date.

This Thanksgiving day the Billikens will oppose the Michigan Aggies.

Kirkwood Wins Over Country Day

Brilliant Passing Game Fails to Turn Tide — Score 20 to 0.

Kirkwood High School football team, which has gone through the entire season without defeat and without having been scored upon by an opponent, yesterday defeated Country Day School at Francis Field by a score of 20 to 0.

Startling multiple passes, employed by Country Day in the closing minutes of play formed one of the pleasing features of the game. Four successive passes, all successful, literally bewildered the Kirkwood defense, but the time was short and the brilliant aerial offensive futile.

Brown, Williamson and Schwentker scored touchdowns for Kirkwood, all on line plunges. Brown twice kicked goal and failed on one attempt.

Coach Bernard's Kirkwood team plays its final and most important game of the season Thursday when it meets Webster.

Owen's 58-Yard Run Leads to Touchdown; 77,000 See Struggle

Crimson Halfback Eludes Tacklers Until He Reaches Four-Yard Line—Brilliant Defensive Work Checks Advances of Old Eli.

By Heywood Broun.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 25.—Harvard beat Yale. The score was 10 to 3. This gives Harvard the championship of Cambridge and New Haven, which seems to be the title valued above all by the two teams which met today in the Yale bowl before 77,000 persons, including Georges Clemenceau, of Paris, France.

Yale was more powerful and Harvard was a little smarter. The cleverest device of the afternoon was completed by Yale, but it came between the halves when a cheer leader signaled four times with a pistol and led the rooters into the formation of a huge "Yale," with Blue and White handkerchiefs. That was ingenious and admirable, but not quite the shrewdest use to which the pistol might have been put. The Yale cheer leader should have given it to Jordan just before the game began and instructed him to shoot George Owen.

Harvard could not have won without its stocky halfback. In the first period he ran 58 yards to Yale's 4-yard line and made a touchdown possible. It was a thrilling farewell afternoon for the Harvard hero. His play this season has not been up to his last year's standard. Experts have said that he was slowing up and have explained it on the ground of a bad knee. This was Owen's last game and, he reflected, his knee becomes private property and does not matter so much. It held up long enough for Harvard to win.

Eye to Eye They Stand.

The run came in the first period. O'Hearn punted for Yale, a little past midfield. Gehrke was blocking off a Yale end and as he did so the ball struck him and caromed offf into the arms of Owen. The Harvard back was able, therefore to begin his run from an unexpected angle. For the first 20 yards or so his path was clear. He sidestepped a couple of tacklers at this point and then came face to face with Charley O'Hearn. The two players went to prep school together and long have been athletic rivals.

A curious duel took place between them this afternoon. Owen neither attempted to evade nor to straight-arm O'Hearn. Instead, he came to a dead halt for the space of a half second and looked at the Yale quarterback. There seemed to be something embarrassing to O'Hearn in that short, fierce stare. It made the Yale player self-conscious. The tactics of the runner puzzled him and instead of diving for his man, O'Hearn just stared back. Suddenly Owen started again, with a quick turn toward the sidelines on his left. His mind and his legs worked quicker than those of O'Hearn, although the latter is much the faster man, and Owen swept by him.

But the eye to eye business, brief as it was, served to give some of the Yale pursuers a chance to catch up. Hulman flung himself around Owen's neck just as the Crimson runner reached the five-yard line. The Harvard back managed to go two yards farther and then the impact forced him out of bounds.

Three plays were required to take the ball the rest of the distance. Gehrke made two yards on the first plunge and then Owen jammed through for a foot and a half. It looked from the stands as if this were the touchdown, but when the officials picked the men off the pile where they lay like jumbled jackstraws, it was found that there was still a foot to go.

Before the teams could line up again a little bald headed man came running out from the Harvard sideline. Capt. Buell was back in the game. His team had begun without him because it was feared that he could not possibly last through the game. Harvard wanted him to be in when it counted.

Yale Scents Trick When Buell Goes In But Winning Play Is Simple One

The entrance of Buell bothered Yale a good deal. They feared that it meant something tricky. Indeed, one of the Harvard ends edged out as if a pass might be among the possibilities. But the play was simple enough. Owen took the ball on a plunge, leaping ahead like a man intent on catching a Bronx express. The big Yale center trio tried to close the gates on him, but could not. This time the whole pile of players lay over the goal line, and so did the ball. It was a touchdown with a foot to spare. Owen then proceeded to kick the goal, making the score Harvard 7 and Yale 0.

Owen did not get loose thereafter for any thrilling runs, but again and again it was Owen who brought down a Yale runner when he seemed about to get loose for a decisive gain. Few of Harvard's heroes have played a more useful game than Owen did today. As a matter of fact utility was the most conspicuous quality in the Harvard team this afternoon. Distinctly, it was not a great team. It gained very little ground by straight rushing and there were times when the Yale backs swept through at will. But Harvard was always good enough when it had to be. It is interesting to note that in the entire first half the Harvard eleven made its distance just once and then it needed only four yards. But it was a hard four yards, for there was the goal line to make.

Yale's Big Opportunity.

Yale had a fine chance to tie the score in the second period. Two chances, in fact. On the kickoff following the touchdown, Hammond of Harvard fumbled and Hulman of Yale recovered on the Crimson's 33-yard line. Yale began an attack which was diverse and powerful. It slashed and dashed ahead until it was first down, and the ball lay on Harvard's 10-yard mark. Two rushes netted five yards.

Here was the vital play. Yale huddled and decided on a double pass. The deception did not work. George Owen tore in upon Mallory, the runner, and threw him for no gain. Now it was fourth down and there was still five yards to go. Here was another knotty problem for the Yale tacticians. They decided to play safe and take three points with an easy drop kick. But Charley O'Hearn missed the kick.

There was still punch in the Yale attack and another advance went deep into Harvard's territory. Again Harvard stiffened in time and again. Yale decided upon a conservative policy. O'Hearn dropped back to the 21-yard mark and made his field goal. The first half ended with Harvard leading, 7 to 3.

But yet even at this point it still seemed as if Yale were likely to win, for its potential power appeared to be much greater than that of Harvard. Neverthiss, Harvard lengthened its lead in the second half. At no time was Havard's efficiency more apparent. There was a flash of attacking power late in the third quarter and Harvard bit into Yale territory. Then a fumble stopped the advance. Instantly a substitute rushed out from the Harvard side. It was Pfaffman, a lean youth substitute quarterback. He stood on Yale's 38-yard line. It

Iowa and Michigan Finish Season Unbeaten, in Tie for Big Ten Championship

Chicago's Claims Nullified by Tie Game With Wisconsin—Ohio State, With Only One Victory, Has Lowest Ranking in Several Years.

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—The University of Iowa, Western Conference football champion of 1921, closed its 1922 season today undefeated, with the additional glory of a victory over Yale. The Iowans were tied for the honor of being undefeated in the Big Ten race by Michigan.

Chicago was eliminated from the triple tie today when Wisconsin held the Maroons to a scoreless tie. Wisconsin ranks fourth in the conference standing, the Badgers having been beaten by Illinois and Michigan.

The rest of the teams rank in this order: Minnesota, Illinois, Northwestern, Ohio State, Indiana and Purdue.

It is Ohio State's lowest ranking in many years, the Buckeyes' victory over Illinois today being their only conference triumph this season. Purdue kept Indiana in the column of unbroken defeats today by a 7 to 7 tie. Northwestern's only victory was over Purdue, but Northwestern held Minnesota to an early season tie, 7 to 7, by virtue of "Chuck" Palmer's 100-yard run for a touchdown.

Wisconsin Line Turns Back Chicago Plunges in 0-0 Game.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—Wisconsin's fighting eleven, beaten 2 to 0 three weeks ago by Illinois, closed like a vise on Chicago's famous line-smashing backfield here today and battled the Maroons to a scoreless tie before a capacity crowd of 32,000 persons.

The result was a distinct upset. Today's tie marked the Maroons' first failure to win in a conference game this season.

Uncovering a brilliant running and plunging offensive, the Badgers were superior in ground-gaining ability throughout the first three periods. Costly fumbles twice undid sensational gains by Williams, Taft and Harris. Two 15-yard penalties also prevented a possible Wisconsin victory when the Badgers were within striking distance of the goal.

Battering Ram Stopped.

Chicago's famous battering ram, headed by Zorn and the Thomas brothers, wore itself out in fruitless attempts to pierce the Cardinal line. Williams, Wisconsin's left halfback, and Taft, fullback, frequently found holes in the Maroon line for long gains, and Wisconsin's end running plays worked well. The Badger punts, dispatched by Taft, often went over the heads of the Chicago safety men.

Three attempts to score by drop kicks failed. Barr, Wisconsin quarterback, tried once in each of the first two periods. Both attempts were from the 18-yard line. The first was wide by a few yards, and the second, a beautiful try from near the [illegible] lines, was low. Chicago's attempted field goal in the fourth quarter was blocked when Pyott, standing on the 40-yard line, kicked low.

Stagg's Trump Card.

In the last quarter Coach Stagg played his trump card and sent in Johnny Thomas, his great plunging fullback, to replace Zorn. Thomas had little luck with the Wisconsin line, however, the Badgers smothering him before he could get started. Pulaski, Wisconsin end, electrified the crowd in the second quarter with a 30-yard run that threatened a touchdown. He was stopped when he crossed at the side lines.

In the second half Pyott threatened for a moment with a 20-yard dash through the line, but was stopped by the Badger secondary defense.

In desperation, the Maroons hurled passes to all corners of the field in the closing minutes, but without avail.

Iowa Rolls Up 37 to 3 Count on Northwestern.

By the Associated Press.

IOWA CITY, Ia., Nov. 25.—Spotting Northwestern a three-point lead in the first quarter, the University of Iowa, 1921 Western Conference champions and claimants to the 1922 title, scored a brilliant victory in the final game here today, 37 to 3.

Only in the first quarter did the Purple check the Hawkeyes; by using a great forward pass offense.

Captain Patterson of Northwestern put his team in the lead with a drop kick from the 26-yard line. After that Locke scored Iowa's first touchdown early in the second period, there was no doubt about the superiority of Howard Jones' eleven.

Locke and Kadesky added touchdowns before the half ended, Kadesky's being made on a trick play. Shuttleworth had gone back for a purported drop kick and as the ball was passed, he purposely fumbled, Reich recovering and passing to Kadesky, who received the ball on Northwestern's five-yard line, from where he carried it across.

Today's game was the final one for Capt. Gordon Locke, who made four of Iowa's touchdowns.

Coach Jones had in the entire Iowa second team when the game ended.

Purdue and Indiana Battle to Tie, 7 to 7.

By the Associated Press.

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Nov. 25.—Purdue battled Indiana to a 7 to 7 tie in the Boilermakers' home-coming game at Stuart Field this afternoon. The scoring was all done in the final period. Indiana scored first by blocking a punt, an Indiana player falling on the ball as it rolled over the Purdue goal line. The extra point was added, making the score 7 to 0 in favor of Indiana.

A short time later Purdue took the ball to the Indiana's 31-yard line on a forward pass and then Prout, Purdue halfback, broke loose and ran for a touchdown. The extra point was made and the game ended a short time later.

Michigan Beats Gophers in Thrilling Game, 16-7.

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 25.—Michigan's undefeated football team retained its claim to the Big Ten championship with Iowa here this afternoon by defeating Minnesota, 16 to 7, on Northrop Field.

The game, played before 22,000 spectators, afforded many thrills and it appeared in the first quarter that the Gophers were going to down their old rivals.

Michigan, however, found itself in the second period, scoring two touchdowns and taking the lead, 14 to 7. In the final period, the Wolverines added to their total with a perfect place kick by Blot. The seven points scored by the Gophers represented the largest score made against Michigan this season.

Cappon, plunging Wolverine fullback, and Kirk, left end, led the attack. The speedy Kipe was effectually checked, except for a few flashes. Kirk's handling of forward passes was superior to anything seen on Northrup Field for years.

Marthineau, Gopher halfback, was the outstanding performer on the field running the ends, receiving punts and kicking brilliantly.

The lineup:

75-Yard Run by Buckeye Substitute Beats Illini, 6-3.

By the Associated Press.

URBANA, Ill., Nov. 25.—Illinois led Ohio State, 3 to 0, until the last quarter, when Ollie Klee, substitute Buckeye halfback, received Rune Clark's punt on his own 25-yard line and, aided by perfect interference, raced 75 yards to a touchdown through a broken field, giving Ohio State a 6-3 victory. A crowd of 22,000 persons saw the game.

The Illinois score came in the third quarter when, after the Illini had plunged and passed their way almost the full length of the field, only to be stopped by the fighting Buckeyes, Rune Clark dropped back and made a 20-yard drop kick.

St. Louis U. High Runs Up 39-0 Score on Jefferson City Eleven

Blue and White Outmaneuvers Visitors Consistently on Offensive—Fegan Breaks Up Invaders' Overhead Game—Capt. Rice of Billiken Juniors Injured.

St. Louis University High School overwhelmed the Jefferson City High School football team yesterday at Sportsman's Park, 39 to 0. The young Billikens slightly outweighed the visitors and had a better weight distribution than the visitors, who centered tonnage in a few men. Jefferson City was at no time dangerous and did not succeed in advancing the ball on the offense within the Blue and White 40-yard line.

The charges of Coach Tom Boland outmaneuvered the Jefferson City team. When the visitors' secondary defense played close behind the line, Capt. Rice hurled long forward passes for consistent gains. When the secondary wall moved back, Fegan, Denvir and Woods crashed through the line and Rice hurled short passes.

Jefferson City attempted to befuddle Boland's men early in the game by a complicated aerial attack, but the work of "Buck" Fegan, who broke up seven passes during the first half, caused the visitors to abandon their overhead attack.

Capt. Rice Injured.

Capt. Rice of St. Louis University High played a spectacular game until he suffered an injury which forced him from the field early in the third period. Rice scored all 19 points registered by the Billiken juniors in the first half. After the removal of Rice, John Woods was the outstanding Billiken. His open field running was excellent.

The Blue and White machine traveled at a pace it has seldom set before. The score was large, but even so the fact that the Billikens knew the game was "in" served to hold down the points. During the closing period, Coach Boland sent in a number of substitutes and the eleven kept the ball in Jefferson City territory throughout the quarter. Several times the Blue and White fumbled or was penalized when within its opponents' five-yard line.

The play of Irwin at fullback and Melln at right end for the Jefferson City team was excellent. These two boys broke up many of the Billiken attempts through tackle and around the end.

Injury Not Serious.

Capt. Rice was taken to the St. John's Hospital for an X-ray examination shortly after he was removed from the field. The examination failed to disclose any serious injury. Physicians stated that no fracture was revealed and it is believed that the injury is merely a strained back muscle.

Rice was injured when carrying a Jefferson City kickoff back to the center of the field. He shook off several tacklers and was not downed until one tackler seized him low and two hit him high.

Carnegie Beaten By Notre Dame

South Bend Team Too Powerful for Pittsburgers—Score 19—0.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 25.—Three spectacular marches across the Carnegie Tech goal line, gave the Notre Dame eleven a brilliant 19 to 0 victory on a frozen, snow-covered gridiron, here today. The light and speedy eleven coached by Walter Steffen fought valiantly, but could not withstand the terrific battering of Coach Rockne's powerful machine.

Tech made its best bid for a score in the opening minutes of play when Flying Jimmy Robertson was the star of an offense that gained more than 35 yards on straight football. Then Notre Dame got under way and the result never was in doubt.

Again and again, Notre Dame interference enabled the men with the ball to turn the Tech end. These sweeping runs, plus two perfect forward passes were chiefly responsible for three touchdowns.

OWEN'S 58-YARD RUN WINS FOR HARVARD, 10-3

was now the fourth quarter and the wind was at his back but there was a bad angle against him. He aimed steadily and kicked the goal. The ball had just enough power to carry over the cross bar. Instantly Pfaffmann was taken out. He had done his stuff during a crowded five seconds and retired immediately into private life. But Harvard was three points richer because of Pfaffmann's brief excursion into the hurly-burly. The score was: Harvard 1 0and Yale 3. There it stuck.

Largest Numbers Ever Seen.

But up to this point the greatest surprise sprung by Harvard has not been mentioned. For the first time in history the Crimson team wore numbers. Having decided to make the plunge, Harvard did nothing by Halves. The numbers were the largest and the whitest ever seen on any gridiron. The publicity which they conferred on every wearer as practically pitiless. The days of anonymity at Harvard have ended. Still, we rather suspect that it would have been possible to identify George Owen even if he had appeared in full Ku Klux Klan regalia.

And while all this was going on, what of Georges Clemenceau of Paris, France? We rather imagine that he was shivering. There are two points of view from which surmises about the distinguished visitor may be made. One of them is romantic, although not without foundation. After all, Clemenceau was returning to territory which had known him before. More than 50 years ago he taught school in a town scarcely 20 miles from New Haven. Probably nobody paid much attention to him then. He was just "that nice young man who teaches French." Maybe it was some satisfaction to him to return to these old haunts and find that 77,000 persons were of the opinion that he had amounted to something after all.

"Tiger, Tiger, Tiger."

The thousands were articulate about it. Clemenceau slipped in quietly before the game began and escaped notice, but between the halves he changed sides, crossing over from the Harvard cheering section to the Yale stand. He was allowed to walk right across the gridiron, which was otherwise strictly reserved to players, officials, doctors and sponge carriers. The Yale rooters gave him a long, echoing cheer, and at the end they yelled "Tiger, Tiger, Tiger." For the sake of Clemenceau, the Elis succeeded in being enthusiastic about a word which is usually roared out by them only in defiance at Princeton. Also the Yale stands sang one of the Harvard tunes. We believe the French have also happened upon the same air for their national anthem, the Marseillaise.

Collinsville Triumphs.

The Collinsville Township High School football team defeated the Belleville High School eleven 22 to 6, at Collinsville yesterday. It was the second meeting of the teams this year, they having played to a 6-6 tie at Belleville five weeks ago.

SMYTHE'S GREAT WORK WINS FOR ARMY, 17-14

ter, after Cullen had punted to the Army's 30-yard line, Smythe again obliged with a stirring return, carrying the ball to the Navy's 30-yard mark. From this point White caught a pretty forward pass and the ball was down on the Navy's three-yard line. Lawrence smashed through for the touchdown.

This made the score 10 to 7 in favor of the Army, but the future soon began to look less gloomy for the Middies. Smythe fumbled a punt and a Navy man fell on the ball on the Army's 20-yard line. The sailors lost the ball on downs on the Army's one-foot line, but the evil fruits of that fumble were destined to appear. Wood had to punt from behind his goal line and the Navy caught the ball on the Army's 42-yard mark, in fine position to strike once again. Two fordward passes took the ball to the Army's 10-yard line, whence the ball was carried over in three rushes, Conroy making the touchdown.

The score now stood Navy 14, Army 10. So, perhaps, it might have remained had not Smythe in the swiftly gathering dusk grabbed a punt of Cullen's on the Army's 25-yard line and dusted to the Navy's 10-yard mark before he was stopped in the course of three plays. The Army, due to penalties and tackles behind the scrimmage line, lost 15 yards. With the situation thus, Wood, standing upon the Navy's 25-yard mark, made a bluff to run with the ball. Instead, he passed it to Smythe, who in turn forward passed it to Dodd, and Dodd made a touchdown. The remainder of the game saw the Navy desperately trying to score by long forward passes, all of no avail.

56,000 FANS WATCH CALIFORNIA TRIUMPH OVER STANFORD, 28-0

DRAKE OVERWHELMS MISSISSIPPIANS, 48-6

By the Associated Press.

STARKVILLE, Miss., Nov. 25.—Drake University today defeated Mississippi A. and M. College, 48 to 6, in a game filled with brilliant broken field running and forward passes by both teams. Boelter, Drake halfback, was the principal ground gainer for his eleven, scoring five of the seven touchdowns. In the first period McGowan drove through right tackle for the Aggies' only touchdown.

West Frankfort Meets Scullins In Cup Contest

Ben Millers and Barrett Hoovers Also Clash in Soccer Program.

Another Illinois eleven, the West Frankfort team, appears at High School Field today in U. S. F. A. competition with a St. Louis team. This visiting aggregation has a higher ranking than had Wilsonville, victims in last Sunday's 8—0 holocaust, but they, too, are undoubtedly in for a trimming, as their opponents will be the Scullins, present champions at soccer of this broad land. Before the trophy-tangle, the Ben Millers and Barrett-Hoovers will play a regular league game, the preliminary starting at 1:15 p. m. C. E. (Red) Roche is to referee the cup game. Paul Murphy and John Anman will work the first battle.

While there is always a chance for an upset in soccer, the title-holders should breeze in. Tate Brady has his forwards stepping in unison now and, with several weeks of competition under their belts each thrust at the enemy goal is cleverly and efficiently executed. Tied with the Vesper-Buicks for the leadership in the local league race, the Scullins have lately reached good scoring form. In the first games, they were sadly deficient in this respect, but now, apparently, they have recovered, the forwards shooting in real championship style.

Unknown Quantity.

Little is known of the real strength of the West Frankfort team. They have played several tie games with Gillespie, finally winning out in a replay, 2—1, after extra periods.

As neither the Millers nor the Barrett-Hoovers have won a game this season and as both are anxious to "break in the league," the first game ought to be a regular battle. The fans have taken strongly to the Millers' new goal-minder—Rankow. The chap from South Africa, in recent games, has shown well and bids fair to fill a long-felt want for the Hatters.

As a mark of respect to the memory of Pete Ratican, the St. Louis teams in action today will wear mourning-bands on their uniforms.

Admission today will be 75 cents—the usual cup-game rate.

Gridiron Dope Gets Heavy Jolt in East When Favorites Lose

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—Gridiron dope, already badly upset this season, took a complete somersault today from an Eastern viewpoint in a majority of leading battles.

Harvard's smashing 10-3 victory over Yale, which was on the long end of pre-game odds, led the form reversals.

Dartmouth, beaten by Vermont, Cornell and Harvard, came back with a sensational 7-0 triumph over Brown, the Crimson's conqueror.

Washington and Jefferson, a heavy favorite, was crushed by Detroit University, 20 to 9, but Notre Dame, in another intersectional clash, ran conspicuously true to form in beating Carnegie Tech, 19 to 0.

Lafayette and the Army narrowed averted upsets in two other leading encounters, the former barely defeating its traditional rival, Lehigh, 2 to 0, while the Cadets staged a whirlwind finish to overcome the Navy, 17 to 14, for the first time since 1916.

Nebraska Clinches Valley Title by Trouncing Ames

Iowa Team at No Time a Formidable Opponent for Cornhuskers.

By the Associated Press.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 25.—Nebraska University clinched her claim to the championship of the Missouri Valley Conference here this afternoon, defeating Iowa State College (Ames), by the overwhelming score of 54 to 6. At no time in the entire contest was Ames a formidable foe, although they tried desperately to score by means of forward passes that failed to gain much ground. Their only score came in the second period when on the 15-yard line, Roberts shot a forward pass to Wolters for the distance.

Nebraska piled up her heavy score by playing consistent football. The Cornhuskers' backs plunged through the weaker Ames line at will.

The Cornhuskers' touchdowns, eight in number, were distributed between the backs, Noble 3; Russell 2; H. Dewitz (sub) 2 and Capt. Hartley 1.

Nebraska's claim to the Missouri Valley Championship is strengthened by her prior playing during the season and in the comparative points scored against adversaries met by Drake University, also undefeated, in Conference games this season.

A crowd of 50,000 witnessed the game.

The lineup:

Nebraska 54.	Positions.	Ames Aggies 6.

quarter with Captain Eggler, did splendid work. The Captain of the team used good headwork while directing the team and kept the team out of danger at all times.

Billiken Line Impresses.

The ends, Halloran and Avis, starred in their positions getting down under Hannegan's high punts and keeping Gibson from returning the ball with any consistency. The St. Louis line played well, Gehaghty, who played part of the game at center, broke through once and recovered a fumble and had nobody in front of him, but he couldn't keep his feet. Thornton also broke through and stopped the Loyola offense.

Loyola tried passing in the closing quarter but with less success than St. Louis, only getting away with two short passes to Nolan.

White and Smith were the Loyola offensive stars, while Unsworth, Nolan and Cerniglia did the best work on the defense. Cerniglia picked up a St. Louis fumble and gave Loyola its best chance to score. Unsworth intercepted a St. Louis pass while Nolan seemed to be the only one able to get down under White's punts and down the receiver.

Coach O'Rourke used practically his entire squad, giving everybody a chance to get into action. In the fourth quarter, five substitutes were sent into the game at one time.

The crowd was not up to expectations, less than 2500 seeing the contest.

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 25.—Oregon Agricultural College defeated Washington State College here today, 16 to 0. Three place kicks by McFadden, left end, and a touchdown by Miller, left halfback, with the goal kicked by McFadden, gave the Aggies the victory.

Form Shattered When Detroit U. Beats W. and J.

Team Excelled in Every Department of the Game.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 25.—University of Detroit's football team, showing a dash and driving power that swept back the Washington and Jefferson eleven, won today's game here, 20 to 9. The result was a decided upset, W. and J. having been a heavy favorite.

Detroit's scores were the results of two touchdowns, two goals after touchdowns, and two field goals. Washington and Jefferson made a touchdown, a goal after touchdown and a safety.

The locals put the visitors on the defensive early in the game and kept the ball in Washington and Jefferson territory most of the time. The locals excelled in every department of the game. Detroit backs frequently reeled off long runs of more than 20 yards in broken fields. Frequent fumbling on the part of Washington and Jefferson aided the Detroit team.

Principia Defeats Central Wesleyan

St. Louis Prep School Eleven Trounces Warrenton College Machine 48 to 7.

WARRENTON, Mo., Nov. 25.—Outplaying their heavier opponents at every angle and displaying a wonderful set of plays on offense, Principia Academy of St. Louis today defeated the eleven of Central Wesleyan College, 48 to 7. By achieving this victory, the team coached by Al Marquard went through the season without a defeat. They were tied in one game, but won seven victories.

The collegians were by far the heavier team and for the first two periods held the St. Louisans rather closely. In the first period Principia scored and again in the second, Central's only touchdown and goal being scored in the second quarter. In the final half, however, the academy boys showed their real form and literally ran rings around their opponents and scored almost at will.

Bert Clark, the Principia quarterback, led his team on attack and counted five touchdowns, also kicking two extra points thereafter. Peltrey and Berninger were the others scored. The lineup:

MIZZOU-KANSAS GAME TO BE BROADCAST FROM STADIUM AT COLUMBIA

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 25.—While not all of the 15,000 alumni and former students of the University of Missouri can come to Columbia for the annual homecoming game Nov. 30, those who cannot be here will at least be brought closer this year than ever before by means of the radio. Thousands of them probably will keep in close touch with the game by listening in on the play by place account of the contest which will be sent out by the R. O. T. C. in connection with the State Marketing Bureau in Jefferson City.

Last week an account of the Washington game was sent out, but this was relayed through Jefferson City, and while it got excellent results it was not as speedy as will be the account which will start through the air at 2:15 o'clock next Thursday afternoon. Already local officials have been notified by dozens of owners of radio sets in schools and colleges over the State, newspapers and private owners that they expect to listen in on the game at their home towns. They will not be disappointed.

Stratton's Team Leads.

John Stratton's team continued to lead the men of Walter Kammann in the [illegible] handball tournament when the week's play closed yesterday. Even the redoubtable Walter Kammann fell by the wayside. Paired with T. Fitzsimmons he was defeated by Killmade and S. Cullen, 21—18, [illegible] 21—18.

BOWLING

Entries for City Scratch Tournament Close Thursday—Roberts Team Rolls 3016 Total, With 1088 for High Single Game.

The final drive for entries to the annual city scratch tournament to be rolled on the Palace alleys, starting Dec. 9, is on. The lists close Thursday and officials are hopeful that a new record will be established. One thing certain, there are more quintets than ever before to choose from.

There will be bowling in the five-man, two-man and individual events and the entry fee is $1.25 a man for each event. In addition to the money prizes there will be medals for the winners.

The Falstaffs of the Hope League gained the honor of being the first quintet to enter the competition. However, the 16 teams of the Palace Scratch and Handicap Leagues have asked for opening night on which to bowl and without a doubt they will be accommodated.

With the Middle West now on, and the city in the offing, there will be quite a bit of tournament rolling for the St. Louis tenpinners.

Averages 232 for Seven Games.

Jimmy Blouin of Blue Island, Ill., holds the world's individual championship, but he will face a worthy foe within the next month when he rolls Jimmy Smith, for many years recognized as the titleholder. That Smith is rolling good tenpins this season was evinced by his work in the last seven games of the recent intercity match in which he paired with Doc Ehlke against Hank Marino and Dominick Devito.

Going into the final seven games, Smith and Ehlke were 137 pins to the bad. But then Smith showed his stuff and in the seven games counted 1627, for an average of 232 3-7. His games were 257, 248, 203, 237, 254, 215 and 213. This enabled his team to defeat the Chicagoans by 42 pins ahead.

Should Blouin defeat Smith in their coming match, the championship medal will become the permanent property of the Blue Island star.

Roberts Roll 3016 Total.

One of the best team totals rolled in the city this season was turned in by the W. J. Roberts in the Farmers and Merchants Scratch League last week. The five hit for 937, 1088 and 991, a 3016 total. This is an average of 1005 1-3. The individual counts were Huber 664, Neff 659, Imhoff 641, Fuegger 562 and Exler 490. The team won two games from the Renaud-Laux five. The Farmers and Merchants won two from the Krewinghaus Specials and the Tannhausers two from the Boehls.

Wilson with an average of 202 is high for the season, followed by G. Fredericks 198, Stine 192, Engle 190 and Neff 189.

Telgraver Averages 181.

Telgraver, with 543 for an average of 181, was the leader in the Nugents League at Peterson's, with Schleiker 532 and Epstein 522 next in line. Results: Blue Birds 2, Rugs 1; Office 2, Receiving 1; Clothing 2, Delivery 1.

O'Heron Gets 192 Average.

O'Heron was the star in last week's round of the First National League at Peterson's with a total of 577, for an average of 192 1-3. Other 500 totals were turned in by Wamhoff 534 and Boehmer and Heidenreich 530. The results: Auditing 3, Transits 0; Foreign Exchange 2, New Business 1; Credit 2, Floormen 1; Foreign Books 2, Tellers 1; First Nationals 2, Savings Department 1; Discount 2, City Books 1.

Blair Is High Man.

Blair was the high man in the Bell Telephone League at Peterson's, getting a total of 555. Grady 525, Messmer 524, Nebe 519, Fugger 517 and Dale 512 were others to go over 500. The results: Engineers 3, Publicity 0; Disbursements 3, Western Electrics 0; Traffics 3, Revenue Accounting 0; A. T. & T. 2, Commercial 1.

Miss Obenhaus Is Leader.

Miss Obenhaus with a total of 400 was the leader in the First National Ladies League at Peterson's. She started with an 87 game, but came back with 156 and 157. The Bookkeepers won two from the Auditing five and the Stenographers two from the First Nationals.

Templemeier Shoots 233 Game.

Templemeier with a total of 601 was high man in the Pierce League at Peterson's. He had games of 233, 172 and 196. Wollgemuth was next in line with 575. Eckrich totaled 520 and Nieberbremer 503. The results: Traffic 2, St. Louis Works 1; General Manager 2, St. Louis Division 1; Missouri Division 2, Railroad Department 1.

Wolken Gets 652 Total.

Wolken, anchor man for the Salesmen No. 3 proved the star in last week's round of the Pevely Boosters League on the Stein Jr. alleys with a total of 652, which included games of 237, 231 and 184. His good bowling enabled his team to take three straight from the Salesmen No. 2. Other results: Office 2, Route Foremen No. 1 1; Power Plant 2, Route Foremen No. 2 1; Salesmen No. 1 2, Delmar Branch 1.

Baird Is High Man.

Baird was the high man in the Carondelet Motor League on the Tower Grove alleys with a total of 434. He was the only man to go over the 406 mark. Kerber had games of 90, 89 and 87 for a 266 total and was low. The results: Office 2, Shop 1; Mechanics 2, Salesmen 1.

Hesse Gets Total of 530.

Hesse with 530 was the star in the Vandervoort-Barney League on the Congress alleys with a total of 530. McDonald with 515 was next. The Cigars won two from the Office Boys and the Said's Specials two from the Trimmers.

Individual Tourney Planned.

Fort Wayne, Ind., is branching out in the bowling game. The city owns the A. B. C. five-man champion and now will hold an individual sweepstakes, the dates of which are Dec. 9 and 10. Forty entries are guaranteed from Fort Wayne and is expected that more than 200 tenpinners will strive for honors. It is expected that the prize list will total $1000. If successful, the tourney will be made an annual affair. Frank Carr, secretary of the Fort Wayne Bowling Association, is handling the entries.

Jimmy Avis Is High Man.

Jimmy Avis, a real veteran, showed the way for the youngsters in the Maplewood League on the Saratoga alleys when he hit for a 563 total. Six other men were over the 540 mark, while 12 others went 500 or better. The 180-average men were: Anderson, O'Gorman, Allen, Brunk, Schweizer and Woods. Results: O'Gormans 2, Wood Bees 1; Wolfs 3, Indiahomas 0; Greenwood 3, De Soto 0; Nulsen-Thompson 2, Agogas 1; Crescents 2, Outcasts 1; City Officials 2, Webster 1.

Standings of the teams: Wood Bees, 20-13; City officials, 18-12; Indiahomas, 17-10; Wolfs, 16-14; Greenwoods, 16-14; O'Gormans, 16-17; Webster, 15-9; Crescents, 15-12; Nulsen-Thompson, 14-19; De Soto, 10-20; Agoga, 6-12; Outcasts, 5-16. High average men: Collins, 175; Schweizer, 174; Brunk, 174; Avis, 175; Schultz, 172; Allen, 170; Winters, 169; Anderson, 168; Kleeburg, 167, and Le Gost, 165.

Monti Shoots 235 Game.

Monti of the Bond Department five rolled the high single game of the week in the Mississippi Valley League on the Washington alleys with 235. The high three-game totals were turned in by Ostermueller, 560; Monti, 555; Sanguinett, 546; Kola, 536, Decker, 535, and Weidel, 513.

Commercial League.

The Army M. S. D. five won two games from the A. J. Seitz in the Commercial League round on the Congress aleys. The Ziegenbeins won two from the Cookes, Edisons two from Bluco Lamps and Simmons two from Edison Mazdas. The Edisons with 2599 had the high team total. T. Cooke had high three with 579, and F. Hesse, 245, for high single.

St. Louis After Bowling Meet

Mid-West Event to Be Awarded by Officials Today.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 25.—St. Louis bowlers, who are here for the annual tournament of the Middle West Bowling Association, will be greatly interested in the outcome of the annual meeting, scheduled to be held tomorrow. When the delegates get together the tournament city for 1923 will be selected and officers elected.

St. Louis will put in a bid for the 1923 rolling, and according to advance reports, has better than an even chance of getting the event. Des Moines and Omaha, it is understood, are also after the classic.

It was learned on good authority that should St. Louis put in a bid for the next tourney, Chicago would back the Mound City. St. Louis has not had the tournament in three years.

The present officers of the association are Henry C. Menne of St. Louis, president; John T. Haddock, Kansas City, secretary, and Jack Hammel, Kansas City, treasurer.

Culver 44; Rose Poly 0.

CULVER, Ind., Nov. 25.—The Culver Military Institute of Culver, Ind., defeated the Rose Poly eleven of Terre Haute in a football game here today, 44 to 0.

Roper, Rockne, Bezdek and Stagg Belong in Coaches' Hall of Fame

Edgren Also Gives High Rank to Warner and Greasy Neale—Princeton, Always Powerful Under Roper, Lapsed Into Rank of Mediocre Without His Services.

By Robert Edgren.

(Copyright, 1922.)

There are so many great football coaches now in America that selecting a few of the best is like picking an "All-America" team. And the world knows that's a thing no one man can do with any degree of fairness, as no one man can see all the American teams play.

But it's easy to select a few coaches who have done wonders with the modern style of play, and whose teams, whether from large colleges or small, compare well in scoring and defensive ability with any of the great gridiron combinations of the past.

A few weeks ago the eyes of the football world were on two coaches whose teams were to battle for intersectional honors, "Bill" Roper of Princeton and Amos Alonzo Stagg of Chicago. Not long after Princeton's amazing victory in a tremendous uphill fight during the last seven minutes of the fourth quarter, another football coach jumped into prominence through the wonderful second half playing by which W. and J. defeated Lafayette, by many regarded as the greatest football combination in the country.

"Greasy" Neale deserves a corner in the coaching Hall of Fame. W. and J. has only 500 students to draw from.

So does Knute Rockne of Notre Dame, who takes raw material and makes it over into a championship football squad in a few weeks. And Hugo Bezdek of Penn State, Glenn Warner of Pittsburg, Gil Dobie of Cornell, Bob Zuppke of Illinois—three times Conference winner, "Hurry Up" Fielding Yost of Michigan—with his "point-a-minute" teams; Fred Dawson of Nebraska, Howard Jones of Iowa, Fisher of Harvard, and certainly not least in the bunch, Andy Smith of California, whose big Bear team leads the country this season in the number of points rolled up in gridiron contests.

Roper's Great Record.

"Bill" Roper was a Princeton player and returned years after graduation to coach the team. In his first year, 1911, the Tigers beat both Yale and Harvard. That was the year Sam White leaped to fame by making the winning touchdowns after snatching fumbled balls and running nearly the length of the field.

Roper retired to practice his profession and Princeton hit the slide. A football committee of five tried to handle the coaching, and failed dismally. Then Speedy Rush tried. Harvard beat Princeton five years in succession, from 1912 to 1916. There were no games in the war years.

Then Roper came back in 1919. Material was poor that year. Princeton lost its first game to West Virginia, score 19—0. But Roper in a few weeks developed a football scoring machine that beat Yale and tied Harvard. Next year Princeton tied with Harvard again.

Both times the Tigers had a lead and Harvard scratched through to a tie at the last moment. In the 1919 game Casey got away for a touchdown when a substitute thrown in at the last moment let him break through the line. In 1920 Harvard tied the score again in the last quarter with a forward pass, after being overwhelmed by the Tigers' early attack. That year Princeton outclassed Yale and showed such strength that the Tigers were acknowledged Eastern champions.

Last year Princeton beat Harvard, Ralph Gilroy running 55 yards after catching a forward pass, making the winning touchdown. In Roper's time Princeton has beaten Harvard twice and tied twice.

"Bill" Roper has a splendid personality. He never uses rough language on or off the field, and he isn't a "slave driver." His boys show the effect of his fine example in many ways and are a credit to their college wherever they go. Roper uses more open football than any other Eastern college coach. It was open football that beat Chicago.

Rockne's Teams Light but Speedy.

Knute Rockne of Netre Dame is another great coach. His teams play strictly up-to-date football. Rockne was a Notre Dame student and an honor man when he graduated in 1913.

Rockne became coach in the fall of 1915 and started again after the war in 1919. He has lost only one game in three years, and in 1920 and 1921 Notre Dame ranked first among American football teams.

The features of Notre Dame play have been forward passing and great speed. As a rule the teams have been of only average weight. In the fall of 1921 Rockne lost 10 of his regulars, who were disqualified for playing professional football after the season. Starting with only one regular, Castner, fullback, Rockne built up a new team that early in the season by defeating the strong Georgia Tech team.

Notre Dame is a college of only 2300 students, situated 15 minutes' ride out of South Bend, Ind. All students live at the college.

This season Notre Dame had 11 fully organized football teams, the class teams being feeders for the varsity.

This is Rockne's system, and he is strongly against "importing" football stars from the prep schools. He prefers raw material to players who have made reputations before coming under his direction, as he doesn't want players who have learned other styles of play.

He has his teams out in the spring for running and training work, and picks his backfield men for their running ability before he ever sees them in a football suit.

Early September is given over to what Rockne calls "skull practice," which is a schooling in smart football. No matter how big or powerful a candidate may be, he can't hold a position on a Rockne team unless he shows evidence of possessing brains.

Doesn't Favor Strict Training.

Some of the greatest stars in American football have been developed by Rockne. Among them were George Gipp, one of the greatest backs of all time, who came to Rockne with no football experience. There was Desch, the national hurdle champion, who never had a football suit on before 1920, and Mohardt, most famous star of last year, who didn't know what a football was until Rockne brought him out.

Knute Rockne not only teaches football, but is professor of chemistry at Notre Dame. Last year his team came East and beat West Point 28—0 one Saturday, and the following Tuesday trimmed Rutgers 48—0. The night before the Rutgers game the team, instead of talking over football problems, studied chemistry.

PILES CURED WITHOUT OPERATION By Dr. Henrich's Method TO STAY CURED

No Cutting. No Pain. No Chloroform. No Hospital. No Danger. No Loss of Time. Consultation and Examination Free—Tell Your Friends.

There is nothing that so completely unfits a man for business, a woman for looking after her household and social duties, and both for the usual pleasures of everyday life, as this annoying disease. There is no cure as safe, sound and reliable, and yet so very simple and painless, as Dr. Henrich's Method.

Hundreds and hundreds freely testify through the press, etc., to my marvelous success, solely because they desire to do a kindness for others who are afflicted as they were, and who are seeking a cure and relief through the use of various kinds of so-called cures or their family physician. Being Cured, they realize how much it would have been to their advantage had they come long before they did, because they were soon cured, although some of them had suffered so long as forty-odd years, during which time they had constantly suffered and spent many times as much money as it would have cost them had they come to me and been cured years before they did. Think of the suffering they would have spared themselves, and business and pleasure advantages they would have enjoyed.

INVESTIGATE, THEN ACT

Don't take my statements alone in this matter, but investigate my work by inquiring of my former patients and learning from them whether or not my statements are based on actual and substantial results. If they say I do not accomplish what I claim to do, don't come to me; if they say I do, it will pay you to do as they did—Come and Be Cured for life.

MY TREATMENT IS PAINLESS. NO CUTTING DONE. CALL THIS WEEK.

Health Improved and Gained in Weight After Taking Dr. Henrich's Treatment for Bleeding and Protruding Piles.

Del Rio, Tex., Oct. 10, 1920.

Dr. W. P. Henrich,

Dear Sir—I am writing to say that after taking your treatment for Piles I am entirely cured.

I suffered with Bleeding and Protruding Piles for over ten years, and after trying every advertised remedy, I came to St. Louis and was cured by your treatment over a year ago.

I suffered very little pain from your treatment; I was on my feet every day while in St. Louis buying goods for my store in Texas.

I cannot recommend your treatment too highly; my general health has improved and I have gained 15 pounds in weight.

I want to thank you for all you did for me. You can refer anyone you wish to me and I will be only too glad to tell them of the benefits I received.

Yours sincerely, F. C. ROCKWELL.

Says Dr. Henrich's Mild Medical Method Is a Wonderful Cure for Blind and Itching Piles. Did Not Lose Any Time and Caused Him No Pain

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 11, 1922.

W. P. Henrich, Ph. G., M. D.

Dear Doctor—After suffering ten years with Blind and Itching Piles, you cured me by your mild medical method. It is certainly a wonderful cure you have for Piles as I did not lose any time from my work and it did not cause me any pain.

You also removed an external and internal Polypus from me.

Since you cured me, I am not suffering from constipation.

I advise every one that has Piles or any other rectal disease, to take your treatment at once. Very truly yours, W. H. FRIZZELL.

QUIET DAY AFTER THE EXECUTION OF ERSKINE CHILDERS

Feeling of Uneasiness at Dublin, That Followed Passing of Patriot, Reported Greatly Lessened.

GREATER BITTERNESS IS BEING PREDICTED

Students of Irish Imbroglio Speculate Regarding the Political Reaction to the Execution.

By the Associated Press.

DUBLIN, Nov. 25.—Last night and early today passed quietly in Dublin and the feeling of uneasiness caused by the execution of Erskine Childers yesterday seemed to be greatly lessened. Friends of Childers, in a statement to the press today, said that Mrs. Childers received an official intimation at 9:45 o'clock yesterday morning of her husband's execution. This, it is stated, was the first notification she had that the execution was fixed for that day. The statement also declares that Childers first was told Monday morning to prepare for execution, and that he was informed later that the sentence would be carried out Wednesday morning.

Tuesday night at 10 o'clock, the statement continues, Childers was told he was not to be taken out Wednesday morning, and up to 10 o'clock Thursday night he was not informed when the execution would occur.

Meanwhile, he was moved almost hourly from barracks to barracks. He asked to see the Rev. Dr. Browne of Maynooth or Father Albert, the statement adds, but the request was refused. Finally he asked to see the Protestant clergyman friend, who was with him when he died.

In the opinion of many students of the Irish imbroglio, the execution of Childers likely will intensify the bitterness of the fight between the Free State proponents and the Republicans. The constant killing or wounding of National Army soldiers, the firing of property and other acts of violence incident to the actions of the irregulars, which, rightly or wrongly, have been attributed largely to the influence of Childers' implacable stand on Eamon de Valera, seems to have robbed the executed man of sympathy in any but Republican quarters.

Much Speculation.

There is much quiet speculation here as to whether London may not be looked to as the place that may furnish the sequel to Childers' execution. Republicans regard the Irish government merely as the puppet of the British Cabinet, and they dwell much on the speeches of Lord Birkenhead and Winston Churchill as proving that Cosgrave, Mulcahy and their associates are merely British agents, suppressing the Irish republicans in the interests of England. When Childers was arrested, it is recalled, Churchill delivered a violent outburst against him which was widely interpreted here as meaning that the former Colonial Secretary expected Childers to be executed.

In view of the feeling aroused by Churchill's expressions, the hope is expressed by the ex-Secretary's friends here that he will be adequately guarded and take no risks. Incidentally, it is generally understood that some members of the Irish Government consider that they owe their lives to the constant vigilance they maintain.

Childers, it is learned, left a statement written after his trial giving the details of his career. In it he complained of the "false calumnies and innuendoes in the press and elsewhere for a year past, to most of which I have been unable to reply,"—notably that he had been called an Englishman, who, having betrayed his own country, came here to betray and destroy Ireland—and continued:

"A Citizen of Ireland."

"According to the rules of the provisional Government I am, by birth, domicile and deliberate choice of citizenship, an Irishman. My father was Irish born in England; my mother Irish, born in Ireland."

The statement concluded:

"I fought and worked for a sacred principle—the right of a nation to its declared independence and the refutation of any voluntary surrender to connection with and inclusion in the British Empire. That is the faith of comrades, my leaders and myself.

"Some day we shall be justified, when the nation forgets its weakness and reverts to the ancient holy tradition which we preserve in our struggle. And may God hasten the day of reunion amongst us all under the honored flag of the Republic."

400 Political Prisoners Taken by Boat From Ireland.

LIMERICK, Ireland, Nov. 25.—About 400 political prisoners were removed from the Limerick County jail this morning and conveyed under heavy escort to the docks, where they were placed on board a steamship which sailed for an unknown destination.

Former Klansman Tells How Order Enforced Edicts at Mer-Rouge, La.

Little Village of 800 Inhabitants Scene of Two Recent Outrages Attributed to Members of Invisible Empire—Girl, 15, Forced to Leave; Five Men Abducted, Two of Whom Have Not Since Been Heard From.

One of Men Taken to Lonely Wood and Severely Whipped is 66 Years Old, Owner of 1700 Acres of Fine Cotton and Corn Land, Born and Reared in Town—One of Men Still Missing Saw Service in World War in France.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MER-ROUGE, La., Nov. 25.—How the Ku Klux Klan imposes its brand of "Americanism" upon the citizens of Morehouse Parish was related today to the Post-Dispatch correspondent by a klansman who withdrew from the invisible empire following the expulsion of a 15-year-old girl from Mer-Rouge one night last July.

The klan had decreed that this girl's conduct had been reprehensible and she was unceremoniously taken from her home, beaten when she resisted and forcibly placed aboard a southbound train. Her mother later was intimidated and left but has returned. It was also in Morehouse Parish, near this town, that about 25 men clad in Ku Klux Klan regalia, on the evening of Aug. 24, abducted five citizens of Mer-Rouge, two of whom have not since been heard from and who are believed to have been murdered.

Former Klansman a Planter.

The ex-klansman informant, who will be a witness for the State in an action to be taken by Gov. Parker, and who has requested that his name be withheld for the present, is a planter. He said that while he was a member of the klan he had been twice ordered by the local klan captain, acting on instructions of a cyclops in another town, to meet other klansmen at sequestered places in Morehouse Parish to administer whippings to men for different offenses.

He named the captain and cyclops, both widely known in this State, and whose names are on Gov. Parker's list of klansman. He said he refused to participate in the whippings, both of which were administered.

The ex-klansman, in response to question as to what had prompted him to join the organization, said he thought the klan would be an effective means to rid Mer-Rouge of certain negresses.

Others Have Quit Klan.

There were only about 10 klansmen in Mer-Rouge before the last outrage, and most of them have withdrawn from the order since then. Bastrop is the headquarters of the klan in this parish.

"The captain in Mer-Rouge would get us together and inform us that the Cyclops had ordered so and so spanked," he explained. "We would be informed who the victim was to be. Sometimes it was a dissolute woman at other times a moonshiner, bootlegger or wife beater. I was one of the men designated to expel that 15-year-old girl from town, but I balked and remained away. But they put her on the train just the same, five of them. She did not have railroad fare, and one of the men gave her a $5 bill.

"Previous to that incident the captain informed us that the Cyclops had ordered us to flog a man of dissolute habits. We were to meet some brothers from Bastrop at an appointed place, who were to help us. Clad in our regalia we set forth, but there seemed to have been a misunderstanding concerning the meeting place, and the party was called off. The victim got his beating later, but I was not present."

Small but Beautiful Town.

The little town has about 800 inhabitants and lies almost hidden in a wealth of beautiful shade trees. From a short distance it appears as only a thickly wooded spot, so dense is the foliage of trees as yet untouched by frost, and the spot contrasts sharply with the lofty pines which adorn northern Louisiana.

It is about 250 miles northwest of New Orleans, and is quite old fashioned when compared to the lumber towns of the yellow pine district of this State. The town has three industries, two cotton gins and a sawmill.

Mer-Rouge has an interesting history that may have an important part of the promised official investigation of the Ku Klux for a direct descendant of Capt. Davenport, who founded the town 150 years ago, was one of the five victims of the klan in the August outrage.

Several citizens of Mer-Rouge had been warned that their Americanism had been brought in question at nearby klan meetings and the Mayor of Mer-Rouge had been told by a certain cyclops that he had better make his citizens behave or the klan would institute corrective measures.

Who Five Victims Were.

Little attention was accorded these warnings, and so on that August evening while returning from a baseball game and barbecue at Bastrop, the "klucks" as they are called here, took five citizens of Mer-Rouge in charge to administer a lesson in Americanism. These were the victims:

C. Y. Davenport, 21 years old, enlisted in the army while a mere boy, was a soldier 25 months, eight months in France during the world war; his father, Hugo Davenport, is a wealthy merchant. His earlier antecedent was the pioneer Capt. Davenport who founded the town. Young Davenport is generally regarded here as a fine boy.

Victim No. 2 was "Uncle Jimmy" L. Daniel, 66 years old, born and reared at Mer-Rouge and owner of 1700 acres of fine cotton and corn land six miles out from town. He had never been arrested, does not indulge in intoxicants and is revered by his fellow planters.

His son, Fillmore Watt Daniel, 36, sole owner of 220 acres of the best corn and cotton land in this State, and who served in the World War with the Tank Corps, in France, was the third victim. He has not been heard from since that August night and is believed to have been murdered.

The fourth victim was William C. Andrews, 25, owner of 600 acres of land near here, born here, and whose ancestors were among the early settlers of Northern Louisiana.

Thomas Fletcher Richard, the fifth man, still missing, was 32 years old. He has a wife and two children, girls, 3 and 10 years old, and had lived here only 18 months, having come from Monroe, Ouachita Parish, 28 miles south of Mer-Rouge. He had been an automobile mechanic. He had never been arrested, was respected and had provided comfortably for his family. His wife and daughters were left penniless, but the residents of Mer-Rouge have taken care of them.

Incidents of Outrage.

When the lonely wood, southeast of Mer-Rouge, where the August outrage was committed, was reached, the klansmen bared the back of "Uncle Jimmy" Daniel, and commanded, "Now, damn you, tell who shot at Dr. McKoin."

Dr. B. M. McKoin, an outspoken member of the klan at Mer-Rouge, practiced medicine here. He was a reputable physician. There was one unfortunate circumstance in his past that may have led to the present trouble and it is mentioned not as a reflection upon Dr. McKoin, but to get at the source of the trouble.

He shot and killed another physician about five years ago at Gillion, seven miles north of here, for which he was acquitted on a plea of self-defense.

About ten days before the August abduction Dr. McKoin complained to the sheriff that he had been shot at while returning home from a professional call. An investigation did not disclose who did the shooting, and a few weeks after the abduction of the five men of Mer-Rouge Dr. McKoin left town, claiming that his life had been threatened. He is now taking a post graduate course in medicine at a Baltimore institution.

Pleaded for Mercy in Vain.

Quite exhausted from the ordeal of having been blind folded, thrown into an automobile and hauled many miles, "Uncle Jimmy," advanced age adding to his misery, begged for mercy, asserting that neither he or his son knew who shot at Dr. McKoin.

Down came the strap upon his bare back. His cries for mercy were delivered in shrieks.

"My God, men, have mercy on an old man," he begged.

Down came the strap again, wielded by a strong arm, four, five, six times, and the old man swooned.

Andrews was next. His back, too, was bared. He emphatically denied that he had ever shot at anyone, or that he knew who did the shooting. The blood was actually cut out of his back with the strap, applied with redoubled vigor. So badly injured was Andrews that a physician attended him for two weeks afterwards.

Davenport, a mild mannered chap, who had been terrorized by the agonized shrieks of "Uncle Jimmy" and Andrews, was to be the next victim, but it was discovered that a mistake had been made. He was not the man sought, and was not flogged.

Daniel and Richard, still bound and blindfolded, lay in the bed of the truck. They were not taken out then. The other three were taken in automobiles to Collinston, eight miles southwest of Mer-Rouge and put out by one of the hooded figures.

"You fellows take that 11 o'clock train back to Mer-Rouge," he said, removing the cloths with which they were blindfolded. "One of the other two may return, but one will have to leave this country." As he started to turn away, he asked Davenport if he had railroad fare and when Davenport answered in the negative, the hooded figure handed him a half dollar.

"No, that won't do," said another hooded figure, advancing, who handed Davenport a dollar, ignoring "Uncle Jimmy" and Andrews.

Two Not Seen Since.

The mob then drove away, with Daniel and Richard in the truck. The movements of the mob from that point have been traced by investigators for Gov. Parker, who claim to have witnesses who will tell that Daniel and Richards were murdered and what disposition was made of the bodies.

But the klansmen had not finished the job. A day or two later Mrs. Richard and her children had been taken in by the family of a Mer-Rouge merchant. Here again the klan asserted its vexation at Mer-Rouge Americanism. The powerful cyclops sent word to the merchant who had befriended Mrs. Richard that he had offended the klan and, besides, was talking "too damn much."

The merchant thereupon said all that he could think of concerning Ku Klux Americanism and forthwith prepared for the worst, as did other citizens of Mer-Rouge, who are awaiting one more sally of the klansmen—just one more, is all they ask for, and then, they say we will see who's running Morehouse parish.

Daniel Marked for Some Time.

"Wat" Daniel had been a marked man for some time. About a month ago hooded figures from Bastrop terrorized the negroes on his farm and he went to Bastrop and there delivered an ultimatum to the cyclops.

Richard had once before been taken out at night by klansmen and given a "talking to."

The Morehouse parish grand jury, shortly after the outrage, made an investigation, but could not fix responsibility for the crime. J. B. Hornbeak, a Mer-Rouge merchant, was a member of that body. He is outspoken in condemnation of the outrage and said it was regrettable that evidence sufficient to return indictments had not been adduced.

Louisiana Governor at White House to Discuss K. K. K. With President

—Underwood and Underwood Photographs

Just exactly what occurred when the Governor and his Attorney General visited the President has not been made public but it is believed in Washintgon that the Governor said that, notwithstanding representations from certain quarters, aimed to lead to Federal intervention in Louisiana to assist the State in suppressing the activities of the Ku-Klux-Klan, the State was fully competent to handle the situation.

The Governor is also reported to have advised the President that his course in appointing a negro to a $5000 Federal job at New Orleans was not calculated to reduce the activities of the K. K. K.

rifles, stood by the trailer and when a long line of automobiles had been stopped they went to each car, poked their rifles in and demanded to see the faces of the occupants. Many of the cars contained women and children who were terrorized by the armed men.

Took Men From Different Cars.

From different cars they took Richards, Davenport, Andrews and the Daniels, bound them hand and foot in the presence of several persons who had alighted from their cars, tossed them into the trailer and drove off on a south road, away from Bastrop and Mer Rouge.

As the hooded men drove away one of them shouted to the terrorized motorists who had been held up: "Tell their families they will never hear from them again."

There are only a few known klansmen in Mer Rouge and this outrage incensed the citizens of that town to the point of marching on Bastrop, where the klan is strong. Indeed both sides were mobilized that night, each expecting an attack from the other, but the counsel of influential citizens prevailed and Gov. Parker was requested to make an investigation.

He promptly sent secret agents to Mer Rouge and Bastrop, and it has been learned that agents of the Department of Justice subsequently went to that district on information that Texas and Arkansas klansmen had been brought into Louisiana.

Gov. Parker admitted that he discussed with President Harding the klan activities in Louisiana, but declared that his conversation was only an incident of his trip. He said he went there to protest against the appointment of a negro as Comptroller of Customs and to procure botanical specimens for the State agricultural college.

He was accompanied to Washington by Attorney-General A. V. Coco, who conferred with Department of Justice officials as to what part, if any, the Government would take provided Gov. Parker established the fact that klansmen from Texas and Arkansas came into Louisiana to commit outrages, such as that against the five men of Mer Rouge.

Satisfied With Conference.

What information was given him at Washington Gov. Parker would not say, but added that he was satisfied with the results of conferences of Coco and the department officials.

"I had no idea of calling on the Federal Government for troops," said Gov. Parker. "Law enforcement has not broken down in Louisiana, as the Ku Klux Klan or any other masked men that slink about under cover to commit outrages against our citizens will learn. We have fearless men in this State, who can be depended upon to bring to justice the dastardly cowards who murdered Daniel and Richards."

Gov. Parker has several letters from business and professional men in the East who served in the Tank Corps with Daniel and who commend him as a man of good character. The Governor said he has been unable to confirm a rumor that Daniel and Richards had been bootlegging or had otherwise violated the law. Neither had ever been arrested and both are from respected families, the Governor said.

Gov. Parker is a farmer. His two sons, who served in the war are now brokers in New Orleans.

Roger W. Babson, head of the Babson statistical organization, will speak on "The Business Outlook for 1923," at a meeting of the Sales Managers' Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce at Moolah Temple, Dec. 6.

PROGRAM OF CUNO CABINET APPROVED BY THE REICHSTAG

New Chancellor Was Upheld Overwhelmingly by Middle Parties, Nationalists and the Socialists.

HOWEVER, STRING MAY BE TIED TO THE VOTE

Radicals and Nationalists Reported Making Reservations in Connection With Their Tacit Endorsement.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 25.—The program of the new Cuno ministry received the overwhelming approval of the Reichstag today. The Chancellor was upheld by the middle parties, the Nationalists and the United Socialists, the latter two parties voting solidly in favor of the action indorsing the Government's declaration.

While Herr Cuno thus receives a large package of confidence, he and his Cabinet are left to ponder its contents, as both the Radicals and Nationalists are making reservations in connection with their present tacit indorsement of the new ministry.

The Chancellor's little mishap in connection with his selection of Dr. Mueller as food controller is viewed only as a passing embarrassment, in the light of the Minister's resignation, although some curiosity is expressed over the manner in which the Rhinish agriculturalist expert succeeded in passing Cuno's muster.

Resignation of Mueller.

Accused by the Socialists of having taken an active part in the Rhineland separatist movement in 1919, Dr. Herman Mueller, Minister of Agriculture and Food Controller, resigned his portfolio today. His resignation was accepted by President Ebert. Dr. Mueller, in a letter read in the Reichstag by Chancellor Cuno, said his resignation was due to unjust reproaches by the Socialists and the atmosphere of political antagonism created, to the detriment of a sober, practical solution of the food problem.

Chancellor Cuno declared that Dr. Mueller's attitude on the Rhineland question did not warrant any distrust of his patriotism and that the Socialist reproaches were groundless. Nevertheless, he was regretfully obliged to transmit the Minister's resignation to the President in order to avoid unfruitful party conflicts, which must be done if the Cabinet was to work in a practical way.

The Chancellor's declaration was met with an outcry by the extreme left against the Agrarians.

The new Chancellor is said to have accepted him on the recommendation of Finance Minister Hermes. Dr. Mueller provided the only real element of humor in the post crisis situation in that he probably has won the record of the briefest ministerial period in German history, his regime lasting only 36 hours.

Discusses the U. S.

One of Germany's primary needs is that of better economic relations with the United States, declared Dr. Gustav Stresemann, leader of the German People's party and head of the Foreign Relations Committee, during the debate over the program of the new Government.

Dr. Stresemann said he agreed completely with Chancellor Cuno's statement that the Germans cannot reckon on a split in the Entente. In fact, he declared, such a division would work hardships on Germany, instead of being of benefit to her.

Disposing of the recent governmental changes in England, and Italy as holding forth no definite prospects of advantage in Germany, he continued:

"The United States would perhaps participate actively in European affairs if unhampered by Congress. I regret that all the more because of the Chancellor's statement that he believes the reparations question cannot in any case be definitely regulated without the active intervention of the United States.

"Let us be glad if we can retain properly our trade connections with America. A prominent American told me: 'For the United States, the difference between stability and prosperity depends upon a Europe capable of buying; we can perhaps remain standing where we are as long as Europe continues to stay in this condition, but to go from the present situation to prosperity is only possible, if we can again have Europe capable of buying.'"

Dr. Stresemann asserted that the world had never been less pacifically situated than at present, and that France had never been so powerful in the world as today.

The Reichstag adjourned today until Dec. 4.

Funeral of Capt. Anthony Roeslein.

Funeral services for Capt. Anthony Roeslein, 86 years old, who died last Monday at Long Beach, Cal., will be held Tuesday morning in an undertaker's chapel at 1905 South Grand boulevard. Frank P. Blair Post No. 1, G. A. R., will be in charge of the ceremonies. Roeslein, who formerly was in the insurance business here, was in the West for his health. His wife died in 1919 while on a tour of Europe.

MISSING GIRL WHO IS SOUGHT BY PARENTS

HALLIE ROEDER.

SEPARATED PARENTS EACH ASK POLICE TO FIND DAUGHTER

17-Year-Old Girl and $718 Missing—Two Men Indicated as Possibly Concerned.

The police are searching for Hallie Roeder, 17 years old, who was reported missing Friday from the homes of both her father, William Roeder, 1216 St. Ange avenue, and her mother, Mrs. Lela Rice, 1430A Dolman street.

Hallie had been living with each of her parents, staying for a short time with one and then with the other since their separation some time ago and her mother's subsequent remarriage.

As has been told, Roeder suspects a married man living in the neighborhood, and Mrs. Rice said she believed a single man living on De Ballviere avenue, might know something about her daughter's disappearance.

Roeder said his daughter drew $718 from a downtown bank at 10 a. m. Wednesday morning, the account being in her name but the money belonging to him. He had kept it in her name since his separation from Hallie's mother, he said, and the girl had a legal right to take the money.

When Hallie left home Wednesday she wore a tan dress, a black hat and low tan shoes. She has dark brown hair that is bobbed.

DEDICATION SERVICES FOR NEW ST. ROCH'S CHURCH AT 10 TODAY

Archbishop Glennon Will Direct Services; Bishop Gilfillan Also Will Be Present.

Dedication services in the new St. Roch's Catholic Church, southeast corner of Rosedale and Waterman avenues, will be held at 10 a. m. today, under the direction of Archbishop John J. Glennon. Bishop Gilfillan of St. Joseph, former pastor at the New Cathedral, will be present. Following the dedication address by the Archbishop, dedication mass will be held, the sermon to be preached by Bishop C. E. Byrne of Galveston, Tex.

The new church was built at a cost of $200,000, which was raised by subscriptions in the parish. It is Tudor-Gothic in design, and has a seating capacity of 664 persons on the main floor and 200 in the balcony.

An unusual feature is the location of the choir balcony, which is at the front instead of at the rear of the church. This was done to conserve seating space, the Rev. John P. Spencer, pastor, said. The choir and its organ will be at the east side of the front of the church, and the organ balcony at the west side.

The Rev. Martin S. Brennan and the Rev. Edward H. Amsinger will be masters of ceremonies in the dedication service.

SISTERS' DOGS WIN PRIZES

Miss Irma Biebinger and Mrs. Alice Perrings, sisters, will return today from Kansas City where their Great Danes carried off prizes at the Dog Show. Mrs. Perrings' American bred female, Tiger Rose, won the first prize and the sisters' three dogs led the Great Dane females. Satan, Prinz von der Rehbach, carried first prize over all.

Satan, Prinz von der Rehbach, is 2 years old, a fawn colored Great Dane, imported from Germany, for which Miss Biebinger paid $1000. Gemma, 3 years old, a brindle, imported from Holland, was bought by Mrs. Perrings for $400. The sisters own the Colonia Kennels on the Telegraph Road, which they started a year ago to breed the fawn and brindle types of Great Dane.

CANDIDATES' EXPENSE ACCOUNTS

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 25.—The following candidates' expense accounts were filed today with the Secretary of State:

Albert L. Schweitzer, elected prosecuting attorney of the St. Louis Court of Criminal Correction, $2362.50; H. A. Hamilton, St. Louis, elected Circuit Judge, $2017.44; John Schmoll, St. Louis, elected circuit clerk, $1681.92; William L. Tamme, St. Louis, elected recorder of deeds, $602.59, and Erwin G. Ossing, St. Louis, elected circuit Judge $2546.82.

County Phone Rate Extension.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 25.—The State Public Service Commission today granted to the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. an extension of the rates in effect for the Webster Groves-Kirkwood Exchange for 12 months. The rates in effect were established in September, 1921, as an increase over those previously in use.

BOY, 9, KILLED IN COUNTY BY AN AUTO

Said to Have Gone After Ball That Fell in the Clayton Road Near Cella Road.

Walter Roth, 9 years old, son of Alfred Roth, a caretaker at the home of A. C. Brown, on the Clayton and Cella roads, St. Louis County, was struck and killed yesterday at 5 p. m. on the Clayton road, south of the Cella road, by an automobile driven by a man who said he was J. E. Wood of Allenton, St. Louis County.

Walter, accompanied by his brother, Carl, 13, and his cousin, Willy Roth, 10, was walking west at the side of the Clayton road. Willy related that Walter was bouncing a ball, that fell into the roadway. He said that Walter "reached" for the ball and was struck by the automobile, which was traveling east. Walter did not run into the road, Willy said. Carl was looking elsewhere and did not see his brother struck.

WOMAN WANTS WHOLE ESTATE OF MAN FOUND IN LAGOON

Miss Clara B. McFall Files Suit for Property Left by B. F. Bingham, 79.

Miss Clara B. McFall of Washington, D. C., yesterday filed suit for the whole estate of B. F. Bingham, 79 years old, who was found dead in the lagoon near Art Hill in Forest Park Dec. 17 last. She says that 61 years ago, when she was 18 years old, he promised that if she would remain at his home and take care of his invalid wife, Miss McFall's half-sister, he would compensate her by bequeathing to her all his property. Miss McFall says she agreed to the proposition and was with Mrs. Bingham until the latter's death 11 years ago.

Bingham is said to have drawn a will in 1914 in which he acknowledged his debt to Miss McFall and bequeathed to her his estate, but he either lost or destroyed the document, and, at his death, no will was found. Consequently the estate is being administered by the Public Administrator for benefit of three collateral blood relatives of Bingham who are his lawful heirs in the absence of a will. They are A. [illegible] Bingham, Gertrude B. Koehler and D. Winifred Goodrich.

Lee W. Grant, attorney for the plaintiff, said that the estate was valued at $6000. Bingham for nearly 50 years was a distributing clerk in the United States Treasury at Washington and was a Civil War veteran. Two months before his death he came to live at the home of his niece, Mrs. Charles P. Williams, 6215 Washington boulevard, wife of an attorney.

SERVICE COMMISSIONERS BACK FROM WASHINGTON MISSION

Kirtz and McIndoe Report Conferences With Interstate Body on Livestock Switching Charges and Cement.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 25.—John A. Kirtz, chairman of the Missouri Public Service Commission, and Hugh McIndoe, a member, were back today from Washington, where they participated in the general express rate case hearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission. While there they were in conference with the Interstate commission regarding switching charges on livestock at St. Louis and cement at Kansas City. The conference on the livestock switching charges was asked for by the Missouri commission while the Interstate commission requested the other conference.

McIndoe said this was one of the first conferences held by the Interstate Commerce Commission with a State commission under the co-operative plan of adjusting differences where they accur between commissions with a view of bringing about a co-operation between the Federal and State commissions.

FLIES TO AIRPLANE PARLEY

Chicago Aeronautic Enthusiast Talks About 1923 Meet.

Charles L. Dickinson of Chicago, president of the Aero Club of Illinois, came to St. Louis yesterday by the air route, alighting at Lambert Field, and called on Albert Bond Lambert and others interested in aeronautics. With Nimmo Black as pilot, he made the flight from Chicago in three hours.

Dickinson is not interested in the effort of Mayor Thompson and other Chicago politicians to take the 1923 meet of the National Aeronautic Association to Chicago. He said he and his associates would not join in the invitation, unless the politicians subordinate themselves.

Dickinson, who is 64 years old, is the retired head of the Dickinson Seed Co., and is devoting his time to aeronautics. He recently journeyed by airplane from Chicago to Pensacola, Fla.

SAFETY DRIVE GETS RESULTS

Donk Bros. Prevent Accidents for a Week in Illinois Mine.

A record of no accidents in a week was established last week in a "safety first" campaign conducted in the Donk Bros. Coal and Coke Co., mine No. 2, at Maryville, Ill., the first time such a record has been made at that mine in more than 20 years, company officials said yesterday. Heretofore accidents have averaged 40 to 60 a month, it was said. The company employs [illegible] men in the mine, of which William Vanline is manager, and Charles A. Naern, safety engineer.

A similar campaign is to be held by the company in another mine at Edwardsville.

F. G. NIEDRINGHAUS DIES AT 85 AFTER 10-DAYS' ILLNESS

Retired Tinware Manufacturer, Founder of Granite City and ex-Congressman Victim of Heart Disease.

CAME TO ST. LOUIS IN FIFTIES FROM GERMANY

Career Was One of Initiative and Pioneer Enterprise; Funeral Monday From the Home.

Frederick G. Niedringhaus, 85 years old, retired tinware manufacturer, founder of Granite City, and former Congressman, died of heart disease at 7 o'clock last night, following a 10 days' illness, at his home, [illegible] Lindell boulevard. The funeral will be held at the home at 2 p. m. tomorrow.

Niedringhaus' career was one of initiative and pioneer enterprise. He introduced improvements in tinware and enamelware, in articles used in every kitchen.

He and his brother, the late William F. Niedringhaus, came here in the fifties from Germany. Frederick, who came first, started a small tin and roofing shop in North St. Louis. After William joined him and relieved him of some of the work, Frederick began planning improvements in tin products.

Pioneers in Stamping.

At that time, tinware was made by the soldering process. The stamping of articles of tinware, from single sheets of tin was then a new French process, which had not been introduced in the United States.

Through the working out of a plan formed by F. G. Niedringhaus, he and his brother brought to this country a Frenchman familiar with the stamping process, and they put this into use in their small factory, which they named the St. Louis Stamping Co.

The business grew rapidly, and in the early '80s the brothers sought a location across the river for a new and larger plant. F. G. Niedringhaus, after a survey, picked a tract of farm land which was above the flood levels, and built there the industry which became the industrial basis of the city of Granite City named after the "graniteware" product of the factory.

Another Process Developed.

Another new process developed under Niedringhaus' direction was the manufacture of steel enamel ware. To bring this about, a long course of experimentation in enamels was necessary, as an enamal had to be found which would contract in the same degree as the thin steel plate underlying it. The final success of these experiments provided a more attractive substitute for the iron pots and kettles of earlier days.

It was while Niedringhaus was developing this industry that he was elected to Congress from what was then the Eighth District, in St. Louis. He went into the House of Representatives at the beginning of the Harrison administration, in 1889, and served one term. That was a period of tariff agitation, and of the McKinley tariff, in which an important and much-discussed item was the protective duty on tin plate. The standing of tin plate manufacture as an "infant industry," and its possibilities of development, were widely discussed.

Niedringhaus was a firm believer in the possibilities of the tin plate industry under protection, and when the protective legislation was passed, he sought a supply of high-grade workmen, familiar with metallic manufacture. He brought a colony of such workers from Wales, and they were the foundation of the large Welsh colony which still exists at Granite City.

Active Church Worker.

Many of the children of the Welshmen who were brought over at that time now are among the employes of the National Enameling and Stamping Co., the large plant which developed, with the investment of outside capital, from the modest beginning of the Niedringhaus brothers.

Congressman William McKinley, afterward president, attended a ceremony at the Niedringhaus plant, after the passage of the McKinley tariff bill.

Until his retirement a few years ago, Niedringhaus was president of the National Enameling and Stamping Co. He was also president of the St. Louis Pressed Brick Co. and of the Granite Realty & Investment Co., and was vice president of the Granite City Gas Co. and a director of the Blanke-Wenneker Candy Co.

Niedringhaus was married in 1860 to Dena Key, and 10 children were born to them, of whom six are living. These are Thomas K. Niedringhaus, vice-president of the National Enameling and Stamping Co., a former chairman of the Republican State Committee, and five daughters, Mrs. Jesse B. Cozzens, Mrs. Frederick C. Bonsack, Mrs. Fidelia C. Sharp, Mrs. Tyrrell Williams and Mrs. Alden H. Little.

Niedringhaus was an active Methodist, and was superintendent, for [illegible] years, of the Sunday school of Salem Church. In his later years he was a member and trustee of Grace Church.

PROGRESSIVES ASSAIL BUTLER APPOINTMENT

La Follette Group Joins Labor in Fight to Defeat Confirmation.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
No. 20 Wyatt Bldg.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—La Follette progressive today joined with representatives of organized labor in opposition to the confirmation of Pierce Butler of St. Paul as Associaate Justice to the Supreme Court. The combined forces which will be led in the Senate by Senator La Follette will probably fail in defeating confirmation but will doubtless delay it.

The La Follette group from the Northwest objects to the relations which Butler is alleged to maintain with the reactionary group in Minnesota, where, it is charged, his Democratic politics has not prevented him from working with the old guard Republicans. The fact that Butler was recommended by both Senators Nelson and Kellogg, is regarded as proof of this alignment.

Organized labor objects to the appointment of men to the Supreme Court who are considered out of sympathy with the aspirations of labor. More specifically, they hold that Butler represented certain railroads before the Interstate Commerce Commission which fixed the present tentative value of the roads. Radical agrarians and organized labor claim this has enabled the roads to justify high freight rates and low wages on the necessity of paying interest rates on watered stock.

While the LaFollette group is protesting the appointment, Senator Cummins, Republican, Iowa, one of the Senate judiciary sub-committee which will investigate the arguments for and against confirmation, speaks in the highest terms of the newly appointed Justice. Senator Cummins entered the Senate as a Progressive but no longer trains with La Follette.

The fight against Butler's confirmation is part of the attack which the LaFollette group plan to make for political control in the Northwestern group of states including Wisconsin, Minnesota, the Dakotas, Iowa and Nebraska, where they contend the business interests of the organization against them in the recent election, the nucleus of the opposition being the great Northern Railroad the millers and grain elevator men of Minneapolis and the United States Steel Corporation which is strongly entrenched in Duluth. The La Follette progressives argue that Butler's affiliations as counsel for members of this group and his political alignment with the non-partisan conservative group which opposed the Non-partisan League, justifies them in inquiring into his qualifications for the Supreme bench.

In questioning the confirmation, Senator La Follette expects support, although not nearly to the extent he would have if the confirmation were delayed until the next session of Congress. An effort will be made to delay confirmation until Senator Brookhart of Iowa, relied upon by the La Follette group to oppose Butler has taken his seat.

FORMER ORCHESTRA HEAD DIES

Dominic A. Sarli, 57 years old, former theater orchestra leader, died after a long illness at his home, 5708A Easton avenue, early yesterday morning of locomotor ataxia.

Sarli came to this country from Italy when a boy. He studied the violin in his youth and played in several orchestras. He was leader of the orchestra at the old Casino theater for years, and led the orchestra that opened the Palace theater.

His wife and two children, Joseph and Irene Sarli, survive. Josephine Sarli is leader of the orchestra at the Columbia theater. The funeral will be at 10 a. m. Tuesday, burial following in St. Peter's Cemetery.

Western Front War Pictures.

Motion pictures taken on the western front during the world war will be shown at the Fox-Liberty Theater Dec. 9 to Dec. 15, inclusive, under the auspices of the local posts of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. The proceeds of the shows will be turned over to the relief fund of the organization. "Powder River," as this picture is known, recalls the battles of Cantigny, Chateau-Thierry, St. Mihiel and the Argonne Forest.

Nearly every branch of the United States Army is shown in action.

TAG DAY FOR NEEDY SICK TO BE HELD IN CITY SATURDAY

Hospitals to Be Reimbursed by Money Obtained During Two Days' Work by Benevolent Organization.

APPEAL STRICTLY NON-SECTARIAN

Collections to Be Taken in Churches for Work of Saturday and Sunday Association.

The thirtieth annual collection of the Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association, which reimburses hospitals for their free care of the sick, will be held next Saturday and Sunday.

On Saturday citizens will be asked to purchase tags from committees of women stationed in office buildings, hotels and other public places, while on Sunday collections will be taken in churches and Sunday schools.

Tag day in St. Louis originated with the Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association and, though this method of raising funds for charitable purposes has been widely copied, particularly during the war, no tag day has yet met so general a response as the one for the relief of the needy sick.

President A. L. Shapleigh of the association, in the 1922 year book to be issued this week emphasizes the non-sectarian character of the appeal.

"We have always enjoyed the cooperation of the churches of whatever faith," he declares. "Hospitals of virtually all religious denominations share in our collections. This charity touches Jews, Catholics and Protestant alike. It appeals to all. Certainly there is no greater pleasure than being able to relieve suffering.

History One of Progress.

"The history of our association is one of active progress. From the beginning, in 1893, when we were able to distribute to the hospitals $4,442.99, we have grown until, in 1920, our record year, we distributed $59,016.15, and last year our distribution totaled $55,655.26. During the period of our work the hospitals caring for free patients have received something over $900,000 through the medium of our collections. The charity patents, rather than the hospitals, are the beneficiaries, as the distribution to hospitals, is based strictly upon the amount of free hospital service actually rendered under the rules of the association.

"The collection of 1921 was very satisfactory, considering the depressed condition of business at that time. Fortunately, unemployment now has almost disappeared and there is opportunity for everyone to make substantial earnings. We hope this condition will be reflected in the total of the hospital collection for 1922."

"As you perhaps know, the money is donated through glass boxes in buildings, presided over by women; through the Committee on Trades and Professions, by direct solicitation of business houses; through the Committee on Employes' Subscriptions, which invites contributions from employes in their respective places of employment; and through the churches and Sunday Schools on Hospital Sunday.

Expense of Collection Small.

"The expense of taking the collection is very small, no salaries or commissions being paid and the principal items of cost being printing, postage and necessary clerical help during several weeks, once a year, and it is fair to say that at least 95 cents out of every dollar contributed by the public reaches the hospital beds.

"There recently was a campaign to enable one of our hospitals to extend its facilities, and there also has been a campaign for the Red Cross. Both objects are most worthy. We must not, however, let our own sick poor suffer on that account.

"Let us again show our pride in our community, and our desire to help those who cannot help themselves, by making the collection this year surpass that of any preceding year."

The outside back cover of the year book, to illustrate the fact that the hospital collection "touches Jews, Catholics and Protestants alike," will carry, in connection with the picture of Cupid attracting contributions and Charity with the aid of those contributions assisting a crippled boy, the following stanza:

"Here Christian, Jew and Pagan meet
All meaner thoughts above,
To lay at Charity's sweet feet
The offerings of Love."

One hundred and forty-four subcommittees of the Committee on Trades and Professions, including representatives of virtually all of the important industries of St. Louis, have been enrolled for the collection work.

BY-PLAY NEARLY CAUSES TRAGEDY AT ARMY-NAVY GAME

Make-Believe Gunboat Blows Up Just as Sailors Try to Seize It From Cadets.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 25.—Tragedy, even death, might have stalked Franklin Field today as a result of an innocent bit of by-play on the part of the Army fun-makers at the Army-Navy football game.

After the first half, from the region of the Army entrance to the field, came a make-believe gunboat. It was painted a navy gray, and made its way slowly to the sidelines, near the Army rooting section. The north wind which blew like a hurricane lifted the side flaps disclosing the fact that the ship was being toted by four cadets. Two other boys in gray followed with an old cannon of the vintage of '62. These two fired four loud blasts at the dummy cruiser and she suddenly listed to port and settled on her side. There she lay like some great gull brought to sand by a pump gun.

The Navy yell leaders watched this in silence for several moments and without the least warning as to their intentions rushed madly across the field with the evident purpose of capturing the ship and lugging it to the navy side.

As Yell Leader Headerman reached the side of the ship first in the race with his colleagues, several army men rushed out and pulled them away in great confusion.

Their haste and expostulations were accounted for a second later when the whole ship went up with a terrific explosion that actually shook the stands. It was horseplay that might have ended fatally.

NEW COMPLAINT TO BE FILED AGAINST BETHLEHEM STEEL

Latest Merger With Midvale and Cambria Concerns to Be Included in Federal Action.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—A further complaint will be filed by the Federal Trade Commission against the Bethlehem Steel Corporation to include the new merger just announced with the Midvale and Cambria companies, Commissioner Gaskill declared today.

The commission expected to begin taking testimony in that case some time next month, but the latest merger bringing in the Midvale and Cambria concerns probably will mean a postponement until such time as the commission can investigate the entire combination.

The commission probably will reiterate its charges in the Lackawanna case, wherein the complaint specified that "acquisition by the Bethlehem Steel Corporation of the physical properties of the Lackawanna Steel Co. and of a controlling interest in the capital stock of the subsidiary corporations have a dangerous tendency unduly to restrain trade and commerce, and constitute unfair methods of competition."

PAUPERS' CONDITIONS LAID TO COUNTY COURTS' JURISDICTION

Secretary Talbot, of State Charities Board, Expects State Care to Be Sought.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 25.—Unfortunate and cruel conditions under which some of the pauper wards of Missouri counties exist, are a result of having their care left entirely in the hands of county courts under existing laws, according to Homer Talbot, Secretary of the State Board of Charities and Corrections. The conditions complained of were described in the Post-Dispatch Sunday magazine, Oct. 8.

"The kind of care given to the poor in Missouri counties with some notable exceptions, is a betrayal of the humanity and intelligence of the public," Talbot said.

The next legislature probably will be asked to provide for state institutions for the care of indigent persons.

HOLDUP MEN GET $479

After some delay and conversation to assure an impatient customer that the holdup was no joke, two armed men robbed the Barth Bros. grocery and meat market, 918 North Newstead avenue of a sum reported to be $479.63, at 6 p. m. yesterday, and escaped in an automobile.

As the men entered, displaying revolves, the customer inquired whether it was a joke. He was told otherwise, at some length, and forced to line up at the counter with one of the proprietors, Bernard Barth, his wife, and another customer. One of the robbers guarded them while the second man looted the cash register. Barth waas robbed about a year ago.

Collapses After Poisoning.

Arnold Voss, 21 years old, of 3944 Folsom avenue, collapsed on the steps of the Rock Springs Turner hall, 4358 Chouteau avenue, last night at 10 o'clock and at the city hospital it was found that he was suffering from bichloride of mercury poisoning. A bottle containing some of that poison was found in his clothing. A nephew, James Pohlmann, of 4500 Kennerly avenue, who was with him, said he could not explain the affair.

PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION NOT TAMPERED WITH

Status of Body Is Left Undisturbed by Constitutional Convention by a Vote of 29 to 12.

UTILITY REGULATION LEFT TO LEGISLATURE

"Thing Is Kept Alive by Bribery," Says Kansas City Member in Attack on Commission.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 25.—The Constitutional Convention today declined, by a vote of 29 to 12, to remove all municipal public utilities from the regulatory direction of the State Public Service Commission, which would have been tantamount to abolition of the commission, the national Government already having practically taken the railroads from the purview of the State bodies.

The status of the commission was left undisturbed by the convention, a large number of whose members are unfriendly to the regulatory body, however, by tentative adoption in committee of the whole of the following section:

"The service, practices and rates of all public utilities operated within any city or village shall be regulated in such manner as may be prescribed by law."

Members of the Committee on Counties, Cities and Towns, which drafted the section, said they intended by this to leave the question of utility regulation in the hands of the State Legislature to be exercisesd directly or through a statutory body as the Public Service Commission, as the Legislature may determine.

Amendment Fails.

A. H. Harrison of Steelville, however, tried to have the section amended so as to provide that all such regulation shall be in the manner prescribed by ordinanees of the several cities and villages. His amendment and that of R. A. Pearson of Joplin, seeking to prohibit the enactment of any statute enabling the abrogation of contract between any municipality and a utility, were defeated by identical votes, 29 to 12.

Discussion of the subject brought a violent attack on the Public Service Commission by Joseph B. Shannon of Kansas City who declared in favor of municipal utility control.

The late William Phelps, politician and railroad lobbyist, brought about creation of the public service commission in an effort to punish the railroads after Phelps had broken with the Missouri Pacific, Shannon said.

"Phelps later told me however," Shannon continued, "That the commission had worked in a manner directly opposite to what he had expected for not a grab or grant sought by a utility corporation had been refused by it. The same condition practically has existed since.

"Why the thing is kept alive by bribery, by giving jobs to all the crippled relatives of State legislators. Its a poor legislator who can't get his relatives on the payroll down here. It's just an institution for the benefit of the big rich. And you had better not make the mistake of writing this provision into the constitution."

The convention next week doubtless will finish consideration of the problems of county and city government on which it has put in practically all this week.

During the weeks since the election Nov. 7, the convention has ground along methodically, slowly, but effectively, accomplishing considerable on nearly every day.

Throughout its existence the convention has suffered from the volubility of some of its members who have consumed an infinite quantity of time in discussing questions in a manner that often has seemed sheer waste of the power of the conventon. Rather than enforce cloture and clip the wings of these talkative members, however, the less voluble delegates, who are far in the majority, resolved to let their brethern talk themselves out as they went along rather than try to cork them prematurely.

Winter Recess Near.

The result has been slow work, but every delegate with anything to say on any proposition, has said it.

The convention now faces its winter recess to permit the legislature to use those parts of the capitol constructed for it and most of which have been occupied by the convention, with only about two thirds of its work done.

The reports of the committees on education, taxation, bill of rights and miscellaneous provision which have been made to the convention have not received their first consideration by that body yet. Two committees, those on agriculture and redistricting, have not reported yet. Two reports now ar in hands of the counties, cities and towns and on judiciary. Both doubtless will be completed by the committee of the whole before the recess, Dec. 15.

No radical departure from State government as it has been known in Missouri, have found their way into the revision so far, and none is believed to be at all likely from the conservative average of the delegates composing the convention.

The convention adjourned at noon today until Monday morning.

Negro Justice Warns Lawyers Against Absence

Continues Cases When Attorneys Fail to Appear, but Says They Will Be Dismissed in Future.

Business was poor Friday in the Justice of the Peace Court of Crittenden E. Clark, the first negro to hold such an office in Missouri, who was inducted Thursday, and got down to the routine of his judicial work the next day.

Not that there weren't a number of cases on the docket for trial. There were. But not one of the dozen or more called by the Court Clerk were tried. The attorneys were not present in many cases. In others, there had been a request for continuance. One attorney requested a change of venue, which was granted.

However, the apparent lack of attention to work on the part of the attorneys did not disturb the determined and sincere mien of the new officer. He stopped long enough in his work of announcing continuances to tell the lawyers present and to announce to others generally that in the future the court would open at 11 a. m. promptly, and that if the attorneys were not present, their cases would be dismissed.

Policy in the Future.

"We cannot afford to continue the policy of delaying cases in this court," Clark said, "We are here to try cases, not to continue them because attorneys are not present. Some of these we have this morning are already many weeks old, and overdue. We shall be obliged to dismiss all cases where the attorneys do not come to court to try them, unless notice is given the court beforehand so continuances may be made or the case delayed a few minutes to allow the attorney to finish work elsewhere and come here for his case."

And thus did the Judge lay down the law to attorneys in the discharge of his duty to dispense justice, which he says, he will do with a "square deal for all, regardless of color."

Despite the lack of cases coming to trial, the little courtroom of Justice District No. 4, in the Pontiac Building at Seventh and Market streets, presented an interesting appearance. Here was a negro Justice sitting on the bench in Missouri, a State where slaves once were held, and one of the states over which the North argued in the attempt to retain a balance of power between proslavery and antislavery states in the Union. And Clark won his office over the strenuous objections and struggles of two opponents, each of whom tried to oust him, though his majority in the final election was more than 2000 votes.

Clark the Center of Interest.

Not the routine of cases made the courtroom interesting. It was not unusual to know that a man was being sued for a grocery debt; that a dry goods company had suits against several persons; that a man was bringing suit against another for property each held to be his own; or the dozen or so other cases that make the justice courts the mirror of life in America's cities. The center of interest to the few persons scattered about the room was Crittenden E. Clark, bootblack, newsboy, office boy, lawyer and then Justice of the Peace.

Clark is 52 years old. He has been practicing la win St. Louis for more than 25 years, having been graduated from the law school of Washington University in 1897. He was born in Cincinnati and after attending primary schools in Greensburg, Ind., about 40 miles from Cincinnati, removed to St. Louis in 1886. He was one of 10 children, and had to work before finishing his early education. He worked at odd jobs, helping to pay his way while he went to school.

Following his graduation from the university, he took up his law practice in the office of Robert S. McDonald at 721 Pine street, where he continued for the first few years of his profession. He later opened his own office.

AMENDMENTS SOUGHT FOR ZONE ORDINANCE

Maximum Height Allowed for Structures Declared to Have Kept Away Buildings.

A five-story addition will be built on the seven-story Missouri State Life Building, northwest corner of Fifteenth and Locust streets, at a cost of about $500,000, if an amendment to the zoning ordinance is passed. Recommendation for this amendment was made by the Zoning Committee of the City Plan Commission Friday as a result of a request from Marvin E. Singleton, president of the Missouri State Life Insurance Co.

The recommended amendment would cover only the erection of additions to buildings for which additions were planned. before the time the zoning ordinance became effective, which is the case with the Missouri State Life Building, and would not permit buildings, with additions, to be higher than the existing maximum of 150 feet.

The Zoning Committee's recommendation was made to the City Plan Commission, which will meet early in December. The commission, if it approves of the idea, would recommend passage of the amendment by the Board of Aldermen.

Maximum Height Allowed.

The zoning law provides the maximum height of 150 feet for the "downtown" district, east of Twelfth boulevard, 120 feet between Twelfth and Grand boulevards, and 140 feet for Grand boulevard, between Laclede and Cass avenues.

The Building Commissioner is given authority to increase these provisions by 10 per cent at his discretion. From 12 to 14 floors ordinarily measure about 150 feet. Director of Public Safety McKelvey, who also is Building Commissioner, is of the opinion that the ordinance should be amended to permit 150-foot structures on the main thoroughfares between Twelfth and Grand boulevards—Washington, Locust, Olive, Pine, Chestnut and Market.

Ordinance Kept Away Buildings.

McKelvey said that when Market and Olive streets are widened to 100 feet he would be in favor of a maximum of 250 feet for buildings on those streets, and that elsewhere he might favor a maximum of not more than 200 feet. He said that Eastern interests had planned to erect a hotel at the northeast corner of Twelfth boulevard and Locust street, at a cost of $2,000,000, but had been prevented from doing this by the zoning ordinance. A structure low enough to conform to the ordinance would not have returned sufficient income to pay, they felt.

He also cited the plan of a motion picture company to put up a 22-story office building on Locust street at a cost of possibly $1,500,000, which was abandoned because of this ordinance provision.

Frank Lawrence, secretary of the City Plan Commission, is trying to learn if the builders of any other structures erected before the passage of the zoning ordinance planned additions which they might wish to build now.

TRACK FOREMAN SHOT; TWO MEN ARRESTED

John Dipasquale, Wounded Six Times, Found Lying on Walk Firing Revolver.

John Dipasquale, 42 years old, of 912 Carr street, a track foreman for the Terminal Railroad Association, was found lying on the sidewalk near Tenth and Biddle streets dangerously wounded shortly before 11 o'clock last night, after pistol shots had aroused patrolmen at the Carr street police station, a block away. Two men fleeing west on Biddle were arrested in connection with the shooting, immediately afterward.

Dipasquale's clothing around the chest was burning and he was suffering with six wounds. At the city hospital it was found bullets from a .45-caliber automatic pistol had taken effect, one over the heart, one in the right breast, three in the abdomen and one in the right thigh.

Detectives heard the shots, and as they ran from the police station saw two men running, one cutting through Columbian Square, the other continuing west along Biddle street. They gave chase. Detective-Sergeant Kistler found Dipasquale lying on the walk near the corner, still firing a small .22-caliber revolver.

The ignition of his clothing was caused by the shot, officers said. On the walk near his side was an automatic pistol empty, and eight .32-caliber shells.

The two men caught running gave their names and addresses as Pote Grammarinari, 39, and his son, Nick, 19, both of 1129 North Eleventh street. They said they were fruit dealers. They said that they knew nothing of the shooting, but had heard that there was a fire and had been running to see it.

Dipasquale had lived at the Carr street address for years with his wife, Grace, and a daughter, Mrs. Rosa Caleco, 18.

FULL POWERS FOR MUSSOLINI REGIME

Tired and Hungry Deputies Pass Empowering Bill Amid Considerable Hilarity.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Nov. 25.—The Chamber of Deputies today approved the law conferring full power on the Mussolini Government until Dec. 31, 1923. The vote was 275 to 90.

The entire afternoon was passed in the discussion of the bill granting to the Government full powers for bureaucratic and fiscal reforms. At 9 o'clock tonight Deputies on all sides of the chamber, pleading that they were hungry and tired, asked that the sitting be adjourned to Sunday, but Premier Mussolini rose and said: "I prefer that the discussion be concluded tonight."

The President asked for a vote on the subject, whereupon all the Deputies, including those who desired adjournment, approved of Mussolini's suggestion amid considerable hilarity.

U. R. WANTS YEARLY $865,228 ON COST OF CONSOLIDATION

Company Would Include $11,536,385 Paid to Brokers in 1899 in Valuation of $70,000,000.

CLAIM BEFORE STATE PUBLIC SERVICE BODY

Would Require Fares of 12,360,400 Car Riders at 7 Cents to Pay Fair Return Annually on Item.

Outside of physical property, which it wants valued at present day prices instead of prices actually paid, the largest single item entering into the valuation of $70,000,000 which the United Railways wants the Public Service Commission to place upon it, is $11,536,385, paid in 1899 to the promoters of the consolidation of the various city lines then existing into one system.

"The Pennsylvania commission in valuing the property of the Pittsburg street railway took into consideration consolidation costs actually paid by the company," the company's brief declares. "That is what we want this commission to do. There is no speculation or conjecture about our claim. The actual cost of the consolidation is established by the evidence."

Whatever valuation the commission fixes for the railways, that valuation henceforth will control street car fares in St. Louis. The commission will be bound to establish a rate of fare that will give the company a fair return upon that valuation.

What Item Really Means.

If the sum of $11,536,385 is included in the valuation, as the company is insisting, car riders will be compelled to pay $865,228 annually as fair return on that item alone, if 7½ per cent were the rate of return fixed by the commission. In other words, the 7-cent fares of 12,360,400 car riders would go each year to give the company interest on the sum it turned over in 1899 to Brown Brothers and the Maryland Trust Co. of Baltimore as, in the words of the brief, "compensation of their own services and also their expenses incident to the acquisition, including brokers' fees, bankers' fees and compensation to the promoters."

In the consolidation the sum turned over to promoters was $29,379,610, that being the par value of securities of the United Railways given. However, the market value of the securities at the time was below par, so that the cash worth of the securities was only $11,536,385, the brief states. It does not disclose, however, whether the promoters ultimately realized more than this sum by sale of their securities.

Explanation of Transaction.

The transactions is explained in the brief, after an argument as to the admissibility of some figure to represent the cost of the consolidation, as follows:

"The only question that can be made the basis of contention then is the amount of the allowance: The capital stocks of the underlying companies acquired by the syndicates were sold and transferred, together with $1,000,000 to the United Railways. As purchase price for the properties thus acquired, the United Railways turned over to the syndicates United Railways 4 per cent bonds of the par value of $22,885,610, United Railways preferred stock of a par value of $11,507,485 and United Railways common stock of a par value of $17,261,227, and assumed the indebtedness of the underlying companies. These amounts, added to the indebtedness of the underlying companies, less the $1,000,000 cash advanced, fixes the par of the purchase price paid to the syndicates by the United Railways Co. at $63,925,930.

"The difference between the total amount expended by the syndicates, $34,546,320, to acquire the underlying companies, and the par value of the consideration given to the syndicates by the United Railways Co., $63,925,930, or $29,379,610, represents the cost to the United Railways for the services rendered and expenses incurred in effecting the consolidation, measured in the par value of securities given to the syndicates.

Cost of Consolidation.

"The securities thus given to the syndicates were, at the time of the exchange, selling below par, so that if, instead of making the exchange, the United Railways had marketed its securities at the then prevailing market price and had used the proceeds of such sale in payment of the purchase price, the amount it would have paid for the properties of the underlying companies would have been $46,082,705. This would have made the actual cost of consolidation $11,536,385—the difference between the amount paid by the syndicates for the underlying properties and the amount paid to the syndicate by the United Railways Co.

"In support of our contention that the expenditure made to effect the consolidation was a provident one, the following facts are repeated:

"A limited transfer privilege was in existence as between certain lines, prior to the consolidation; but the transfer privilege, as it then existed, was only one-fourth as liberal as that which came into existence through the consolidation—that is to say, only 25 per cent of the transfers now given would have been possible without the consolidation. The ratio between transfers issued and cash fares, at the present time is about 54 per cent—that is, about 54 per cent of those who pay cash fares take transfers and ride on them.

Effect on Transfers.

"In 1900, out of 107,000,000 revenue passengers carried, 34,000,000 availed themselves of the transfer privilege, of which number it would have been possible for only 16,000,000 to have received transfers before the consolidation.

"In 1910, the number of revenue passengers was 230,000,000, the number of transfer passengers was 104,000,000, and the number of transfers possible before consolidation was 34,000,000.

"In 1920, the number of revenue passengers was 287,000,000; the number of transfer passengers was 154,000,000; the number of transfers possible before consolidation was 42,000,000.

Savings Claimed to Patrons.

"Based on these figures, the amount of saving in extra fares to the car riders in 1900 was $909,000, in 1910 it was $3,465,000, and in 1920 it was $7,794,000.

"These savings, capitalized at 7½ per cent, would show, respectively, a capitalization of $12,000,000, $46,000,000, and $102,000,000; and a computation of the present worth of these savings as of Jan. 1, 1900, on a 7½ per cent basis, would show, respectively, $11,000,000, $20,800,000, and $22,700,000—that is to say in order to effect the savings realized by the riding public in those respective years, the expenditures of those amounts on Jan. 1, 1900, would have been justifiable."

Mother and Foster Parent in Fight for Child After Wealthy Oklahoman Dies

Young Unmarried Woman Declaring Baby Was Taken From Her, Wishes Adoption Set Aside.

Ida Georgine Boening is just two years old and therefore is in no position to decide about mothers. Ida Georgine's real mother, Miss Audie Dunlap, 28 years old of Fort Smith, Ark., and Mrs. Frank Boening, much older, of 4766 Genevieve avenue, the only mother the little girl knows, are in no position to decide about it either.

The question is one of hearts, and, although Miss Dunlap has tried to make it a legal puzzle by filing suit here Friday to have adoption papers set aside, it is palpable that the question will remain something to have feelings about. Miss Dunlap is sorry that Ida Georgine was adopted and wishes to have her baby while Mrs. Boening is very happy as a result of the adoption and desires to keep Ida Georgine. Both say they love her.

A St. Louis jury which is not supposed to have prejudices will decide whose little girl Ida Georgine is to be. Meanwhile, down in Oklahoma attorneys for Miss Dunlap and the Boenings have united in a suit to have the child declared the legitimate daughter of the late Joseph Alexander, known as potato "king" of that State, who died Feb. 9, 1921, leaving an estate valued at more than $1,000,000.

Edgar H. McCulloch, attorney for Miss Dunlap in the suit here, and Mrs. Boening yesterday presented the opposing viewpoints.

Ida Georgine was born Nov. 3, 1920, in a private hospital on Laclede avenue. Her mother and hospital attaches say that Joseph Alexander paid all the expenses and visited the mother several times. It is further alleged that Alexander accompanied Miss Dunlap to St. Louis, that she was "the girl he has befriended," who was brought to a hospital here and who was mentioned in newspaper reports which told how Alexander was kidnaped on Oct. 30, 1920, by men who demanded $25,000.

Child Taken Away.

They met in Fort Smith, where she was a stenographer, in 1919, she says. There Alexander was something of a figure because of his 10,000 acres of Oklahoma land that lies just across the State line from Fort Smith. He was a bachelor, 48 years old.

At the hospital, she says, she was informed that her new-born baby was crippled; that it would be necessary to have it placed in a children's hospital. She declares she knows nothing of the signature on papers of adoption which Mrs. Boening holds. In her delirium she may have signed anything, Miss Dunlap asserts.

Somebody took her child away from her when it was 11 days old and she says she believed the explanations. She left the hospital and returned to Fort Smith. Then Joseph Alexander died. He had given her a little property, but she did not have money enough to come at once to St. Louis for the baby.

Late in February she came to St. Louis and found that Mildred, the name she had decided on for the child, was the legally adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Boening. She pleaded with Mrs. Boening to give back her baby, her lawyer states, but the pleas were ignored.

During 1921 she made three trips to St. Louis in an effort to recover the child. Mrs. Boening would not permit her to see Ida Georgine. Once, her attorney says, she did get a peek at her baby, but it was only a peek. She sent the baby a birthday present, but it was returned unopened. She consulted McCulloch and arranged to file suit.

Worked to Get Fees.

McCulloch says that he investigated Miss Dunlap before he took the case and maintains that Alexander has been the only man in her life. The mother has worked since she left St. Louis in order to save money for lawyer's fees. Alexander left her nothing in his will, bequeathing his entire estate to a sister and brother. The estate still is in the hands of an executor.

Miss Dunlap protests that she does not wish possession of Ida Georgine because there is a chance that the money will come to her. She says she desires Ida Georgine because she loves her.

A reporter found Mrs. Boening washing an outside window. Her husband, Frank Boening, has been kept at home for six months with an injured knee.

With the husband lending a word, and with Ida Georgine asleep in the next room, Mrs. Boening told her side of it:

"I had wanted a baby for a long time, so about four year ago we began watching the advertisements. We saw one pretty soon and I wrote. I got no answer. So we thought maybe they'd patched up their quarrel. Then in November, 1920, I received a letter from this doctor—two years after, mind you. He told me that my baby girl is ready.

"I went out to the hospital and the next evening I took my little girl home in a quilt because I had not made any clothes for her. I knew that she hadn't any name, but does she need a name to be loved? I took her for love. And I told the neighbors her father and mother had died. It was right to tell them that because I must stand by my baby. Of her mother and father she knew nothing, so why should she be hurt?

"We have legal adoption papers. To the doctor and Mr. Smith of the court I gave references and they said it was all right for us to take her. But it was weeks until we got the papers. Why didn't this girl tell us then that she wanted her baby?

Foster Mother's Version.

"Just as soon as the christening clothes were ready we took her to the church.

"My baby was an awful sick baby when I took her from the hospital. There hasn't been a night when I haven't cuddled her just like my own flesh and blood.

"Then, after this man dies, the girl comes here and makes me an offer for money for Ida Georgine. Her and her lawyer sat right here in this parlor and offered me checks. She told me that I could get another baby. Should I change my baby just like one would a doll? I took this baby when she weighs only four and a half pounds and nursed her for two years into a fine, pretty little girl.

"The next time she came I wouldn't let her see Ida Georgine. I did send her birthday present back. She sent it November 24.

"I told her: 'If you really love your baby, you will go away quietly.'

"I am going to stand by my baby. If the neighbors talk, we will sell this place and move away. I will bring her up like a good mother should. Let her come to court, the Judge will permit me to keep my little girl."

FORMER ST. CHARLES CLERK REINDICTED

George B. Raus Furnishes $6000 Bail on Six Counts Charging Embezzlement.

Indictment of George B. Raus, 47 years old, former Republican Circuit Clerk of St. Charles County, by the October grand jury, on six counts charging embezzlement of County funds during 1919-20, was made public yesterday when Raus appeared at St. Charles and furnished $6000 bond, $1000 for each count. He lives in East St. Louis.

He previously had been indicted on four charges, after State auditors reported a $4234 shortage in his accounts March 18, 1920. He was acquitted of two charges in May, 1921, by a jury in the St. Charles Circuit Court, and a third was dismissed. The fourth is pending.

The amounts named in the six indictments returned by the grand jury in its report early in November, were not disclosed. His trial is set for the February term of Circuit Court.

Raus served only a part of his term, resigning March 25, 1920, after the shortages were reported. He was elected in 1918 and took office Jan. 1, 1919.

The first charges of discrepancies in his accounts were made by the St. Charles County Court early in February, 1920, when the Court ordered him to pay the county $1294 in fees and fines for which it was alleged he had not accounted. This was paid Feb. 11, 1920. An audit then was ordered by the Court, and is said to have shown the larger shortage.

Raus made no statement yesterday when he went to St. Charles to furnish bond. The bond was signed by Theodore Pundman, a St. Charles coal dealer.

FINANCIAL PLIGHT OF FARMERS PUT BEFORE PRESIDENT

Senator Watson Outlines Plan for Their Relief, Also to Curb Profiteering in Food and Clothing.

FORCEFUL PROGRAM URGED ON EXECUTIVE

Plain Marking of Wholesale Prices So That Buyer May Know Profit That Is Being Made, Suggested.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Measures to relieve the financial plight of the farmers and curb profiteering, particularly in food and clothing, were discussed with President Harding today by Senator Watson, Republican, Indiana.

The visit of the Indiana Senator to the White House followed a conference in his office at which a number of Senators from Western states talked over a possible legislative program acceptable to the West.

Picturing to the President how the farmers are generally unable to get enough for their crops to pay for harvesting and shipping, while consumers pay high prices, Senator Watson urged the immediate necessity of some forceful program to put agriculture on its feet and squeeze out the long line of profit taking between producer and consumer.

View of Relief for Farmer.

Senator Watson's view is that any program of relief for the farmer must go further than the questions of freight rates, interest rates, and tariff rates. While these may have a part in the farmers' dilemma, the Senator declared that "the man who produces food and clothing can get very little for it, while the man who needs to buy it has to pay an unconscionable high price." Watson told the President that he favored the program for agricultural credits, but that he feared it would not strike at the root of the question.

If producers were compelled to accept ruinous prices when they finally did come to sell cattle and crops, he argued, loans would only be a palliative, and he urged that while the financial distress of the farmers was being temporarily relieved by liberal credits, an exhaustive study be undertaken to find some practicable means of bringing producers and consumers together and eliminating large profits in between.

Senator Watson also told President Harding that he already had undertaken a study of the antiprofiteering laws of other countries and particularly was examining those which appeared to be meeting with some success. So far as his study had proceeded, the Senator said, he did not believe price fixing by Government or any other agency would be successful, but he was inclined rather to a plan which would expose profits all along the line and depend upon an aroused public opinion to grant reasonable profits to business and at the same time drive out extortions.

Plan to Control Prices.

Marking in plain figures the wholesale prices of articles of food and clothing transported in interstate commerce, so that the buyer at retail may see what profit he is being asked to pay to a retailer, is one of the plans which Senator Watson is examining. There are several others.

President Harding listened to Senator Watson with deep interest as the latter pictured potato crops abandoned; fruit crops compelled to rot and grain crops unmoved while farmers faced mortgage foreclosures. Some definite plans are to be discussed with the President later, and meanwhile, Senator Watson said the program of agricultural credits and other measures for temporary relief would be hastened in Congress.

Western Senators, after a series of informal conferences, have taken the initiative in the framing of a legislative program for the remainder of the extra session and for the regular session of Congress.

The Legislative Program.

The program as outlined provides for the consideration of the Dyer Anti-Lynching bill after the vote Monday on the administration resolution authorizing a loan of $5,000,000 to Liberia. Several days will be allotted to discussion of the anti-lynching measure and if it becomes apparent it cannot be passed, as some Republican senators believe will soon become certain, it will be laid aside in favor of the shipping bill.

Senate leaders are agreed that the shipping bill should be kept before the Senate as desired by the President but it should not be allowed to imperil passage of the regular appropriation bills.

The Western Senators are understood to have virtually demanded further that the shipping bill be not given exclusive precedence over three other measures which they have notified leaders they shall insist upon. These measures include rural credits legislation, now being conditioned by members of the Agricultural Committee and likely to be reported to the Senate within a week; the McNary bill appropriating a total of $250,000,000 to be expended over a period of six years in reclamation works, and some measure designed to bring about a reduction in railroad freight rates.

Party Conference Likely.

The Western Senators were represented as feeling that a party conference should be called next week to draft a definite program so that the Senate would have a definite plan of work and the country might be informed as to what legislation might be expected. Several of the Western Senators are understood to have given in detail their ideas about Senate leadership and to have been emphatic in their demand for use of stronger tactics by leaders in the future.

MESTON'S FAILING HEALTH ASCRIBED AS SUICIDE CAUSE

President of Emerson Electric Co. Had Been in Gradual Physical Decline for a Year, Friends State.

BUSINESS AFFAIRS IN EXCELLENT SHAPE

Examination by Coroner's Physician Revealed Cyanide of Potassium in Stomach of Dead Man; Body Cremated.

Failing health is the motive assigned by friends and business associates for the suicide of Thomas M. Meston, president of the Emerson Electric Manufacturing Co., who was found unconscious in the company's office, 2024 Washington avenue, at 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon. Heart disease originally was assigned as the cause of death, but an examination of Meston's stomach by the Coroner's physician yesterday showed the presence of cyanide of potassium. A verdict of suicide was returned.

Friends traced a gradual decline in Meston's physical condition for about a year. It dated from a period of severe sickness which he suffered, following a nervous breakdown on the part of Mrs. Meston. These two incidents affected him greatly and he never fully recovered his buoyant spirits and his physical activity.

L. L. Whittemore, secretary of the company, told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that Meston had consulted with physicians many times within the last year, and had been advised that he must take exercise. Following this order it was his custom to get off the street car several blocks from his home each evening and walk the remaining distance. About a month ago he discontinued the walks.

Friends could point to no specific evidence of despondency, but said that his manner at times was that of one who had little interest in his surroundings.

Business in Excellent Shape.

Meston's business affairs were in excellent shape, Whittemore said. The company's volume of business in the last year exceeded expectations.

It was reported that Meston carried one policy of about $25,000 with the Equitable Life Assurance Society. It was said that his entire insurance hardly would exceed $50,000.

No traces of the poison which caused his death were found in his office. Officers of the company said that a quantity of it was kept in the plant store room, but was issued only on requisition. It was used in hardening processes and was kept in crystal form.

Whittemore heard Meston gasping and when he entered his office the president was leaning backward in his chair with his eyes partly closed. Whittemore said he straightened him up in the chair whereupon the guttural breathing stopped. Whittemore than called other officers of the company and a nurse, who attempted to induce artificial respiration.

Whittemore said that there were no convulsions and that Meston's face was not even drawn. There was no indication that he was suffering pain.

Meston's Body Cremated.

Funeral services were held yesterday for Meston at the Wagoner chapel. The body was cremated.

Meston was 51 years old and lived at 501 Clara avenue. He is survived by his widow, who was Miss Gertrude S. Phillips, two young daughters, Susan and Elizabeth, and a son, Robert, by a former marriage. The son is now in Johannesburg, South Africa. Two brothers, A. J. and E. R. Meston, reside in New York. Alroy S. Phillips, an attorney, is his brother-in-law.

Meston was born in Scotland and went to Canada with his parents when a child. He came to St. Louis in 1886, obtaining employment as a clerk with the Simmons Hardware Co. He remained with that company until 1897, when he was made secretary of the Emerson Electric Manufacturing Co. He had been president of the company for about 12 years. The plant was closed yesterday because of Meston's death.

Week's Births 234, Deaths 134.

There were 234 births and 184 deaths in St. Louis last week. Organic heart disease caused the death of 28 persons, 21 died of Bright's disease, 20 of pneumonia, 19 of cancer, and 13 of tuberculosis. There were 5 deaths by accidents, 2 homicides, and 2 suicides.

Divorce Decree Vacated After Tiernan Marries

me to sign a paper. I said no I did not want the divorce, if he wanted one, let him sue.

"Then he told me that Notre Dame wanted him to get a divorce, and that we could remarry after satisfying the public.

"Mr. Jellison brought me a divorce paper, but I did not sign. Then they threatened that my husband might sue, and get the custody of the children. Finally Mr. Tiernan took action, after telling me that Rev. Father John McGinn, at Notre Dame, had said to him, 'Don't you think you had better divorce that woman?' Then Mr. Feiwell entered the case.

"I signed a paper then not to contest the suit and to give my husband the custody of the two daughters. I went to Chicago last Sunday evening, returned Wednesday afternoon, went away that evening to drive to Anderson and came back Thursday, to find that he had a divorce. He left me a note saying I was a free woman."

Tells of Property Agreement.

Answering a question from the Judge, Mrs. Tiernan said that there had been a property agreement before the divorce, by which she was to get half of the proceeds from sale of their home and furniture, but she said she received none of the $2000 salary check he drew just before the divorce.

She and her husband continued to live together after the divorce petition was filed until just before it was granted, Mrs. Tiernan claimed, directly contradicting her husband's testimony.

Judge Montgomery then asked Jellison if he had gone to Mrs. Tiernan's home with divorce papers for her to sign. "I don't recall," said the prosecutor. "What, you don't recall within as short a time as a month?" asked the Judge.

Judge and Prosecutor in Wrangle.

"If your honor please," said Jellison, "I can explain. But I don't think it proper to call on me at this time for an explanation of my conduct. It is not proper for the Court to criticise the Prosecuting Attorney on information derived from the newspapers."

"The Court had not done that," said the Judge. "Let me set you right. I have not critised you at all. It is true these developments were called to my attention by the papers, but I then sent for the defendant and she has given her testimony in open court, so that I cannot be said to have acted on evidence told me behind closed doors. Moreover, I wanted to give you an opportunity to protect yourself."

The prosecutor replied: "I will protect myself. I don't think there should be any insinuation of collusion on my part. There were only a few parties to this case when it was filed, and I had absolutely no conversation with either Mr. Feiwell or Mr. Sands or yourself about the case."

"Why did you do practically nothing, and offer a mere perfunctory defense?" asked the Judge.

Denies Collusion in Case.

"I think I can satisfy the court, and everyone else, anyway, that there was no collusion on my part," said Jellison. "I can satisfy the court unless the court is prejudiced against me."

"You do not mean to say the court is prejudiced?" asked Judge Montgomery. Jellison made an indefinite reply, and went on: "If I should be asked whether this woman's statement of my connection with the case is true, I must answer that it is not. I went into the cross-examination as thoroughly, or more so, than is the custom in this court or any court under similar circumstances. I did put up a bona fide defense. Each and every act of mine in office has been so.

"Why did not you see this witness?" insisted the Judge. "I will get to that," said Jellison. "All I had done was to administer an oath, which I had full right to do under the 1919 statutes. I was well aware of this—although it appears that someone else was not. I took Mrs. Tiernan's affidavit of residence either at her home or at my office. My only interest in her divorce suit was to see that she should get some lawyer other than the ones who acted in the Poulin case, because that case was still pending on appeal and Mrs. Tiernan might divulge some information to them which would hurt her case and the State's case. She called me many times, and whatted me to come to her home. I only went a few times. If she says she signed this affidavit at the residence she probably did."

Presses for An Answer.

The prosecutor was cut short with the Judge's question:

"Why did not you see this woman?"

"Well, your honor," said Jellison, "I telephoned the Tiernan home the day before the case was called. The professor answered that his wife was out of town but had given orders for her attorney to withdraw her complaint, so that her husband might get the divorce on his complaint. He came down to the office and gave me some information, saying that she would offer no defense and that he was going ahead. He said he had agreed to allow her $150 a month."

"Did you go no further?" demanded the Judge.

"Well, I did what I was supposed to, I entered my appearance—" began Jellison.

Again Judge Montgomery stopped him.

"You were appointed to defend this case," he insisted.

"Well, she had her attorney here," replied Jellison, "and the statements made by Mr. Tiernan on the stand gave him just grounds for a divorce."

Judge's View of Case.

The Judge then commented:

"You misunderstand the situation, Mr. Jellison: You were not called for the purpose of the court criticising you. But enough has been said that was not fair to pass over without giving you a chance.

"I feel that the court is justified in setting aside this decree. I have given the defendants an exception, although it was not asked. I have also given you an exception, Mr. Jellison. The case will be set for hearing Dec. 11. This will give Mr. Tiernan ample time to get back from wherever he is.

"The prosecutor is discharged from the case and William E. Miller, chief juvenile officer, is appointed, to defend the plaintiff, Mrs. Tiernan, against the cross-complaint and to protect the defendant's interests. Mr. Miller was called because there are children in the case, whose interests it is his duty to protect. He will represent the State as an attorney and as a juvenile officer."

Tiernan's Attorney Heard.

Judge Montgomery was about to close court when Sands, attorney for Mr. Tiernan, asked to be heard.

Sands said Tiernan had told him that he had been living entirely separate and apart from his wife. "I had no reason to doubt that, and I have now no reason to doubt it," said Sands. He said he had questioned his client as to the legality of his living under the same roof with his wife if a divorce was desired, but that Tiernan had set him right on that point, showing him a 1922 ruling which made this allowable.

Judge Montgomery finally closed the discussion and the court by saying:

"I have passed no opinion as to the facts in this case. I have merely set it over in order to determine these facts. The court has unlimited power over its judgments during the current term of court. There 's no use of further discussion. The decree of divorce is revoked and Mr. Tiernan is married to this woman."

Reasons for Reopening Case.

In opening the short session of court Judge Montgomery addressed the summoned attorneys as follows:

"Gentlemen, there was a divorce granted here day before yesterday. Today the newspapers say that John P. Tiernan has married. They quote Mrs. Tiernan as saying that it was all a put up job, this matter of a divorce, intimating that fraud was practiced upon this court.

"If what they say is true, it called upon the court to do something. I felt obliged, after reading the papers and being spoken to by representatives of the papers, to find out the facts. She tells an amazing, almost inconceivable story, yet all she says cannot be false. There is much truth, I am sure, in what she says.

"Now, during a term of a court, the court has complete control over its judgments and decrees. Until a term is concluded, it can vacate, set aside or alter such a divorce. The Judge could change his mind as to whether husband or wife should be granted the divorce. To do this, there must be warrant in the evidence, but to vacate a decree, a Judge may act on information coming to him even privately.

"This suggests that the case ought to be heard again when a defense shall be made. I had said to Mr. Jellison, 'because of your previous connection with the case, could you properly defend it?' He said yes, there was no reason why he could not. The case came on and was tried.

"But, Mr. Jellison, you did not even get in touch with this woman who might have thrown some light on the case. It happens that she was out of town, but you could have continued the case. You only asked a few questions. There was nothing else to do but grant the divorce. The evidence abundantly justified it."

TIERNAN AND BRIDE SAID TO BE IN CHICAGO

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—Prof. John Patrick Tiernan, until recently law instructor at the University of Notre Dame, and involved in the Tiernan-Poulin criminal case to establish the paternity of Mrs. Tiernan's child, is in Chicago with his bride. He was divorced from Mrs. Augusta Tiernan Thursday.

On Friday he and Mrs. Blanche D. Brimmer of Hansell, Ia., appeared at Waukegan, Ill., and tried vainly to obtain a marriage license. From there they went to Crown Point, Ind., where they were married early this morning. They afterward came to Chicago.

The present Mrs. Tiernan, who was a divorced woman, was the daughter of the Rev. Charles H. Hawn, pastor of the Hansell Methodist Church. Arriving in Hammond, Ind., on their way from Crown Point to Chicago, Prof. Tiernan admitted his identity and marriage, adding, "I have found a woman who is as different from my former wife as day is from night."

Tiernan's second marriage complicates the matters by the introduction of two more children—those of his second wife and her first husband.

The bride's father says his daughter and Tiernan had been corresponding for several months. "Neither he nor his wife ever saw Tiernan," he said, and they do not know where he became acquainted with their daughter. When she left Hansell, she said she was going to Chicago to become the wife of Tiernan, and that they would reside in Chicago."

Dispatches from Crown Point say that Tiernan, registering as "John P. Mullen of Chicago," and his bride-to-be, who registered under her right name, occupied rooms at the Commercial Hotel there last night and departed without paying the bill. The hotel threatens suit.

Tiernan's Bride Now Married for Third Time, Report States.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

AREDALE, IA., Nov. 25.—Mrs. Blanche Brimmer, who was married to John P. Tiernan of South Bend, Ind., today, came here three years ago when her father, the Rev. Charles H. Hawn, a Methodist preacher, was transferred from Plainfield. Her name at that time was Mrs. Rash, but little was known of her first marriage. She held herself apart from the rest of the villagers. Later, it was learned that she had wedded Brimmer at Kansas City. He was in the paving business and had come here on a number of occasions.

Early last spring, she returned to her parents' home. She was seen but little.

Her father was pastor here for three years and was transferred only recently to Hansell, a village near here. Further than admitting that he was aware of his daughter's plans to wed Tiernan, he refused to discuss the case.

"It's her affair, and you'll have to talk to her," he told a reporter.

Wabash Railway to make radio test

Monday night, Nov. 27th, the Wabash Railway will conduct a radio test on their train No. 5—The Western Limited—leaving St. Louis at 10:30 P. M. for Kansas City.

The only aerial used will be a "loop aerial" consisting of a small coil of wire 18 inches square, which will be placed on the floor of the all-steel club-car by the side of the receiving set. No outside wires will be used and no ground connection made. The doors and windows of the car will be kept closed.

The Van-Ashe Radio Co., of 210 N. 10th St., St. Louis, which is making the experiment in conjunction with the signal department of the Wabash Railway, promises to reproduce the midnight program (between 11 P. M. and 1 A. M.) of Station K S D—the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

It is also expected to pick up the broadcasting of stations at Davenport, Ia.; Ft. Worth, Tex.; Atlanta, Ga.; Denver, Colo., and Chicago.

If you are planning a trip West, we invite you to arrange to use this Wabash train No. 5 leaving Union Station at 10:30 P. M. and Delmar Av. at 10:45 P. M. Monday for Kansas City, and witness this tremendously interesting event which we expect will be an innovation in Radio demonstration aboard a moving train.

NO MATTER HOW MUCH IS SPENT TO IMPROVE RIVER, SAVING TO BUSINESS WILL BE GREATER, GEN. BEACH SAYS

Chief of Army Engineers, on Inspection Trip Down Mississippi, in Pointing Out Lower Cost to Shippers, Cites Economy in Labor and in Time—No Freight Tieups to Contend With in Transportation by Water.

Caruthersville, Mo., Which Geographies Always Have Shown to Be on the River, Discovered as Much, in a Business Way, Only Last Week—Helena, Ark., Awakes to to Opportunity—Memphis Losing No Time.

By WILLIAM F. ALLEN.

"I presume that most St. Louisans wouldn't know that their city was on the Mississippi River if their geographies hadn't told them so in childhood," began Major-General Lansing H. Beach. "Few persons in any of the large cities upon any of our rivers seem as conscious as the 'darkey' preacher who called upon his congregation to 'bress the Lawd because He put all the big towns so close to the rivers.'"

The General, who is chief of the Engineers' Corps of the United States Army and as such in charge of all river and harbor improvement work in the nation, was talking with the correspondent of the Post-Dispatch on the deck of the steamer Mississippi, as she lay at the levee in Memphis. He had just traversed the river from St. Louis to Memphis and was feeling his way to a statement later on that "whatever the expenditure necessary to prepare all the rivers of the great Mississippi system for dependable navigation, the saving to commerce would be greater." Nor was he thinking in mere millions. Senator Reed's recent advocacy of the expenditure of $1,000,000,000 on those rivers had just been mentioned to him.

The General always is in a dilemma when he begins to think and talk about rivers as arteries of trade. He is much like a symphony player at a jazz ball. He feels like it, but he scarcely dares.

It's something like this. By nature and experience, Gen. Beach is Babbittical on the subject of transportation upon inland waters. He is a booster. He would wear a badge if he thought it would do any good. He glows at mention of the subject and dusts up superlatives.

Many Years and Many Things

In his long journey from West Point and a Second Lieutenancy to Chief of Engineers and a Major-Generalship, he has had frequent assignments dealing with the rivers and harbors of the United States. He recalls that in the late '80s, when he was stationed at Duluth, there came a commission of British experts who smugly reported that the United States never would storm English supremacy in steel, because iron ore and proper coal were too far apart. He has lived to see that distance melted to nothing through water transportation and efficient terminals upon the Great Lakes and the United States assume world domination in steel.

He recalls that later, when he was transferred to Pittsburg, he learned from a steel company president that Pittsburg could not be were it not for the movement of millions of tons of coal upon the Monongahela River.

He recalls that, when at Cincinnati, he saw the largest tonnage ever thrust upon one single motive unit, whether railroad or ocean, ride down the Ohio River—56,000 tons of coal lashed to the steamer Sprague, which, by the way, has "of St. Louis" upon her stern.

He recalls that wherever his station, the big towns were close to the water.

So, primed with a question on inland water transportation, he is quite ready to draw deeply from his well of experience and pour like a Chamber of Commerce president.

But—when the river spirit tugs, the engineering instinct warns. Engineers are supposed to be without enthusiasms: They are presumed to talk in figures alone. Figures don't lie. But they understate as often as the "booster" overstates. Even when he is driven back upon figures, the General's dilemma does not dissolve, for the law is that the Chief of Engineers shall not speak of projects in figures until Congress has approved the project.

"Cost Is Best Argument"

However, mixing engineering exactitude with his river convictions, the General laid down certain facts which, he said, supported the inevitableness of the revival of the use of the Mississippi and its tributaries, for shipping, not in any desultory way, but as a great, growing movement.

"Let us approach it on the basis of cost," he said. "Cost is the best argument to give an American business man. River transportation is cheaper than rail transportation. However that may be contradicted, I still maintain it. First there is motive power. The cost of motive power by water is approximately one-third the cost by rail. In crews, for instance. The crew of the steamboat is virtually the only labor required in water transportation. On the other hand, on the best railroads of the United States, the crew required in the actual moving of the freight is only 20 per cent of the labor total required. There are maintenance of way men and repair men and hostlers and switchmen.

MAJOR-GENERAL LANSING H. BEACH.

"I know some railroad men point to the cost of channel maintenance on rivers. They are asking, in effect, that the American people go back 100 years. There was a time when there were toll roads in this country. But the people have wiped them out of existence. They long ago adopted the principle that whatever facility is open to the free use of the public shall be maintained by the public.

"Second, the time of transit by water is shorter than by rail. What a clamor railroad men make to that statement. Nevertheless, it is true. Memphis shippers to New Orleans by water allow four days. They allow two weeks by rail and if the shipment is to make a specified ocean liner, they allow three weeks to be certain.

No Traffic Jams on River

"The greater speed by water can be explained in many ways. The barge encounters no large transportation centers. These centers make for congestion and delay. I cite to you the city of Toledo, where it has taken as long as 21 days to move a freight car across the city. Your shippers in St. Louis know what it is to get a car from the east to the west side of the river.

"I know one instance where a shipper had the choice of shipment down the river to New Orleans or shipment by rail to catch a certain boat. His consignment consisted of three carloads. He chose rail. The first car arrived on one date, the second on another and the third missed the boat altogether. That is another reason for speedier movement by water. When the unit begins to move it remains a unit to destination. Freight trains are broken up and remade at divisions and shipments are scattered to the winds.

"Then, there is length of time required to handle the cargo. It is faster and cheaper to handle cargoes into barges than to and from freight cars. Let me illustrate. At 7 a. m., in season, the cotton wharves at New Orleans are filled with cotton to be transferred to steamers. The ship's tackle gets busy and by 2 p. m. the dock capacity of cotton has been stowed away in the holds. Meanwhile, the railroads have been delivering other cotton. The ship has eaten that up, too. The ship stops at 2 o'clock but not the railroads. They keep piling it in and continue piling it in until at 7 a. m., when they again have the dock filled. The ship takes on in seven hours what it requires the railroads 24 hours to handle.

Big Saving in Breakage

"Still another point—an ocean steamer will gobble up a tonnage which requires a string of box cars from four to seven miles long. The river towboat can move that volume in one tow. A towload is a shipload.

"There is the element of breakage. No thumping rail joints, no banging switch hills, no sticking air, but a smooth glide on a highway that has no jars. The president of the Pittsburg Plate Glass Co. once told me that his company found it more profitable to ship down the Ohio and Mississippi rivers and up the Gulf and Atlantic coasts to reach New York by water than to ship the very much shorter land distance by rail, the item of breakage alone justifying the long water haul.

"Other detailed savings could be added but they all tend to establish that inland water transportation is lower in cost, particularly for great bulk, than rail transportation. The sum of these savings now is expressed in a barge rate 20 per cent lower than the rail rate. In my opinion, though I would hesitate to say how greatly, this differential will grow as this enterprise to put the Mississippi at work again expands."

It was here that the General said the sum of these savings would exceed, if spread over a sufficient time, the expenditure necessary, however great, to put the rivers in shape for boats.

"Furthermore," he continued, "American industry must curtail transportation costs, as it did in steel on the Great Lakes, if it is to seek and retain foreign commerce. That is a condition quite generally accepted, I think. Let me finish with this thought in that line. Most towns, if self-contained, are towns of 10,000. When a town develops a supply beyond its own needs, it begins to exceed 10,000 and it grows in direct ratio with the volume of manufactures it sells without its gates. Now, suppose that some one city should find transportation that is cheaper than that of its rivals—cheaper for bringing in raw materials and cheaper for sending out finished products. In an instant, you have Chicago and the lake cities, New York and the coast cities, St. Louis and, if St. Louis chooses, a greater river city."

Caruthersville's Discovery

Caruthersville, Mo., which the geographies always have shown to be on the river, rediscovered the fact the last week.

Caruthersville ships cotton—by railroad. Lately, the railroads have failed Caruthersville. There were no cars when market conditions made shipments imperative.

Caruthersville always has failed the river. There is no terminal there and the town has not been a stop on the Federal barge line. The river, though neglected, remains faithful to Caruthersville. The cotton shippers beseeched the barge line to set out a barge for their cotton, else the market would fail them and they would lose as they waited for cars.

A barge loaded with 3800 bales of Caruthersville cotton has gone down the river. Though Caruthersville, in the geographies, always has been on the river, the shipment is the first for export in its cotton-growing history. Some of the cotton went to New England mills. The remainder went to Europe. Caruthersville has not only discovered that it is on the river, but that it is on the sea. As it recapitulates its savings by barge, Caruthersville is asking for more barges.

Other cities, content for a decade to sit, geographically, on the river and idly watch its waters slip by on their way to lap the shores of Japan and the East, Brazil and South America, Shanghai and Timbuctoo, even to the poles of the earth, now are alert and chafing as they see those waters bearing barge fleets that toot and do not stop.

Helena, Ark., is one—one of Gen. Beach's 10,000 towns, with, however, yearnings for the 100,000 class. To Helena, the Mississippi has presented much the same aspect that it has to St. Louis—a winding ribbon marking out a beautiful vista southward, but withal a monotonous colorless ribbon from which the eye turns as from a thing of still beauty to others more suggestive of the restless energy of the age.

Now in the ribbon are appearing patchworks of color, patterns of world-wide weaving, as if the ribbon were turning to some endless carpet of Bagdad, its magic unrolling tapestried stories of the coffee plantations of Brazil, the nitrate mines of the Andes, the silk looms of Japan, the tea fields of China, the burlap mills of India, the romantic marts of the Far East. On, it rolls, into the very heart of the nation and beckons to industry on its banks to weave into it some of its own stories of boots and shoes and machinery and automobiles and bulging granaries—Aladdin-like tales to be carried back to the far-away home of the lamp.

The Awakening of Helena

Helena intends to build a $300,000 terminal, so that the toots of the barge fleet shall be landing toots. The sum is a heavy burden for Helena—if St. Louis spent a per capita proportion, the sum would by $24,000,000—but the bonds have been voted and sold. Helena intends to pick some treasures from the moving carpet and toss onto it for herself some of the resources she gathered from the rich state in which she thrived.

Memphis, which shipped 175,000 bales of cotton on the river last year, did not depend upon her geography. She had commercial consciousness of her position. Memphis clung to her packet boats long after their jingle bells had passed from the ears of other cities.

When Memphis heard about the Federal barge line, she busied herself to make ready a terminal. She voted $500,000 for a modern construction and then, to make sure that it would be big enough for some time to come, intrigued the national Government into matching her expenditure, making the total $1,000,000.

That was only three years ago. Today steam shovels are cutting down a bluff to double—more than double— the size of the terminal. Memphis, which spent $1,000,000 originally, has voted $1,000,000 more and to herself justifies the expenditure—and more, if neecssary—in the following fashion: "With the facilities which this terminal will afford, it is contemplated that Memphis will become an important warehousing and distributing point for large Eastern concerns, particularly the steel mills of the Pittsburg and Youngstown districts. It is calculated that many concerns seeking water transportation and facilities for interchange between rail and river will make Memphis their Southern distributing point."

That from a city which intervenes between St. Louis and the broad

Cuno Government Must Change German Passivity or Fail, Harden Believes

Publicist Says Nine Governments Since War Are "Dead From Exhausted Vitality"—Declares Mark as Money Unit Must Go.

By Maximilian Harden,
Germany's Foremost Publicist.

Special Cable Dispatch to the Post-Dispatch (Copyright, 1922).

BERLIN, Nov. 25.—The tenth Government since the defeat of Germany is in the saddle. The ninth, like its eight predecessors, died because of what in medicine is termed "vitality exhausted." Speeches, promises, angry curses, whining complaints, all have been substituted for strong action.

Wirth, former teacher of mathematics in a Baden school, with demagogic talent like his prototype and protector, Erzberger, thought himself dexterous enough to dance over the precipice of the London ultimatum of 1921, and "gain the victor's confidence." In 18 months he failed.

As a child believes in Santa Claus, so he believed that England would help against the French threats. Then, by his hasty, ill-considered treaty of Rapallo with the soviet, he forced Lloyd George into the French camp.

Then the Wirth Government, instead of resigning in shame, held on while France restored her relations with Russia and left Germany in a position where the infamous pact was worthless.

His Only Idea Inflation.

As though this external shame was not enough, Wirth passed the special law for the defense of his own and his colleagues' skins of providing extra courts and special penalties for crimes against state officials, thus upsetting the equality of all citizens before the law which had existed in undemocratic Prussia for 70 years. His failure in directing the finances of the country was monumental. His only idea was inflation. He wanted 12,000,000,000 marks as the limit of the paper currency daily, but the capacity of the printing plant held him to seven. What was the use of talking about stabilization at that rate? As well try to stop a driverless motor car tearing down hill.

One can prophesy without rashness that some night between 11:59 and midnight a firm rate for German currency will be announced. But three things must happen:

First, it must be recognized that the mark no longer can be used as a unit and must be replaced by the Reich's thaler, or Reich's franc on a gold basis. Second, it must be understood that the loan or abandonment of our remaining gold cannot help unless the money market is purified beforehand. Third, the Government must cease being monopolized by incompetent politicians.

Will Weakened in Rise.

This third essential is beginning to be recognized dimly. The trades union secretary, the small town lawyer, the secretary type of minister is losing vogue. Even the strongest of such men find their will weakened by the sudden rise to prosperity and power so they are the readier to abandon their convictions than their luxurious official residences and motor cars. In any case the wife, formerly a cook or a factory girl, generally prods her husband's ambition. She quickly became accustomed to riding and being called "excellency."

Now the labor classes are turning toward the leaders of industry and the great transport classes after their own leaders have fallen or failed. It is a question whether men like Wilhelm Cuno, who served the Kaiser's Cabinet as adroitly as he later served the Hamburg-American line, and joined in the senseless song of grievance and arias of anger after every conference from Versailles to Genoa, will fill the bill.

Since the defeat Germany has had no Government worthy of the name.

The Industrialists, after a thorough preparation, believe themselves strong enough to dominate the Government in the new Reich. Welcome to them if they really want a new Germany and will bring strong, sure action into our republic's miserable passivity.

Clemenceau's Plain Truth Needed to Restore Confidence, Tardieu Says

By Andre Tardieu.
Former French High Commissioner to the United States.

Special Cable Dispatch to the Post-Dispatch (Copyright, 1922).

PARIS, Nov. 25.

PERHAPS Clemenceau's trip will mark a new date in the history of Franco-American relations. I hope so. It would be a great victory over the old-style diplomatic methods.

We realize here that the United States is listening to Clemenceau as it never before listened to a Frenchman. First, of course, he speaks your language. This is worth mentioning, because one of the greatest complaints against him here, after Versailles, was "what finished Clemenceau was that he spoke English."

But besides the inestimable advantage of a thorough knowledge of the language is the fact that he is able concretely to analyze the points of difference between the two countries. By his very presence he undams the flood of common memories between France and America. Why deny that the war is as far away with you as it is with us? I think that only in Belgium, and this because of the lengthy German occupation, is the war present in the minds of the people. Your people tried to forget it as soon as possible. They preferred not to think about it, considering the sterile policy of the last three years.

The result everywhere is the disappearance of the old common feeling of the hand on shoulder attitude of five years ago. But that spirit must revive in the presence of France's grand old man, who has no official position, which is an advantage.

Even during the war when mutual confidence was at its height, I used to think that our representatives were hampered by their official positions when in America. I often wondered whether my audiences didn't regard my statements of the needs of France as mere official exaggeration.

Nothing like that can hamper Clemenceau who has had ingratitude heaped upon him by our own politicians. He is free from all official ties, a simple citizen talking to citizens. This complete freedom of movement permits Clemenceau to say things to you which nobody else would dare. He began this in his first speech.

"It is nice to make pretty speeches and to pay compliments but we have had too much of that and stern measures and plain truth are needed to restore confidence. You may not approve of all he says, but you will at least know what he is talking about.

In his retirement Clemenceau heard and understood the true voice of France better than anyone else.

Finally his visit has a movement of audacity which counts for much in the United States. This 82-year-old man, who dominates his country's history, perhaps that of the world, and goes along to do his duty as he sees it, has a certain calm majesty which every American will appreciate. Therefore we have full confidence in his success.

I haven't taught you anything in telling why but as I love Clemenceau above all others, and love America, it has been a pleasure to tell you.

Europe Hopes for Defeat of Ship Subsidy Measure, Political Writer Says

David Lawrence's View Is That President Has Just Begun to Fight for Its Passage by Congress.

By David Lawrence.
Special Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

(Copyright, 1922.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Europe hopes for the defeat of the ship subsidy. Administration officials pointed significantly to a brief dispatch which came over the wires today of one of the ticker news service as follows:

> LONDON—Expected defeat of ship subsidy bill in United States is having marked effect on shipping shares here. Peninsular & Oriental S. S. Co. rose five points yesterday, Royal Mail three and one-half points and Cunard one and one-half points.

This is not a new viewpoint with foreign interests. For many years before the war the Germans maintained a lobby in Washington to prevent ship subsidy legislation. The importance of the British attitude at present is that it demonstrates how fearful their shipping interests are of American merchant marine privately managed as contrasted with Government operation, which they do not fear at all, because they regard it as inefficient and ineffective.

Harding's Comment.

President Harding, by reason of the delicacy of his position has been unable to hit very hard at the strength of the foreign opposition to the ship subsidy bill, but in his address to Congress he took cognizance of the situation with this guarded comment:

"The American development will have to overcome every obstacle which may be put in our path, except as international comity forbids. Concern about our policy is not limited to our own domain, though the interest abroad is of a differing character. I hope it is seemly to say it, because it must be said—the maritime nations of the world are in complete accord with the opposition here to the pending measure. They have a perfect right to such an attitude. When we look from their viewpoints we can understand. But I wish to stress the American viewpoint. Ours should be the viewpoint from which one sees the American carriers at sea, the dependence of American commerce and American vessels for American reliance in case of war. Some of the costly lessons of war must be learned again and again, but our shipping lesson in the world war was much too costly to be effaced from the memory of this or future generations."

Foreign Transports Used in War.

This is but another way of saying that the American army was transported in large part to France by foreign vessels. It is not alone, however, the problem of war that makes the President wish to make America independent of foreign shipping, but the peace-time carrying of American products.

Mr. Harding feels that it is "timely to recall that we gave foreign nations our commerce to aid them in their upbuilding and the American task now is to upbuild and establish in the face of the most active competition."

There have been some critics who have argued that to take away from Europe its shipping business was to further impoverish the nations worn out by war and the carrying trade at least should remain where it is, especially in view of the tariff wall erected against the importation of foreign products, but the answer made in administration quarters is that Europe has a monopoly at present and that there is room for competition, if for no other reason than to assure America against being kept constantly at the mercy of foreign countries in the matter of ocean freight rates.

His Heart in Fight.

Europe's stock markets are reacting too soon to the news from America. The President has his heart in this fight and will not be beaten if there is any way he can force the issue through. He is represented in some quarters in New York, for instance, as being lukewarm and as merely discharging an obligation when he urges ship subsidy. This may be pleasant news to those who think the bill is going to fail, but nothing could be farther from the truth. The same kind of optimism was cherished by the proponents of the soldier bonus, who kept insisting that President Harding would not veto the bill. But he did. He has the same determination with respect to ship subsidy.

Looking back over the administration, there is no particular measure which can be called new legislation of a far-reaching character on a major subject. The President's veto on the bonus was a negative act—a measure of prevention. His struggles with Congress on the tariff gave the impression that he did not favor the bill in all its particulars, but had to bow to the will of Congress. He would hardly claim credit for the bill as a constructive measure, though he might insist that the provisions permitting correction of unworkable clauses were to be of immense benefit. But this, too, is a measure of prevention or correction. The revenue bill on the books did not meet Mr. Harding's full approval. He served prompt notice that he would seek its amendment at an early date.

What, therefore, remains is an affirmative step, or at least an attempt at constructive legislation. But the bill establishing an American merchant marine? Mr. Harding would feel that it was the crowning achievement of his administration if it passed. And he will leave no stone unturned to get that result. The President has just begun to fight. His belligerency may be viewed as belated, but it's there just the same and the outcome is not as bright for European shipping interests as might have seemed at first to be the case.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Bring the Air Races to St. Louis.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I THINK the Pulitzer Trophy Race, with the other national air races, would be a great thing for St. Louis next fall, as it would be a big help to St. Louis, and am sorry to say that the people in St. Louis are very, very slow in taking hold of such a great and interesting enterprise, as other cities such as Kansas City, Dallas, Chicago and Detroit are certainly making a rapid progress in aviation.

St. Louis needs just such a race to show the people what remarkable things airplanes are, and just how safe they are and what can be done with them in transportation lines. I believe with such a race that the people would take more interest in flying, instead of knocking it. The time is almost here when it will be as common as the automobile for transportation. Airplanes have proven to be as safe as any means of transportation.

I am going to work my very hardest to pull this race for St. Louis, and to make St. Louis a leader in aviation, instead of taking the back seat. Wake up and help and make St. Louis a leader in everything!

Shopmen Still On Strike.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

HAVE seen in quite a few issues of your paper wherein you mention "the recent railroad strike." Do you mean the strike of 1911-12? Surely, you cannot be under the illusion that the present strikes are settled? You surely are aware of the condition existing on all railroads in at least this part of the country which surrounds you. If you are, you know that the railroad strikes are not settled, and will not be until a just settlement is given the men on strike.

All that we on strike ask of you, Mr. Editor, is a square deal. We do not ask you to advertise the strikes. Nor do we expect you to state facts concerning them. But we do wish that you discontinue using the words "recent strike of the railroad shopmen," for the strike is still on, and the men are as determined as ever to fight for their constitutional rights as American citizens.

STRIKER.

Here's Your Chance, Mr. Smith.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IF F. J. Smith, who wrote the letter in your issue of Saturday, the 18th, can prove that the same grade of coal that is selling in St. Louis at $9.50 per ton is selling in Granite City, Ill., or in any town in central Missouri for $6 to $7, I will be glad to donate $100 in cash to the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk Fund.

The kind of coal selling in St. Louis at $9.50 is Franklin County or Carterville. That coal costs more than $6 a ton on track at Granite City. Very little of this grade goes into central Missouri and when it does it retails at considerably more than in St. Louis on account of the higher freight rate.

Municipal coal yards as mentioned are usually put in operation to create some nice soft jobs. St. Louis has in the past, and can again arrange, to carry coal for the poor who buy in bushel lots, but unless Mr. Smith can make a better case than he has in his letter the chances are that the city officials in St. Louis are above grabbing every fly-by-night chance to create jobs that will further burden the taxpayer. Coal yards and politics don't mix well. The hundred dollars is ready for the proof.

Prohibition and the Election.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

SO much has been written and uttered regarding the bearing of the late elections on the question of prohibition by contending wets and drys, that it seems to me the opinion of a neutral, unbiased observer is sadly needed. The writer has absolutely no interest one way or the other in prohibition. He has been unable to understand the fanatical spirit into which both drys and wets enter when discussing this question.

My opinion is that in so far as this much-mooted question is concerned, the following has been proven: That taking the country as a whole the wets have proven that the majority sentiment is slightly against prohibition, and if it were put to a popular nation-wide vote they would probably win by a margin of 200,000 or 300,000 votes.

As far as the wets' hopes of changing the Volstead act is concerned, however, to me it looks as if they were up against it, for awhile at least. They will have to show a greater preponderance of sentiment against that law and the Eighteenth Amendment than they have shown so far in order to wipe either one off the statute books. Indeed, as far as the Eighteenth Amendment is concerned, it is absolutely impossible, at present, to repeal that, and I am inclined to believe that efforts to amend the Volstead act this year will fail also, although they may eventually succeed in doing so. I believe, though, that the wets are justified in saying that prohibition was put over when the wet sentiment of the nation was disorganized and had its back turned. But the fact remains that the drys have the advantage in so far as present wet efforts are concerned.

Anyway, it's an entertaining scrap.

C. D. TUCKER.

FRANCE'S DERELICTION.

The most pertinent criticisms of French policies in connection with Clemenceau's plea by United States Senators concerned the failure of France to ratify the treaties of the Washington conference. Senator Borah referred to the pigeonholing of the Washington treaties by France. Senator Glass said the failure of France to ratify the four-Power treaty kept in effect the Anglo-Japanese alliance.

The wording of the four-Power treaty leaves no doubt of the effect on the Anglo-Japanese alliance of the failure to ratify it. The treaty itself makes the termination of the Anglo-Japanese agreement contingent upon its ratification by all the Powers. Following is the clause relating to ratification and the Anglo-Japanese alliance:

> This treaty shall be ratified as soon as possible in accordance with the constitutional methods of the high contracting parties and shall take effect on the deposit of ratifications, which shall take place at Washington, AND THEREUPON THE AGREEMENT BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND JAPAN, WHICH WAS CONCLUDED AT LONDON ON JULY 13, 1911, SHALL TERMINATE.

The four-Power treaty was a treaty of peace providing that the signatory nations—the United States, Great Britain, France and Japan—shall respect each other's rights, confer for consideration and adjustment of controversies and to prevent aggressive action on the part of any other Power. It was a peace substitute for the offensive and defensive alliance of Great Britain and Japan.

The failure of France to ratify the Washington treaties renders the work of the Washington conference of no effect. France's continued refusal to ratify will undo the great work of that conference for the relief of the peoples from the crushing weight of armament competition, from the menace of war on account of armaments and for the maintenance of peace in the Pacific by conference and arbitration.

France's failure to ratify follows upon the delay of the work of the conference by her representatives who for a time refused to accept the ratio of naval reduction on the basis of the existing strength of navies. She wanted to increase her naval standard. France stood out against submarine limitation and thus incurred the British charge that she wanted to arm against Great Britain. Thus submarines and air craft, which contribute the most frightful phases of war, are unlimited.

How can M. Clemenceau explain the failure of France to ratify the treaties except on the theory that France refuses to limit her naval armaments and to enter into obligations to keep peace in the Pacific? How can he justify his assertions that France is not militaristic and his plea for aid and peace guarantees while these treaties rest in a ministerial pigeonhole?

If M. Clemenceau had brought to America news of the ratification of these treaties the American people who are committed to disarmament would receive his denial of French militarism and his appeal for guarantees of peace with more sympathy. France now has a splendid opportunity to prove her nonmilitaristic policy and her desire for the international peace guarantees which M. Clemenceau asks of us in France's behalf. Her refusal to ratify flouts our efforts to guarantee peace and assure disarmament and goes far to confirm the charge of French militarism.

Senator Spencer might have gone still further, and declared it "an outrageous shame" the way the voters treated the Newberry Senators in the recent election.

A SCOLDING WIZARD.

Edison is correct, of course, in saying that many college students are lazy. He could similarly indict any class. It was Emerson, if we remember rightly, who said that every man is as lazy as he dares to be. But the courage to be indolent is not an especial characteristic of college students. It is probably more characteristic of boys of that age who are not in college.

College presidents have already demurred to Edison's charge. One of them cites the fact that many of the students are working their way through. That could be said by any college president. On the other hand, there are students to whom a college course is a respectable loaf, a sort of country-club existence. In defense of such the familiar Tennyson paraphrase may be quoted—"'Tis better to have gone and loafed than never to have gone at all."

Doubtless college students are vulnerable at many points, but criticism of the Edisonian brand does not seem helpful. Though it is not a refutation, the college student might naturally and excusably take a whack at Edison. He might remark the censorious penchant of the wizard's latter days and speculate as to whether this fondness for breaking into print had been contracted by association with that Prince of First-Pagers, Brother Ford.

Mr. Edison is a wonderful person, who enjoys not only great repute but great affection. He should take heed lest he scold away that fine esteem.

A CONTINUOUS CONGRESS.

The late Champ Clark's prediction of a Congress continuously in session has practically been fulfilled. The Sixty-seventh Congress, which met yesterday for the second time in extraordinary session, was first convened by President Harding on April 11, 1921. It adjourned on Nov. 23. On the first Monday of the following month—Dec. 5—as constitutionally provided, it met in regular session, and, with the exception of a brief recess, continued uninterruptedly in session until Sept. 22, 1922. Now, after a respite of not quite two months, it convenes again. On Dec. 4 it will meet for the second regular session, which will terminate March 4.

In thus holding four sessions this Congress establishes a precedent and, very likely, introduces what Speaker Clark foresaw would become a practice, by reason of the extraordinary extension of governmental activities and expansion of governmental authority.

It must be apparent that the disposition to turn to Washington in every dilemma or fanciful difficulty, plus the determination of various and multiplying special interests to tuck themselves in under the Federal Government's willing wing, is altering the character of our Government. Democracy is being absorbed by paternalism which, in the logic of things, will presently become socialistic in fact and function even if nominally republican.

Speeding on the process—stepping on the gas, so to speak—is the administration at Washington, regardless of what its partisan complexion is. No modern Government declines fresh grants of power and the patronage that goes with it. If it does it is a mere Caesarian gesture. The appetite for power grows on what it feeds. Candidates for office inveigh against centralization and the decadence of the states, and occasionally a Senator or Representative raises his voice against this multiplication of bureaus and commissions; but the birth rate of such agencies steadily increases while the death rate is nil.

The hope that this tendency will be checked and a swing backward to our constitutional status be set in motion rests, we suppose, in the dissatisfaction with things as they are—the intermeddling, the supervision that is ripening into espionage, the assumptions of authority that are disclosing the sharp edges of tyranny and, above all, the mounting costs. It is a truism to say that a Government which becomes insupportably expensive cannot endure, and that is something which ought to give pause to our bureaucrats and to that spawner of bureaus—Congress. For one of the first luxuries that will be drastically reorganized when the upkeep of our Government can no longer be met will be Congress.

EDUCATING ALUMNI.

Amherst College has hit upon a rather engaging plan for educating her alumni. The graduate who reads a book that stimulates his interest will have placed at his disposal the resources of the college. He will be told the next book to read. "Directed reading courses in any field of knowledge which an alumnus wishes to study" will be available, the announcement states.

Such a service, it is rightly assumed, will save a good deal of time for the man whose energy is mostly given to his business or profession but who still utilizes his leisure occasionally to read a good book. It is surmised, correctly, too, we think, that many a serious interest may thus be conserved and developed which would languish away for want of just such a service.

The plan also has the vital aspects of contact and fellowship. The alumnus whose study cells have been recharged by a worth-while book will be put in communication with others who have similarly reacted. It is proposed, too, to organize week-end group conferences from which, conceivably, will spring guilds of kindred minds and purposes.

The plan has possibilities. As presented it is refreshingly free from the parochial flavor of the customary alumni overture.

DOUBLOONS!

JUST A MINUTE

Written for the POST-DISPATCH
By Clark McAdams

FREE VERSE.

YESTERDAY I went into a department store to buy a duck-call.

A duck-call is a little musical instrument with which duck-shooters tempt ducks from the empyrean.

That is, it is a musical instrument when the man behind it can make music on it.

Otherwise it merely serves as warning to ducks that danger is nigh.

Very well, as Socrates says.

There were about 25 men in store tooting duck-calls.

You never heard such a din in your life.

People who were in the store buying something beside duck-calls looked as if they did not know whether to run or show fight.

The clerks looked worried.

It is no trouble to show goods, but to have bedlam let loose in a perfectly decorous department store is another thing.

Presently a man came in who had about him the look of outdoors.

He picked up a duck-call and said "Quack-quack-quack!"

That transformed the scene from the animation of a downtown department store to blue skies and a brown marsh.

The northwind blew, and the pods of the yonkapins clattered musically.

Muskrats were building their winter homes.

Wild geese were flying.

Ducks flashed in the sun high overhead.

The man with the look of outdoors about him cupped his hands over his duck-call and said "Tuck-a-tuck-tuck-a-tuck-tuck-a-tuck-tuck-tuck!"

Then he went "Qua-a-a-a-ck, qua-a-a-a-a-ck, qua-a-a-a-a-a-a-ck!"

That settled it.

Everybody else laid his duck-call down and began to look at boots, shells, caps, coats, etc.

The man with the look of outdoors about him rested his back on the counter and rendered the eighth movement from the symphony by Grover Cleveland.

His eyes were as dreamy as those of Omar Khayyam.

"Quack, qua-a-a-a-a-ck, qua-a-a-a-a-ck!"

Then "Tuck-a-tuck-tuck-tuck-tuck!"

You could hear the acorns rattle down in the woods.

You could taste the crisp autumnal air.

You could smell wood smoke and the sweet perfume of bacon.

At length the man with the look of outdoors about him laid his duck-call back in the lot, sighed and went out.

Directly the 25 men came back to the counter.

They all spoke at once, and they all said the same thing.

What they said was this:

"Give me the duck-call that fellow used!"

Dean Inge thinks we are in danger of trying to impose our own culture upon the rest of the world, though unless we are mistaken Sinclair Lewis has by this time warned pretty much everybody against it. He may have to write one or two more books before other people satisfy themselves that they do not want to be like us, but we doubt it. Maybe the Dean himself is not quite up to Sinclair and has not read "Babbitt."

A newspaper editor has finally been beaten for the governorship of Kansas, which abandons a tradition. Probably the people of Kansas feel that they can make better use of their editors in criticism of public affairs than in control of them, though it is doubtful if Kansas editors will wish to descend from their high ethical ground of not expecting others to do what they cannot do themselves. The Japanese formerly had a law under which dramatic critics unable to do better than those they criticized were placed in jail, which has impressed us as being rather fairer than is usually the case. Our own two-story thinkers have often felt the unfairness of never doing themselves what they expect of others, and when the last senatorial election approached in Missouri they seriously considered running one of their number for the office. There was no agreement upon the matter because of the feeling that if either Socrates or Mr. Antwine were put up for the place the voters might think the one not chosen had been slighted. It would have been a happy compromise to have run Plinthourgos, but Plinth made the point that for him to bat while both Socrates and Mr. Antwine graced the bench would make him ridiculous. This pitched the debate back to the previous question, and there it lay. Kansas newspaper editors have had the governorship for a long time, and they have also usually held the United States senatorships. Senator Capper, an editor, is holding one of the senatorships now. For all we know the Kansas editors themselves concluded that with a newspaper editor in the White House it would become the craft in Kansas to sink into the background for a time. This especially may be the case since the editor in the White House seems not to have been doing very well and a popular reaction against editors in public places may result. We may trust Kansas editors not to get caught in a popular reaction. They have cyclone cellars in Kansas, and people who have tried to beat a Kansas editor into one of them say it can't be done.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

JAPS BARRED FROM CITIZENSHIP.

From the Brooklyn Eagle.

THE United States Supreme Court has decided that a Japanese cannot be naturalized because he is a yellow man. If he were black or white he would be chromatically eligible. It is only the browns and yellows who are barred. Under the decision a Japanese who has lived among us since infancy, who was educated in our public schools, whose children are American citizens, is barred from sharing their citizenship because of his color. Can anyone blame Japan and the Japanese for resenting such discrimination? We criticise the Japanese in this country for their loyalty to their native land, and yet we will not allow them to swear allegiance to ours. How can we ever expect to maintain friendly relations with a powerful sovereign nation of 60,000,000 while our laws hold the 100,000 Japanese in this country inferior to the meanest immigrant from Africa or Europe? The decision places the burden for this discrimination squarely upon the shoulders of the nation. Hitherto it has rested rather unfairly upon such Western States as California when they legislated against "aliens ineligible to citizenship." Japan herself has realized that she was dealing with the fundamental discrimination inherent in our 40-year-old naturalization law. In one of the last notes sent to our State Department on this subject she asks for its removal. That request ended the correspondence and the question remains open.

THE LIQUOR PROBLEM IN QUEBEC.

From the New York World.

WHILE the Government of the United States is getting ready to appropriate another [illegible]000,000 for prohibition enforcement, it is comforting to read that the Province of Quebec realized a profit of $4,000,000 from the operation of its liquor law for the fiscal year ending last June and that the regulations have proved quite as successful morally as financially. Morally and financially the liquor laws of this country have been a total loss. They have added heavily to the tax burden, have corrupted officials on a scale never before believed possible, have bred a sinister contempt for all law and have built up an enormous and growing bootleg trade at the expense of consumers. Quebec has demonstrated, however, that this condition is not an inevitable accompaniment of governmental interference with the liquor traffic. A regulatory statute based on the facts and not dictated by fanatics has been found capable of eliminating the saloon and the abuses that went with it without antagonizing public opinion in the cities or undermining the respect for authority. The Quebec law is a good law because it has city and country solidly behind it and it can be enforced. It provides for local option, it regulates the purchase of spirits, it allows the sale of wine and beer in cafes and it creates no enforcement problem. It effects every legitimate reform advocated by the professional prohibitionists of the United States, but quietly, sensibly, profitably and without friction.

THE PRESIDENCY AND LEADERSHIP.

MARK SULLIVAN in the World's Work.

THERE is always bound to be a sense of disappointment about Harding, a feeling on the part of the public of expectations unfulfilled. The reason is that the public expects leadership in the White House, and it is not a part of Harding's temperament, or of his program, to provide that leadership. The White House provided leadership during Roosevelt's time, and the public liked it. The White House provided leadership during a considerable portion of Wilson's two administrations, and the public liked that, too, up to the time when Wilson fell into disfavor with some of the public, for another reason. The experience of half a generation of leadership from the White House has led the public to look for it permanently. We are in a period of flux and change, and the people, puzzled and baffled, look for leadership to point the way out. It is a period when, as to many matters, there is more than one course that would do; but the public needs someone to say what the course shall be, and to lead off with it.

RADIO ENTHUSIASTS OF TWO LANDS HAIL ST. LOUIS SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA CONCERTS FROM K S D WITH DELIGHT

Letters From 30 States and Canada Attest to Popularity and Educational Value of First Two Programs Broadcast on Saturday Nights.

The broadcasting of the Saturday night concerts of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra by Post-Dispatch radio station K S D has been hailed with delight by music-loving radio enthusiasts in all sections of the United States and in Canada.

This was attested by the large number of appreciative and congratulatory letters received after the broadcasting of the first two concerts of the Symphony season on the nights of Nov. 11 and 18. Thirty-one states and two Canadian provinces already have been heard from and letters continue to come in. The inquiry most often made by the writers is as to whether more of the Symphony concerts will be sent out by K S D. It is planned to broadcast the Saturday night concerts throughout the orchestra's season of five months at the Odeon.

Although weather conditions were unfavorable when the first concert was sent out it was heard clearly at many places and some hearers reported they could pick up K S D in an electrical storm when they could not tune in other large stations. For the second concert the weather conditions were much better and many listeners-in heard the concert from start to finish with no interference of any kind.

Of Much Educational Value.

It is difficult to overestimate the entertainment and educational value of the broadcasting of a program of this kind to those who in the ordinary course of events would never have an opportunity to hear great music played by a great orchestra. There is added appreciation when it reaches those who are temporarily far from the beaten paths of civilization where all wholesome diversion might be beyond their reach but for the wonder that is radio.

There is a glimpse of such a condition in a very interesting letter, mailed through the postoffice at [illegible], Ok., after the second concert was broadcast.

This was from L. R. Canfield, a foreman for the Missouri Valley Bridge & Iron Co. He wrote:

"We wish to acknowledge and thank you for the splendid program which we received last night. The Symphony Orchestra is simply wonderful.

"We are building a bridge over the South Canadian river and living in a camp, 20 miles from anywhere. The radio is our only form of amusement, and we can always depend on a good program from the Post-Dispatch, except, as sometimes happens, when we get interference from other stations."

Diversion for Men in Wilds.

If radio were a sentient being it might well be proud of its achievement in carrying heartening diversion to men who have exiled themselves to the wilds to do that of which the world is now so much in need—constructive work.

It is a long jump from an Oklahoma bridge builders' camp to a lumber camp "on the edge of the Aurora Borealis," but the radio made it easily as is shown by this letter from E. Appletion of the Indian Lake Lumber Co. at Osaquan, Ontario, Canada:

"Greetings and many thanks. You will not find us on any map which you may have, although on that immense map of gratitude which we owe to the broadcasters, you will find us.

"Geographically we are about longitude 92 west of Greenwich and [illegible] miles north of St. Louis; yet radiophonically we were on last Saturday evening up to 9:49 p. m. (Miss Jones can verify this time) with you in your opera house at St. Louis.

"Only last Saturday morning we had received and installed a radio receiving set and we have not yet fully realized the fact that in a few hours, from being a lumber camp on the edge of the Aurora Borealis and many miles from any place of importance, we became the center of all the centers of the world. And the jewel among many jewels was St. Louis. Words cannot express our pleasure upon hearing Miss Marguerite Namara sing her selection from "Traviata" and the beautiful orchestral rendering of the overture from "William Tell" will not soon be forgotten.

"Miss Jones' time is, we think, a little slow. She gave her time when signing off as 9:49 when our clock said 9:50. This is a small thing to register a kick about, we know, and so that you may know we are not chronic kickers in Canada you may tell Miss Jones that we are from now setting our clock by hers, and that the day will not be complete that does not close with the clear tones of 'Miss Jones announcing.'"

Even in far off California the broadcasting with great clearness. From McKittrick, Cal., Joseph Boh[illegible] wrote:

"Caught you on the air Nov. 18 and heard the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, which came in very good. Modulation, voice and quality were fine. I have a two-step and loud speaker, homemade."

O. E. Nelson wrote from Monterey, [illegible]:

"I am now enjoying the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra. It is sure fine. Let us hear more like it. I hear you nearly every evening now."

The quality of the concert and the broadcasting were praised by many [illegible] users of radio sets. From Beaver Dam, Wis., H. R. Huth wrote:

"Your broadcast of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra on Saturday night, Nov. 18, was without a doubt the best concert I have ever heard on the radio. I should be more than pleased to hear when the next one is to be given.

That the faculty and students of Subiaco College, Subiaco, Ark., derived much enjoyment from the concert was shown in this letter from The Rev. Father P. Gregory, O. S. B.:

Last night's concert, together with the boisterous applause, came in clear and distinct, though marrer at times by the inevitable code. Wish to congratulate you upon having secured the consent of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra to broadcast their concerts. You are doing a real service to this section of the country. These concerts are highly apreciated by the faculty and student body of Subiaco College.

Letter From Canada.

On the crested stationery of Judges' Chambers, Guelph, Ontario, Canada, Anson Spotton wrote:

"I heard very clearly and distinctly last night, with a loud speaker and two steps of amplification, the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra from start to finish. It was grand. How often do you propose having them on your program and on what nights? Congratulations on your enterprise."

R. C. Frye of Coal City, Ill., was greatly pleased with the singing of the soloist, Marguerite Namara, as this letter shows:

"Your program Saturday evening, Nov. 18, of your Symphony Orchestra, was great. It came in good, loud and clear from a loud speaker. It was one of the finest programs I have heard; and I have heard a few from Los Angeles to New York, and from Canada to Havana, Cuba, and also Panama. I just can't recall the name of the soprano that evening, but I want to say this without boasting at all. To my knowledge and to the people I had been listening in that evening, she had one of the finest and clearest voices we have heard over the radio. I again want to thank you for the music I was able to receive from your station, and I wish you the best of success and will listen in for your programs. I would like to be on your mailing list as one of your great audience."

"As if in Adjoining Room."

An appreciation from Colorado Springs, Colo., was written as follows by Mrs. O. E. Hemenway:

"Last night we had the great pleasure of listening to the concert broadcast by you of the Symphony Orchestra. This is a rare treat to people living in a place which does not have such an orchestra. It came to us as clear as if it were in an adjoining room."

Just a portion of the program, heard by Josephine Schofield of Willoughby, O., caused her regret that she had missed the greater part of it. She wrote:

"I heard the last number of the concert by the St. Louis orchestra last night. It was splendid, and I was so sorry that I did not hear the entire concert. If all the numbers were as fine as the last number which I heard, then I missed a most enjoyable concert, for it came over the radio so clearly."

Charles D. Arnold of Sioux City, Ia., wrote thus of a similar experience:

"I got in on the end of the Symphony concert Saturday night, and it certainly was great. I heard enough so that I don't want to miss any in the future. If these concerts will be broadcast weekly this winter, will you please advise the dates, so we can reserve them for K S D? We thank you for this high-class entertainment."

From Birmingham, Ala.

From Birminghahm, Ala., came this letter, signed by Henry F. Schroeder:

"I wish to express my appreciation for your concert given Saturday night, Nov. 18, by the Symphony Orchestra. We enjoyed every bit of it, and you are to be complimented upon giving such a fine program. I am sure it was highly appreciated by your large unseen audience. Thank you for your efforts in behalf of the radio fans."

A thought which must often come to the radio enthusiast, who can listen but cannot send an answering message, is conveyed in this letter from C. E. Lewin of Lilyfield, Manitoba, Canada:

"We are pleased to report that we received several numbers of your concert last night and wished we had some way of applauding with those present at the concert. The volume was probably louder here than in some parts of the opera house. Thanks, and we hope to hear these concerts often."

Program Was a Dream.

M. W. Lowrey, M. D., of Gatesville, Tex., sent this appreciative letter:

The program Saturday night was a dream. It was about the finest thing in music that I ever heard. I heard the full program and sighed for more at the close. The only suggestion I have to offer is—do it again. The only difficulty I had was that when the intermissions occurred my machine would get impatient and go wild, squeal and whistle until I would have to tune out and tune back again for the next part. I think the machine was worried or possibly impatient for more itself.

L. W. Hamm of Fargo, N. D., was equally enthusiastic. He wrote:

Your concert by the Symphony Orchestra last night was received very nicely in Fargo. It was possible to distinguish the various instruments as well as though the orchestra had been right before us. This class of music certainly is appreciated, and I am sorry that I did not know the concert was to be broadcast. I just happened to run into it in time to get the last two numbers. I will try to get the announcement of the next concert, in order to get in for the start and stick to the finish.

Enjoyed "William Tell" Nnmber.

Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Hammond of East Las Vegas, N. M., wrote:

We appreciated your program of last night, especially the last number, "William Tell."

Norman T. Vorse of Des Moines, Ia., sent this:

We wish to express our appreciation of your last two concerts of the Symphony Orchestra. It comes to us perfectly and the quality is so good it takes all the enjoyment out of the average concerts broadcast by the various other broadcasting stations.

The states from which letters of appreciation came were Californot, Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas, South Dakota, North Dakota, Kansas, Minnesota, Illinois, New Jersey, Montana, Michigan, Wisconsin, New York, Alabama, Rhode Island, Colorado, Iowa, Ohio, Missouri, Mississippi, Nebraska, Kentucky, Indiana, Georgia, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Utah and New Mexico. The Canadian provinces heard from were Ontario and Manitoba.

Concert Broadcasting Wonderful Propaganda for Good Music, Ganz Says

By RUDOLPH GANZ,
Director of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra.

THE broadcasting of the symphony concerts by the Post-Dispatch is as wonderful propaganda for good music as I could imagine. It is remarkable advertising of St. Louis by means of its orchestra. The people listening in throughout the territory of our coming spring tour will know us so well by the time we get there that they will greet us as old friends.

I am told of a letter from New York, which says: "You have no idea with what anticipation we are looking forward to the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra's concert in New York." It is amazing to think of people sitting in New York and listening to our concerts.

Personally, I am glad that we are being heard all over the country. The more people we can reach with good music the better. The radio reaches a public not previously interested in symphonic music, and will create a new class of music lovers. Think of the farmers who have no chance to attend symphony concerts! I have one regret—we can't hear the silent applause of the multitude of listeners.

GEN. BEACH SAYS ANY EXPENDITURE ON RIVER WILL PAY

southern territory which long has yielded St. Louis its commercial vitality.

Vicksburg, too, will have a terminal in operation by Jan. 1. The Vicksburg terminal will in reality be a St. Louis terminal, if wide-awake Memphis does not annex it for herself. The Vicksburg terminal is designed to make operative those rates from St. Louis which will enable distributers here to effect a water-route saving into Mississippi and other southeastern states. In turn, the rates are presumed to endow St. Louis jobbers with a rate parity, in that territory which they do not now enjoy. The rates have been inoperative since their establishment nearly two years ago, because the physical facilities at Vicksburg necessary to make an interchange between barge and rail lines cheaply have been lacking. Also, the same proportionate saving is available for the Memphis jobbers. It seems to be a question of the first one on the ground getting the business.

Thus, with constantly improving terminals at New Orleans and St. Louis, it appears that the barge line is about to have the facilities necessary to demonstrate in hard dollars and cents that goods can move by river at a lower rate than rail rate.

In the opinion of Col. T. Q. Ashburn, assistant chief of the division of coastwise and inland waterways, who is the War Department head of barge operation, the question of how much lower than the present 80 per cent of rail rates goods will move by river is dependent upon terminals. The cost of carrying the goods on the river now is much lower than on rails. Handling has been the problem. If handling costs go down, the permanence of river shipping is assured, not permanence of the present barge lines, but permanence of several such barge lines, each painting some commercial picture on the moving carpet of Bagdad.

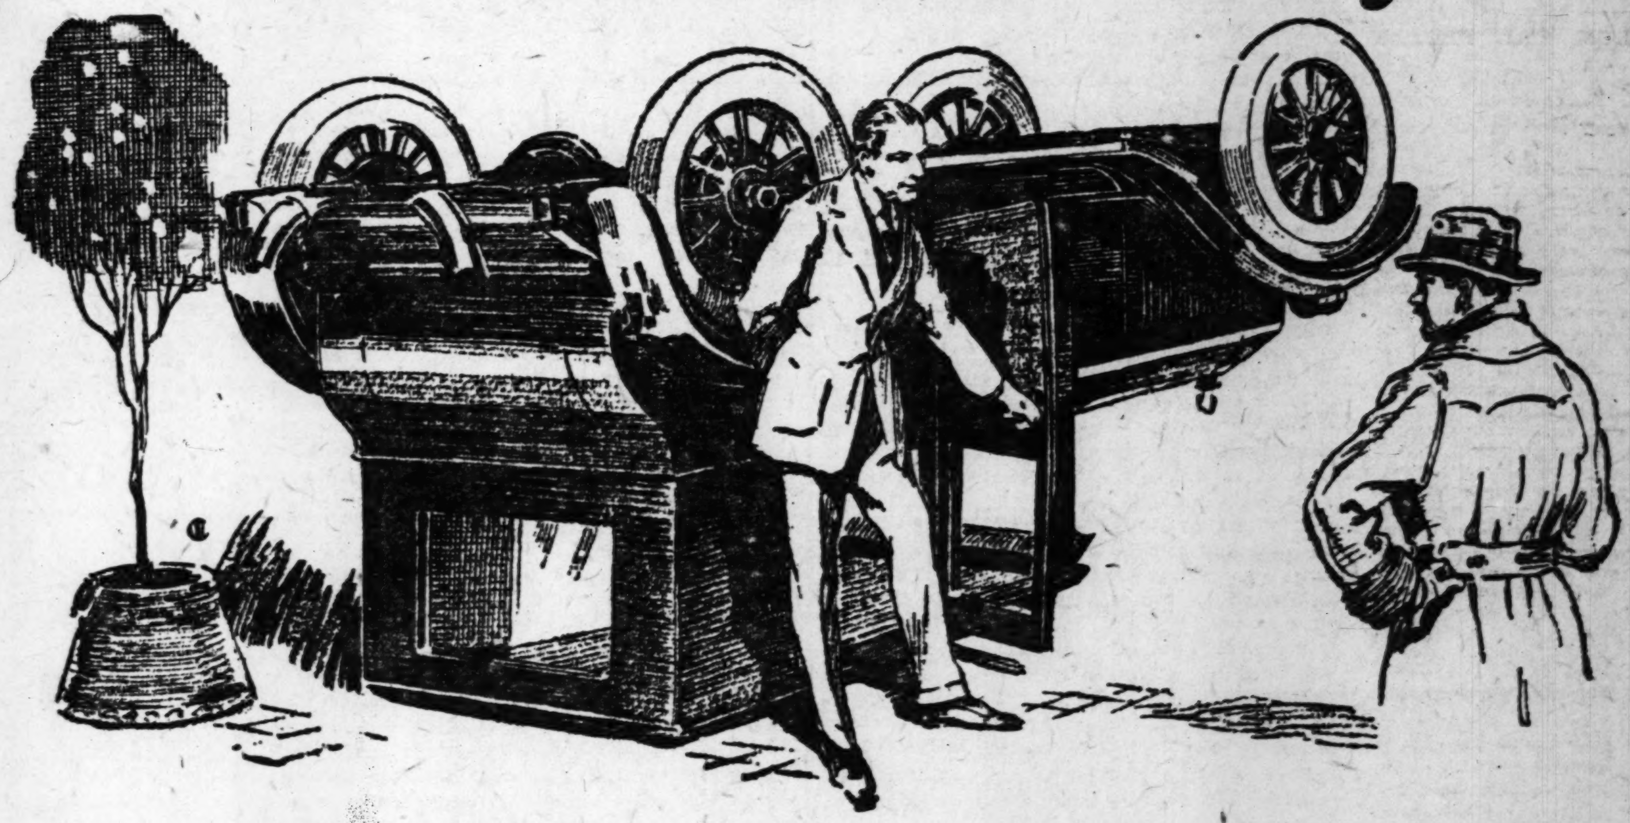
The Reasons Why!



To Prove Its Staunchness
The Coach Is Exhibited This Way

Just as you would turn over a box, we rolled an Essex Coach over on its top to show its strong rigid body construction.

In this position the body is supporting the weight of the car, 2700 pounds. There is not even the slightest sag or bend, for windows and doors operate freely. Come, see how also by economical design and quantity production it is possible to give closed car comforts on a first rate chassis at moderate price.

And a Stripped Car Reveals Where Values Are to Be Found in Both Chassis and Body

The Coach is a Hudson-Essex creation. The object was to provide closed car comforts at little more than open car cost.

Closed cars, because of uneconomical design, and limited production were beyond the reach of most buyers.

So a revolutionary thing was done.

An entirely new design that eliminated all the old costly manufacturing methods was invented. Such body fittings as afford little practical advantage and contribute nothing to car performance were left out. And then production on a scale unknown in the closed car field was started.

It Brought Closed Car Comforts Within the Reach of All

The demand for the Coach became immediately the wonder of motordom. Sales outran any previous figures for closed cars and rivals invaded the field to share a great sales opportunity. But they brought out a type entirely unlike the Coach.

The Coach made its appeal because of its practical utility, because of durable, long lasting qualities and its complete comfort.

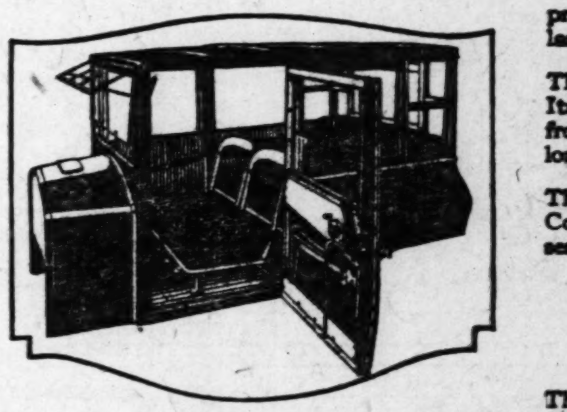
These attractions increase with the car's use. Its rigid, sturdy frame, keeps the body free from squeaks and rattles, and accounts for its long endurance.

This exhibit shows why more than 20,000 Coach bodies continue after months of hardest service to be of increasing attraction.

Reveals Where Values May Be Found

This is the issue today. There are two types of closed cars that sell at a moderate price as described above. The Coach affords every essential comfort and utility. Its owners are proud of it. There is never any question about its performance range. Maintenance cost is small in either Hudson or Essex. Its appeal is lasting. The Coach is built for service. It has all the conveniences demanded of a closed car.

In the moderate priced closed car field you have two types to choose from. Know them well and decide which will serve you best.



The above sketch illustrates the stripped Coach body which reveals the staunchness of its construction. More than 20,000 Coach bodies are in service and the reason they are serving their owners with the same satisfaction today that they gave when new is due to the construction which this exhibit presents.

Similar details are revealed of all important parts of the body and chassis of both Hudson and Essex. It is well worth your while to see this exhibit.

RECORD ENTRY OF 250 IS RECEIVED FOR HORSE SHOW

All Parts of Country Represented — Affair Starts Wednesday and Continues Through Saturday.

The annual St. Louis Horse Show, which opens at the Coliseum at 8 p. m., Wednesday, and continues through Dec. 2, has an entry list of 250 high-bred horses from all parts of the United States. The number is larger than at any previous St. Louis show, the management announces.

It is expected the attendance will be increased by admirers of horses from all sections of the country. Many horses which have won championships in other shows are to appear. A number of them will come in tomorrow morning from the American Royal Stock Show at Kansas City, which closed last week.

The show will be a brilliant society event. All boxes have been sold for the season, as have the first five rows in the arena balcony. The latter were reserved by members of the Bit and Bridle Club, of which M. B. Wallace is chairman.

Matinee for Children.

There will be a special matinee on Thanksgiving day and a children's matinee on Saturday, at which time children from St. Louis orphanages will be guests of the St. Louis Horse Show Association. The Bridgeford Farm ponies will be shown as a feature of the children's matinee.

The five-gaited saddle classes and the roadster classes are expected to attract chief attention, each class having an unusually attractive entrance list. In class No. 25, five-gaited saddle mares, there are 12 entries, each valued at more than $4500. This event is scheduled for Thursday night.

Among the entries in this class are: "Lou Ann," owned by Mrs. W. P. Roth of California, and recently purchased from Mrs. Loula Long Combs of Kansas City; "Major's Aurilia," owned by Miss Gertrude B. Hardt, Chicago; "Elizabeth Greis," owned by H. N. Greis, Tulsa, Ok., winner of first place at the Military and Civilian Horse Show, Jefferson Barracks; "Norma Talmadge," owned by R. G. Young, Chicago; "Sallie Ann" and "Wisteria," both owned by Mrs. Combs; "Rexana Chief," owned by Herbert M. Woolf, Kansas City; "Black Satin," entered by Miss Helen Frampton, St. Louis; "Sunbeam Sue," entered by Hawkins & Callahan of National Stock Yards, National City, Ill.; "Eva Arnold," entered by E. D. Moore, Des Moines, Ia., and "Illinois Belle," to be shown by Carl B. Hays, Mount Vernon, Ill.

$12,000 Gelding Entered.

Entries in the five-gaited gelding class include: "Eastern Star," owned by Greis and valued at $12,000; "Red Heart" and "Judge Thurman," owned by Mrs. Combs; "Al Jolson," owned by Young; "Elmay," entered by Moore, and "Golden Flash," entered by Miss Hardt.

Among the local geldings entered are: "Bargain Hunter" and "Robinhood," Mrs. E. J. Walsh; "Porter Taylor," Charles Van Studdiford; "Royal Prince," George L. L. Davis; "Auto B. King," H. J. Sternberg; "Golden King," Fred W. Holekamp, and "Burbon Boy," George Harsh.

Some Questions Ross Crane Will Answer

—in His Lecture on "Color in the Home," Monday, at 2 O'Clock, in the Vandervoort Music Hall.

1. The furniture of my living room is a medley of styles and shapes. How can I harmonize it?
2. How can I create a rich, harmonious, restful color scheme in furnishing a room?
3. Woodwork of my living room is yellow oak. Cannot afford to change it. Furniture is mahogany. What shall I do?
4. What shall I do with a monotonous "brown" room to vitalize it?

—and there will be other interesting questions besides these which will make this one of the most interesting lectures of the series.

PRICE RECESSIONS MARK WEEK'S TRADE ON NEW YORK STOCK MARKET

READJUSTMENT ON IN STOCK MARKET, IS VIEW OF TREND

Still Reacting From Effects of an Overdone Speculation for the Rise, Says Reviewer — Foreign Exchange Steadier.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review says:

"With the security markets still reacting from the effects of an overdone speculation for the rise, a feature of the past week has been the accumulation of signs that the height of the fall industrial movement has been passed. Railway car loadings, though high, are showing the unusual seasonal falling off and there has been some easing in the car supply situation. One result of this relaxation on the transportation system is a further increase in soft coal production, the latter having risen, in fact, to distinctly above the 11,000,000 tons a week level. Industrial supplies of coal appear to have been fairly well reconstituted and barring stretches of extremely severe weather, the danger of a fuel shortage appears to be past.

"Another effect of the easing in traffic conditions has been a slight weakening in the wheat market. It is realized that the car shortage has been one of the principal supporting factors in this market and that more cars will facilitate marketing and so tend to depress quotations. Grain prices probably also deflect a slackening in export demand, and an interesting feature here is the disappearance of the premium on the Canadian dollar. It is significant that this premium appeared some two months ago, when it became apparent that Canada would have a great exportable surplus and when Canadian grain began to undersell ours in the export market. Incidentally the Canadian dollar's fall to a slight discount will, if the decline is maintained, put an end to the export of gold to that country, a movement which has accounted for loss of something like $20,000,000 in the yellow metal in the past few weeks.

Question of Profits.

"With the fall movement waning and with securities reacting, greater interest has been displayed in the matter of profits. With an unexpectedly large volume of business going on the question has been asked as to whether profits have shown a proportionate recovery. The answer to this question seems to be that the situation is exceedingly 'spotty.' Certain industries are doing much better than others, and certain companies in particular fields seem to be enjoying advantages over other companies in the same field.

"A steadier tone in the foreign exchanges, meanwhile testifies to the greater confidence felt in European political relationships. Bonar Law's Government is conducting itself in a businesslike manner and has shown its ability to work with France in the Turkish matter. London is distinctly optimistic over the Lausanne conference and believes that important co-operative understandings will be reached there. At the same time London also is growing more restive over the reparations situation. The need for a solution of this difficulty on the grounds that European [illegible] must be restored remains. The [illegible] of the situation lies in the possibility of the new English Government being able to reach an agreement with France on a practical plan of readjustment."

Taking advantage of the absence of a good part of the trading fraternity, bear traders made a sharp attack on stocks in today's short session which resulted in a number of new lows for the present reaction. Both rails and industrials were put under pressure and the market displayed little power of resistance. Toward the close losses of a point or more were common among rails while industrial leaders generally were off from 1 to 3 points. Studebaker and [illegible] suffered particularly and Standard Oil of New Jersey broke to 184, but the weakness was [illegible] distributed. Bonds, meanwhile, were quiet, but displayed a [illegible] undertone.

Foreign Exchange Firm.

Firmness, however, ruled among the foreign exchanges, the news from Lausanne still being regarded as favorable. Sterling gained ½ cent at [illegible] and French francs were up [illegible] points at 7.15 cents. The Scandinavians were consistently higher, but the German mark receded slightly, selling at .01⅜ of a cent. In the commodity market cotton continued its recovery. December advanced [illegible] points at a late price of [illegible] cents. Wheat, on the other hand, continued to lose ground, the December delivery being off 1⅜ at $1.17.

"Although the total has been reduced by $14,000,000 the Clearing House banks still report a deficit in reserves of $5,000,000. Loans show an increase of $5,000,000 and deposits are [illegible] by $22,000,000. Reserves deposited with the Federal Reserve Bank [illegible] by $17,500,000, while Government deposits are smaller by [illegible]."

New York Bank Statement.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—The actual condition of the Clearing House banks and trust companies for the week shows a deficit in reserves of $5,368,010. This is an increase in reserves of $14,074,380. [illegible] Actual condition: Loans, discounts, etc., $4,373,911,000; [illegible] Cash in own vaults, Federal Reserve Bank, $[illegible]; [illegible] Reserve in Federal Reserve bank of member banks, $[illegible]; increase, $17,530,000. [illegible] Total deposits eliminating amounts due from reserve depositaries and other banks and trust companies in New York and United States: Deposits, $752,161,100; decrease, $7,530,300. Banks: Cash in vault, $[illegible]. Trust companies: Cash in vault, $62,317,200.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—The total transactions on the New York Stock Exchange for the week were 4,369,122 shares, as compared with 5,831,655 last week, 3,215,449 same week a year ago and 3,951,156 two years ago.

Dry Goods Market Review.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—The cotton cloths market wound up a week of cautious trading today, with prices exceedingly firm but with buyers standing out firmly against the existing level of quotations. Business is waiting for a closing of the gap between the ideas of those who bid and offer, especially in the print cloths. Sheetings were dull, but drills were firm and in good demand. Twills also were sought in considerable volume and the call for sateens was strongly in evidence.

Raw silk was reported exceedingly dull in Yokohama today and the market here was exceedingly weak. Nearly all grades dropped at least 5c. The quotations of XXA 13x15 and 20x22 were $8.45 and $8.35, respectively; XXB was $8.40; Kansai No. 1, $8.20, and Canton 14x16, $7.75.

New York Coffee.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—Coffee, Rio No. 7, 11c; futures, steady; December, 10.05c; May, 9.24c.

FURTHER RECOVERY IN FRENCH EXCHANGE A FEATURE OF WEEK

FLUCTUATIONS IN FRENCH EXCHANGE WIDE DURING WEEK

Pronounced Strength Shown by Both Franc and Sterling — Indian Exchange Reaches Top for Year — Canadian at Discount.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly foreign exchange review today, says: "French and sterling exchange gave ample demonstrations of pronounced strength all through the past week, and although there was a general seeking for special incentives that could have inspired persistent and urgent buying, all the indications were that the higher levels were the natural sequence of the elapse of further time since the cessation of hostilities and a continued return march to normal financial, commerial and industrials conditions. Sterling sold at the highest level since the reaction started from the highest record of the year and the buying was largely by importers to remit proceeds of sales and by bankers having definite objects in creating and increasing credits in sterling accounts.

"Fluctuations in French exchange were wide and violent on nearly every day of the week, checks on Paris selling 7.07 on Monday, and after advancing to 7.40 in this market and 7.57 in London on Tuesday reacted to 7.11 later on that day, with wide rallies and similar reactions on the two following days. It is only a little over two weeks since French checks sold at 6.18 and it is a matter of general understanding that an enormous amount of short exchange was put out on that decline, which some of the sellers endeavored to cover during the past week. Italian moved in an orderly manner, but showed a generally strong tone. German at times displayed firmness, but did not materially alter its position.

"Indian exchange was strong in the first half of the week, when rupees advanced to above 30 cents, making a new high record for the year. Japanese exchange was unusually active, yen advancing from 48.40 to 48.80, a new high for the year. Canadian continued its reaction, its premium being changed into a discount in the last half of the week. Dutch exchange was in steady demand, guilders advancing to a new high level for the year."

"Firmness, however, ruled among the foreign exchanges, the news from Lausanne still being regarded as favorable. Sterling gained ½ cent at $4.49⅝ and French francs were up 1⅛ points at 7.15 cents. The Scandinavians were consistently higher, but the German mark receded slightly to selling at .01⅛ of a cent.

"Following are Saturday's quotations:

New York Sugar.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—The raw sugar market was firm and ¼c higher, with spot Cubas quoted at 4.00, cost and freight, equal to 5.78 for centrifugal. The raw sugar futures market was firmer and prices at one time showed advances of three to five points on trade buying, but eased off near the close on realizing. Closing: December, 3.95; March, 3.52; May, 3.64; July, 3.77. There was only a moderate inquiry for refined sugar, but prices were firm and unchanged at 7.00 to 7.10 for fine granulated. Refined futures nominal.

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—For today's sudden renewal of the selling movement on the Stock Exchange the fundamental explanation was that the liquidation which has been going on intermittently for over a month in response to the necessity according to one view, of strengthening the Wall Street position had again broken out. The immediate occasion for exposing this weakness was the announcement of the Bethlehem-Midvale merger, and the discovery that so far from being an argument in favor of the steel stocks, it could actually be used as a club against the entire market. The huge addition to the Bethlehem Steel capital was the thing most insisted upon. But besides this the thought was in people's minds that this latest merger had been put through in a effort to reduce costs to meet the sharp competition now going on in the steel trade.

It was when the market received the merger news with indifference and Bethlehem and Midvale shares commenced to fade away that traders were encouraged to renew their efforts on the short side generally. These efforts were more successful than those of the previous days, especially when directed against stocks like Standard Oil of N. J., Studebaker and Baldwin Loco., in which last summer's "bull" movement had been carried to the greatest extreme. The Standard Oil shares sold well below where they were before there was any talk of a stock dividend.

The weakest period in the day was the last quarter of an hour. Studebaker was off 8 points and Baldwin Loco 8 as compared with their highs of Friday morning. Steel common got down to the lowest since September. Columbia Gas was the worst sufferer among the public utilities. Railway stocks were off anywhere from a point to two points. The close was very weak at the lowest of the day.

The Bond Market.

Chief interest in today's bond market centered in the continued activity at advancing prices of French securities. The rise in those bonds was generally ascribed to the optimistic statement as to European conditions made by President Mitchell of the National City Bank. His declaration that at present prices French bonds represent "a ridiculously low credit rate" brought some good buying into the market. Both the 7½s and the 8s responded and Department of the Seine 7s were sympathetically strong.

Outside of the activity in the foreign group there was little interest shown in the market. Chicago-Great Western 4s, which had such a sensational run up just before the close Friday afternoon, dropped between 2 and 3 points today. Nor was any explanation at hand of Friday's episode. Other speculative bonds to score losses today included New Haven 6s and the New Orleans, Texas and Mexico incomes.

United States Government issues went slightly lower, but the very high-grade railroad bonds, of which Atchison General 4s is typical, held very firm.

It is very interesting to note that the weekly statement of the 785 member banks of the Federal Reserve system, published today, showed a decrease for the week of $29,000,000 in commercial loans and an increase of $17,000,000 in total investments. This latter increase is divided between $7,000,000 in Government and $10,000,000 in corporate securities. All these figures indicate a reversal of the liquidation on the part of the banks of securities bought at lower levels a year or so ago. It was this liquidation, according to one view, which was on of the factors adversely affecting the bond market during the recent decline.

NOTES.

Announcement of the Bethlehem Steel-Midvale Steel merger was certainly a disappointment to the street so far as its effect upon the stocks was concerned. Both were lower from the outset and were actively sold in the course of the two-hour session. Taking a par of $95 for Bethlehem and exchanging two for one with Midvale on a $50 par, figures out just about the relative selling prices as they were in Friday's market. Consequently there was no reason for an advance in Midvale, which did not include an advance in Bethlehem also. The market seemed to be taking into account more immediately the big addition to the supply of Bethlehem steel shares which would come as the result of the combination.

The Pittsburg Plate Glass Co. has declared an extra cash dividend of 5 per cent payable Jan. 20 to stockholders of record Jan. 5, and the usual quarterly dividend of 2 per cent payable Feb. 31 to stockholders of record Dec. 15. Directors will vote Jan. 29 on declaring a 30 per cent stock dividend.

HOGS REGAIN LOSS LATE IN THE WEEK

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last Week.	Prev. Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle and calves	34,872	35,235	18,789
Hogs	95,661	90,549	73,443
Sheep	10,525	10,477	5,755
Horses and mules	1,824	2,996	1,208
Totals	142,882	139,257	99,095

Declines for the week at the St. Louis National Stockyards were shown in cattle, sheep and lambs. Hog prices ruled downward the fore part of the week, but regained the loss during the past two days of the session. Receipts of cattle and calves were moderate and quality, with few exceptions, common to medium. The most severe break in values was on medium and common killing steers, losses on these averaging 50c. Strictly good steers declined 25c and there were not enough of the choice kind here to test the market for these. Heavier consumption of game and poultry, a usual condition for this time of the year, and a subsequent narrowing in the demand for fresh beef was a decidedly bearish factor in the week's trade, not only in steers, but also in butcher stock. Butcher yearlings depreciated 25c to 50c, some medium grades showing more loss. Butcher cows also dropped 25c to 50c, although canners and cutters were active throughout the period at full steady prices. Beef bulls closed barely steady and bolognas 25c down. The top price for cattle during the week was $11.75 per cwt., paid for two loads of yearling steers. This was followed by two other cars at $11.50. Medium to good killing steers sold largely from $7.50 to $9, plainer kinds in the $6 column or under. Some medium to good fleshed light-eight yearlings made $8.50 to $9.50, followed by plain grassers at $3.50 to $6.75 largely. Butcher cows varied from $3.75 to $5 mainly, cutters $2.75 to $3.50 and canners $2.50 to $2.75. Beef bulls with weight were valued at $4 to $5, and bolognas of medium to good quality at $3.50 to $4.50. Receipts and demand were moderate for stocker and feeder steers. The better grades declined 25c in sympathy with beef classes, although there was no essential change in the plainer offerings. Sales varied from $3.50 to $6.60. The only range steers of consequence here was a 12-car lot from South Texas that sold Friday at $5.64, $4.65, one load $3.50. Several dozen cars of Texas stock calves sold for stocker purposes, largely through a range of $4 to $6.50. The market for these closed 25c to 50c lower. Choice native veal calves depreciated $1.50, $8.50 constituting the closing top this week, as against $10 the preceding week. The bulk of lights on the close, moreover, sold around $8 and $8.25. Southern canner yearlings at $2.65 and $2.75 late closed 10c to 15c down.

Hog Receipts Heavy.

Hog receipts for the week showed a heavy total of 95,600 head, a gain of 5000 over the preceding week and of 22,000 over the corresponding week a year ago, when the Thanksgiving holiday cut it to a five-day session. Receipts the past week have proved the heaviest locally since the week ending Jan. 14 this year. For the first half of the week the market pursued a downward course, the burden of heavy supplies proving too much for salesmen to overcome. By Thursday heavy hogs were off 25c to 50 and lights 25c to 35c. From Friday to the close there was a reaction, however, and a good part of the losses of the fore part of the week were regained. There has been a notably heavy order demand from the East and this was largely responsible for the improved situation toward the close. The week finished with butcher hogs selling close to steady with the end of the previous week and light shipping hogs around 160 to 180 pounds also wound up with early losses regained. Pigs, 120 pounds and down closed 10c to 15c higher than the finish last week. Packer sows and stags closed 10c to 15c lower for the week. There has been a keen call for little peewee or roasting pigs, this being natural just prior to the Thanksgiving holidays. The demand for stock pigs picked up somewhat during the week. Prices of feeding hogs are now $2 to $3 per cwt. under the summer level and on this account are more attractive to country buyers. Illinois, Missouri and Tennessee buyers were here this week for thin pigs, vaccinated stock, 80 to 100 pounds going out at a cost of $9.50 to $10. Daily clearances were right good all week. At the close the range of prices on various classes and weights of hogs was as follows: Choice heavies, 250 pounds and up, $7.75 to $8; butcher hogs, 190 to 220 pounds, $7.90 to $8.10; shipping hogs, 160 to 180 pounds, $8 to $8.15; light lights, 130 to 150 pounds, $8.10 to $8.25; pigs, 120 pounds and under, $8 to $8.50; packing sows, $6.50 to $7; stags, $5 to $6.

Sheep Market Down.

Just a moderate number of sheep and lambs arrived during the past yet prices were on the decline the greater part of the week and at the close showed a loss of from 50c@$1. It is usual for a week or 10 days before Thanksgiving or Christmas when the run of poultry and game is heavy the market on sheep and lambs to break and that was the trouble last week. Towards the close of the week it took good to choice lambs to sell at $13.75@14.25, fair grades moved at $12.50@13.50, and the poor kinds around $12 and under while the best of the culls were selling at $9@10 and others from $4@8, according to quality. The poorer culls were hit pretty hard during the week. Sheep of all kinds were lower, but the mutton grades suffered most and are now back to the basis they sold on all summer and fall. Best mutton sheep at the close of the week were selling at $5.75@6, heavy and plain ewes $4@4.50, stockers $3@5, chappers and bucks $2.50@3.50, while the canners sold principally at $1@1.50.

Horses and Mules.

Commission receipts of horses and mules at the St. Louis market for the week figured 2000 head, a good supply. Of this total about 600 were horses, the bulk of which sold at auction. A few of the better Southern types held to a steady level, although a lower trend was evidenced on plain work horses and short necked chunks. A clearance was made of the offering.

Mules on commission totaled 1400 and in addition there were about 500 head consigned direct to dealers. The few better qualitied cotton mules available sold about steady, although all other kinds showed a tendency to sell cheaper. Movement was not especially brisk and clearance only fair. Offerings sold at auctions and on the alleys. Quality of the week's run was not particularly good.

SUBSTANTIAL DECLINES IN GRAIN PRICES AT WEEK-END

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—New estimates of the Argentine exportable surplus had much to do with giving a downward slant to the wheat market this week.

According to the latest figures, Argentine will be able to export 37,000,000 bushels more wheat this season than had been estimated earlier, and the enlarged estimate was given particular notice in view of advices of favorable weather for the Argentine harvest at present in progress. Reduction in estimates of the Australian wheat surplus acted subsequently as more or less of an offset, and so too did a bullish construction which in some quarters was placed on President Harding's reference to farmers.

Disquieting reports about British unemployment conditions, however, as well as bearish advices concerning the outlook for the winter wheat crop in this country, led to a fresh decline, and abatement of car shortage tended further to ease values. On the other hand, as the week drew to a close the wheat market gave considerable evidence of rallying power that was ascribed partly to gossip about plans to finance European breadstuff purchasing in the United States.

Corn and oats receded with wheat. It was asserted that feeding demand for corn had lessened, inasmuch as hogs were selling below the value of corn.

Packers buying made the provision market hold relatively steady.

Wheat futures closed substantially lower on the Merchants' Exchange at the week-end session. Corn also was down. The market lacked buying power.

In the local cash grain market wheat was 1c to 2c lower, all grades dragging. Cash corn was ½c to 2c lower. Offerings were large. Good demand at decline. Cash oats were ½c to 1¼c lower. Demand was limited.

Sales were made at the following prices in the cash grain market today:

WHEAT—Prices 1c to 3c lower on both red and hard wheats.
No. 2 red winter, $1.30@1.31.
No. 3 red winter, $1.26@1.26½. Light garlicky at $1.24.
No. 4 red, $1.23@1.24. Garlicky at $1.20½.
No. 1 hard winter, $1.23.
No. 2 dark hard, $1.26.
No. 2 yellow hard, $1.18 nom.

No. 3 white, 44c to 44¾c.
No. 4 white, 43¼c to 43½c.
No. 2 oats, 44½c.

The early range of prices of both wheat and corn was lower. Liverpool opened unchanged, but closed ¾d to 1d lower, which fact exerted bearish influence on the market.

December wheat opened at $1.18, May wheat $1.15⅝, July wheat $1.06⅛, December corn 70½c, May corn 70c and July corn 69¼c.

The three Northwestern markets combined Saturday had 2427 cars of wheat, compared with 1961 a week ago and 996 last year. Minneapolis today receiving 311 cars, Duluth 245 and Winnipeg 1871.

Local wheat receipts, which were 134,668, compared with 1,531,600 a week ago, and 39,600 last year, included 71 cars. Corn receipts, no local and 41 through, which were 89,700, compared with 94,900 a week ago and 81,900 last year, included 57 cars local and 12 through. Oats receipts which were 118,000 compared with 86,000 a week ago and 16,000 last year, included 34 cars local and 25 through. Hay receipts were 246 tons local and 114 through.

Stocks in St. Louis public elevators Saturday were 1,146,582 bushels of wheat, 425,290 bushels of corn, 214,789 bushels of oats. Stocks comprised 263,670 bushels of No. 2 red winter wheat, 10,951 bushels of No. 1 hard winter wheat, 150,153 bushels of No. 2 hard winter wheat, 54,332 bushels of No. 2 corn, 109,903 bushels of No. 2 yellow corn, 168,428 bushels of No. 2 yellow corn, 58,905 bushels of No. 2 white oats, 81,717 bushesl of No. 3 white oats and 1547 bushels of No. 2 rye.

Primary receipts of wheat were heavier than a week ago and heavier than a year ago, being 1,476,000 bushels. Corn receipts were heavier than a week ago and heavier than a year ago, being 814,000 bushels. Oats receipts were heavier than a week ago and heavier than a year ago, being 881,000 bushels.

Primary shipments of wheat were heavier than a week ago and heavier than a year ago, being 1,500,000 bushels. Corn receipts were lighter than a week ago and heavier than a year ago, being 500,000 bushels. Oats receipts were heavier than a week ago and heavier that a year ago, being 958,000 bushels.

Clearances today were 384,000 bushels of wheat, 94,000 bushels of corn, 30,000 bushels of oats, 31,000 barrels of flour and 434,000 bushels of wheat and flour.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—The wheat market was overbought and the action of the market today was a reflection of this condition. It is difficult to interest new buying in the market at these figures and longs are losing heart waiting for something new to turn up in order to stir up bullish enthusiasm. Supporting orders were uncovered after a decline of 2 cents and there was a little covering by early sellers, that caused a reaction from the low point. Seaboard reported a little parcel business in wheat with Germanay, but bids on round lots were 2c out of line. The weakness in Liverpool was due to increased and cheap offers of Argentine wheat for nearby shipment. Minneapolis cash wheat premiums were 1c to 2c lower, Winnipeg ⅝@¼ lower and at Chicago unchanged.

Wheat closed at the bottom, meeting with no support even at the last. Market closed 1½c to 2⅜c lower. December, $1.15⅞@1.16; May, $1.15⅛@1.15¼, and July $1.06⅞@1.07.

Corn suffered losses as the result of liquidation and poor buying power. West continues bullish on corn, but the Eastern situation is weak. Cash premiums were ¼c lower. Receipts are heavier.

Corn closed 1½c to 1⅝c lower; December, 69½c to 69@¼c; May, 68⅝@68¾c to 68⅝c, and July 68⅛c.

Oats suffered declines because of the weakness in other grains. Shipping demand is better.

Oats closed ¾c to 1¼c lower; December 42¼@42⅜c, May 42@42⅛c, July 39⅛c.

Provisions were firm. Hogs are higher and this induced a little Eastern buying. Offerings were light.

Lard closed 2½c higher and ribs 15c higher.

COTTON IS STEADY IN WEEK-END TRADE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—The cotton market was comparatively quiet today with the tone generally steady. Early advances were not fully maintained, with January selling off from 25.79 to 25.58, but the closing tone was steady with last prices showing net advances of 2 to 14 points. The market opened steady at an advance of 11 to 27 points on a continuation of the buying movement which had developed with the stopping of December notices yesterday. Buyers evidently found some encouragement in the larger spot sales officially reported in Southern markets late yesterday, and there was also bullish comment on week-end advices from the cotton goods trade. These features failed to stimulate any general or aggressive demand, but offerings were comparatively light during the early trading, with the market working up to 25.75 and 25.85 for March. These prices represented recoveries of 95 to 111 points from the low figures touched on the decline of last Tuesday, and appeared to attract scattered realizing for over the week-end. The tendency to take profits was probably promoted by reports of an unsettled tone in the stock market and last prices showed reactions of some 15 or 20 points from the best. December sold off to 25.52 and March to 25.66, but the later months closed a shade up from the lowest.

Buying on the reports of an improved spot demand and firmness in the cotton goods markets was probably restricted owing to continued complaints of poor trade conditions in Lancashire.

According to a Manchester trade authority, the business outlook for British goods is poor, as the world's consumers seem unable to pay present prices for a sufficient volume of goods to keep Lancashire's machinery employed. The spot sale officially reported in the Southern markets late yesterday were nearly double the recent average daily turnover.

Reports from the local cotton goods market indicated that there had been some increase of inquiry yesterday and that more business might have been done had mills been willing to sell freely for forward delivery at present prices.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 25.—Spot cotton steady 12 points up; sales on the spot 908; sales to arrive 600; low middling 24.75; middling 25.62; good middling 26.25. Receipts, 7262; stock, 292,417.

Boston Wool Market.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, Nov. 25.—The wool market continued very firm right up to the close of trading for the week. Volume of sales was small today, but heavy buying is reported going on for Boston account in London and Sydney. The apparent trend of the market is toward still higher prices, especially for three-eighths blood and quarter blood territories.

SELLING PRESURE FELT ON NEW YORK CURB MARKET

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—The Curb Exchange was subjected to the same heavy selling pressure today that was in evidence on the Stock Exchange.

Selling bore most severely against the Standard Oils because this was the group which had had the greatest rise in the market of a month or two ago. Standard of Indiana was the leader with quite a violent break. It left off 8 points lower on the week. Standard of New York fell 25 points, with a corresponding decline in the new $25 par shares. Magnolia Petroleum, Vacuum Oil, Standard of Kentucky and the new Standard Oil of New Jersey shares were all very weak, and so were the pipe line stocks. Prairie Pipe broke 10 points.

Ohio Oil announced a dividend of $3 a share on the 600,000 shares of capital stock payable to holders of record Dec. 1. Stockholders also approved an increase in the capital from $15,000,000 to $60,000,000. This increase will be used for the 300 per cent stock dividend. The weakness in the Standard Oils extended to the independent oil shares. Maracaibo, Mamoth Oil and City Service were all prominent in the decline.

ILLITERACY AMONG MISSOURI NEGROES SHOWS DECREASE

Less by 5.3 Per Cent in 10 Years, Population 13.2 Per Cent More, as Reported by Industrial Commission.

Illiteracy among negroes in Missouri has decreased 5.3 per cent in the last 10 years, as compared to an increase of 13.2 per cent in negro population in the same period, the Missouri Negro Industrial Commission reported at a recent meeting in Kansas City of the State Association for Negro Teachers.

The 1920 census places the negro population of the State at 178,241, of whom 75 per cent live in towns and cities. Illiterates total 18,528, or about 10.4 per cent of the total negro population. The report shows 4996 of the illiterate negroes live in St. Louis.

Enrollment of negro children in public schools in the State for this year totaled 32,893, an increase of 6443 over the previous year, the report states.

Figures given on inmates of penal institutions were: State Penitentiary, 749, of whom 711 are men; 71 girls in the industrial school at Tipton and 137 boys at Boonville.

"The number of negroes confined in our State penal institutions is far in excess of that warranted by their proportion of the total population of the State," the Commission report adds. "Negroes constitute approximately 34 per cent of the total prison population of the State, while the negro population is only about 5 per cent of the population of Missouri.

"Our leaders and social workers must labor earnestly to decrease the number of criminals of the race; the evils of environment must be corrected; the degenerates must be eliminated by practical eugenic measures."

Less migration to the cities was urged, the report stating negroes in rural communities often are not informed that the demand for unskilled labor in the cities is less than the supply, "hence there is less chance for making a comfortable living in the city, where the sanitary surroundings are likely to be inferior to those in the country."

Adoption of an anti-lynching law was recommended. Figures were presented to show there had been 83 lynchings in Missouri since 1889, 30 of them white persons.

If Your Skin Is Too Delicate for Clay, Try This Way

TELLS HOW

"Your face pores must be given a purgative, just like your bowels," says Professor Kahn, internationally noted beauty specialist. Then it becomes as exquisite as alabaster instantly.

"You can now do it at home in ten minutes, can purge your skin of the germ-laden dead oils that make it ugly." Obtain a jar of KANTOL at any of the Four Judge & Dolph stores.

Apply it according to directions and then go to your mirror. Blackheads gone, freckles reduced, your skin four to seven shades lighter and as lovely as a baby's! And in ten minutes! You will call it magic. Not a beauty clay, but an exquisite cream poultice made of plants and flowers.

Varying Functions at Clubs and Horse Show Feature Thanksgiving Social Program—Miss Mary Eleanor Scott to Make Debut at Tea Dance at St. Louis Club.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS, autumn leaves turkey and plum pudding will take on the added social importance this week which they usually acquire at this season. A glance at the calendar reveals that a majority, although not all the events of the week, will be in celebration of the holiday. The Thanksgiving day programs of the clubs are to be numerous and varied, ranging from Thanksgiving eve dinner dance at the Bellerive Country Club, to the 1 o'clock luncheon at the St. Louis Country Club, with attractive decorations appropriate to the day. The debutantes, too, will have more than their share of the fun, motoring from tea dances to dinners, and later to formal evening parties, with many attending the football games.

The largest of the formal functions will be the luncheon to be given at the St. Louis Country Club Thanksgiving afternoon for Miss Helen Gratz and Miss Eleanor Filley Richards by Mrs. John Dwight Filley of Westmoreland place, when the guests will number 50; a luncheon for 20 persons at the same club by Miss Erwin Hayward, and an equal number at a similar affair by Mrs. Nannie Wright. Later in the afternoon the belles and beaux will congregate at the home of Mrs. George H. Goddard and her daughter, Mrs. David C. Biggs, 5370 Waterman avenue, for a mixed tea to be given to present formally Mrs. Goddard's granddaughter, Miss Nano Goddard, to society. From 4 to 7 o'clock the St. Louis Club will be the scene of another tea dance complimenting Miss Mary Eleanor Scott, who will make her bow to the social world that day. The affair will be given by the debutante's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oreon Earle Scott. About 400 guests have been invited.

In a setting similar to the one in which Miss Alice Scott was introduced to society Friday night, Miss Elizabeth Carter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Ray Carter of 8 Portland place, will take her place among the feted debutantes, at a Thanksgiving ball at the Country Club. In a garden of roses, interspersed with green, with pergolas and fountains playing to magnify the illusion of summer, the girlish debutante, in satin and silver lace, will receive 250 guests.

At some distance from the Country Club, though of equal interest to those who frequent it, will be the Horse Show, where "King Dobbin" will hold court on the tanbark of the Coliseum arena, not only Thanksgiving night, but the one preceding it and the two following. The horse show management has planned to bring back the social charm of the show of former years, with high bred horses in the background, and society, jewel bedecked and satin-gowned, in the boxes and on the promenade.

Some of the social world have not only entered their horses, but will ride or drive them in the ring. Miss Audrey Faust has entered her three-gaited horse, "Glossie McDonald;" Mrs. Edward J. Walsh will have her five-gaited horses "Bargain Hunter" and "Robinhood," and Miss Helen Frampton has entered her five-gaited horse "Black Satin," which she will ride in class 22—Five-Gaited Stake Class. Miss Frampton also will drive in the Hackney class.

Miss May Cabanne also will participate in the show, and Miss Catherine Louise Crunden, one of the most skillful and daring equestriennes in St. Louis, will compete in the Hunter classes.

Among noted horsewomen from out of the city will be Mrs. Loula Long Coombs of Kansas City, who will show her horses that won in England last year. Mrs. Coombs will show her fine harness horses, "Animation" and "Admiration," in Class 17. She will also exhibit four horses in the High Stepping Class. "Animation," "Admiration," "Revelation," and "Temptation," as well as her famous saddle horse, "The Sheik."

Mrs. A. P. Roth of California will show her saddle horse, "Lou Ann."

Miss Gertrude B. Hardt of Chicago has entered her stable of fine show horses, including saddle, harness horses and will drive and ride in a number of classes.

The box holders for the show are: O. J. Anderson, Col. Halsey E. Yates, Morton May, S. Bayles, Judson N. Bemis, Festus J. Wade, Charles E. Bascom, Edward L. Bakewell, C. P. DeLore, W. O. Suhre, Paul Brown, A. J. Seigel, Dr. John Caulke, Breckinridge Jones, Percy Orthwein, O. R. Cox, Max Orthwein, B. F. Bush, Thomas W. Garland, C. R. Scudder, H. B. Wallace Jr., E. A. Biggs, Paul Bakewell Jr., A. C. Stuever, Arthur J. Donnelly, Stewart McDonald, Roger Pemberton, Robert Bushnell, A. G. Galbraith, Col. T. B. Bernard, D. L. Parrish and Jas. E. Newell.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Clarkson of 5412 Cabanne avenue have sent out invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Hallie Clarkson, to Harland H. Frazer, which will take place Dec. 16 at the St. Louis Woman's Club, the Rev. Dr. Ivan Lee Holt officiating.

Mrs. John E. Mitchell Jr. will attend the bride as matron of honor, and George W. Clarkson Jr. will be best man.

Dr. Theodore G. Soares of Chicago University will arrive in St. Louis tomorrow and will continue his series of lectures at the Church of the Messiah tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock and Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. The Reception Committee appointed to receive Dr. Soares will comprise Mmes. George C. Hitchcock, Charles Claflin Allen, Robert McKittrick Jones, George D. Markham, Louis Marion McCall, George Dodson, E. A. de Wolf, Ellen Filley Richards, Joseph Warren Goddard, Warren Goddard, Ellen Brown, Frederick B. Chamberlain, E. J. Glasgow Jr., Alice Thomas Groesbeck, Charles Darling Ashcroft, John W. Day, and Misses Nellie Richards, Bella Taussig, Emma Taussig, Elizabeth Krum and Geneva Crumb.

CHURCHWOMAN'S CLUB TEA AND BAZAR TUESDAY

A TEA will be given Tuesday afternoon in the ballroom of the Chase Hotel as a feature of the Churchwoman's Club bazar, the preparations for which have grown to such an extent that yesterday it was decided to take the big ballroom instead of a smaller room, as had ben planned. The bazar will be held from 10 o'clock in the morning to 5 in the afternoon, and tea will be served from 1 to 5 by Mmes. Thomas Maffitt, J. A. Seddon; Edward F. Goltra and Scott Porter.

The many charities and welfare agencies which will receive the proceeds of the bazar have enlisted the co-operation of many prominent women who will assist at the various tables. The money will furnish outings for poor sick children, bring cheer to old men and women in institutions, help struggling missions and further social service work in hospitals.

Among those working for the success of the bazar are: Mmes. Fitzhugh Turner, Horace W. Soper, Richard Morey, William Bagnell, James A. Waterworth, George M. Tuttle, Columbus Haile, E. Lansing Ray, Roger Shapleigh, Hugh McKittrick, Edward Baker, Otto Mersman, W. A. Shoemaker, Goodman King, George Hoblitzelle, John Fowler, Charles White Scudder, Charles Wiggins, Henry Garneau, Marshall Hodgman, Frank H. Hamilton, William La Beaume, Thomas Maffitt, Robert Burkham, Samuel C. Davis, Claude Kennerly, George Graham, Arthur Garrison, Henry Clarkson Scott, Clifford McMillan, T. Ewing White, John Betts, Alden Kimball, Dan Jones, S. C. Finnell, James L. Ford Jr., S. G. Harbison, Bruce Seddon, John Shepley, H. J. Littledale, Harry G. Hurd, C. S. Jones, Stephen B. Sheldon, F. W. A. Vesper and C. K. Knight, and Misses Ida Pollard, Elizabeth Waller, Marian Cornatzer and Mary Younglove.

THE Christmas holiday calendar is filling rapidly, especially with parties for the college set, and today plans for several new ones are announced.

Mrs. William F. Woermer of 6433 Wydown boulevard will give a tea dance for Miss Virginia Cabanne Link, a debutante, and Miss Ruth Woermer, daughter of the hostess, the afternoon of Dec. 23. Miss Woermer will be graduated in June from the Georgetown Convent in Washington, D. C. On Dec. 9, Mr. and Mrs. Lon O. Hocker of Portland place will be hosts at a similar affair for their son, Berry Hocker, at the St. Louis Woman's Club. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brookings Wallace have sent out invitations to an evening dance for their daughter, Miss Anne Wallace, and their son, John Wallace, Dec. 27, at the St. Louis Country Club.

Then, on Dec. 23, Mrs. Arthur B. Shepley will give a dinner for her daughter, Miss Emily Shepley, who will return from Miss Porter's School at Farmington, Conn., for the holidays; on the same evening Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Rumsey will entertain the school set for their daughter, Miss Peggy Rumsey; Mrs. Warren Finlay McElroy will have a tea dance at Hotel Chase for her daughter, Miss Ruth McElroy, and her son, Finlay Jr., Dec. 26, and Mr. and Mrs. George Fox Steedman will give a dance for their daughter, Miss Medora Steedman, Dec. 28.

All of the boxes have been taken for the College Club's annual scholarship benefit performance at the Shubert-Jefferson Theater Dec. 11, one each by the following schools: Bryn Mawr, Vassar, Wellesley, Lindenwood, Washington University, St. Louis University, the University of Missouri and Cornell, while blocks of seats have been taken by Smith, Princeton, Yale, Michigan, Wisconsin and Illinois. The balcony is being sold to high school students.

The entire act feature will include quartet singing by representatives of some of the leading colleges. Mrs. William I. Nardin is taking reservations for an after-theater party to be given at the Jefferson Hotel.

Miss Dorothy Jackes, chairman of the benefit, has as her committee Mrs. Edmund Brown, Miss Susan Sherry, Miss Gertrude Prack, Mrs. William I. Nardin, Mrs. E. P. Burlingame, Miss Lucille Bryan, Miss Kathleen Lucy, Mrs. Philip Drabbelle, Mrs. Walter Schmitz and Mrs. Harry Collins.

Several St. Louis artists have agreed to make posters for the club. Tickets for the performance are being sold by members of the College Club, and reservations may be made at the Schmitz & Schroder Clothing Co., at Sixth street and Washington avenue, Dec. 2, at 9 o'clock.

The list of patronesses for the recital which the Catholic Woman's League will give at the Odeon the evening of Tuesday, Dec. 12, is announced, and includes the following women: Mmes. Theodore Benoist, Edward J. Walsh, James G. Cahill, John A. Calnane, Edward J. Scott, Paul F. Kistner, John Ring Jr., W. D. Barter, V. W. Bergenthal, Leo DeS. Carton, A. A. Cervantes, George Clayes, Seth W. Cobb, W. T. Donovan, Catherine Drew, C. Marquard Forster, J M. Franciscus, J. Alex Goodwin, Frank D. Healy, O. Oscar Lamy, W. C. McBride, George McNulty, C. E. Maloy, George E. Mathieu, W. K. Morrison, J. F. Murphy, A. A. O'Halloran, E. V. Papin, Marie Reine de Penaloza, A. V. Reyburn, James Ring, Paul Robyn, John Scott, Martin Shaughnessy, H. B. Spiekerman, Charles P. Stanley, W. D. Sullivan, D. G. Taylor, George Tiffany, Volney C. Turner, Festus J. Wade, R. L. Weinert, and Misses Clara Myerson, Eugenia Chouteau and Pauline Boisliniere.

Louis D. Lawnin of 5138 Washington boulevard and his daughter, Miss Josephine Lawnin, have returned from the East, where they have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Lawnin's youngest daughter, Miss Julia Lawnin, who attends the Finch School in New York, and witnessing the various Eastern football games. Miss Julia Lawnin will return home for the Christmas holidays about Dec. 16.

Mrs. Gustavo di Rosa of Boston has arrived in St. Louis to visit her mother, Mrs. William H. Scudder, of the Chase Apartments. Mr. di Rosa will join his wife at Christmas time. Mr. and Mrs. di Rosa's son, Rene di Rosa, has been with his grandmother since her visit in the East this summer.

Mrs. Harry L. Sparks of 5710 Waterman avenue gave a bridge luncheon Wednesday at the Missouri Athletic Association for the following guests: Mmes. Lee St. Cyr, P. C. Sparks, W. F. Shelton, E. C. Cash, St. Clair Hill, J. J. Daniels, E. C. Blumeyer, A. A. Blumeyer, Edward A. Langan, Rozier Wickard, James K. Wass, R. L. Ruch, Thomas Taylor, Paul Gildehaus and W. O. L. Suhre.

MISS ADA JOHNSON TO BE MARRIED SATURDAY

CONSPICUOUS in a week crowded with important events, will be the wedding Saturday afternoon of Miss Ada Rand Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Johnson of 25 Portland place, and James Russell Forgan, of Chicago. The Johnson home will be the scene of the nuptials, and the Rev. John W. MacIvor of the Central Presbyterian Church will officiate.

The attendants, many of them from out-of-town, will arrive the first of this week, and an almost continuous succession of parties will occupy their attention until the day of the wedding. The entire bridal party is as follows: Mrs. Bradford Shinkle, Miss Johnson's sister, matron of honor; her niece, Miss Marjorie Niedringhaus, maid of honor, and Misses Elise Garneau, Erwin Halward, Grace Taylor, Audrey Faust, Mrs. Oliver Rodgers of Pittsburg, and Mrs. Halstead Freeman, New York.

Mr. Forgan will have his brother, David Forgan Jr., as best man, and Joseph Werner and Andrew Johnson of St. Louis; Donald Lowrie and Louis Tilden, Chicago; Rudolph E. Vogel of Milwaukee; Malcolm S. Davis and Eugene Maxwell of New York; John Ingersoll, Philadelphia, and Oliver Rodgers of Pittsburg, as groomsmen and ushers.

Wednesday evening Mr. Forgan will give his bachelor dinner at the Racquet Club, and the following day Miss Garneau, Miss Taylor and Miss Haywood will be hostesses at a luncheon at the St. Louis Country Club honoring the bride-elect, and Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Johnson of 10 Hortense place will give a dinner dance Thursday evening at their home for Miss Johnson and Mr. Forgan. Friday is the day of Mr. Werner's luncheon at the Werner home in Westmoreland place, and that evening Mr. and Mrs. Bradford Shinkle will give a dinner dance for the bridal party.

Jan. 6 has been set as the date of the marriage of Miss Katherine Slayback of New York and Eugene Miltenberger, formerly of St. Louis. The ceremony will be performed in St. Thomas' Church, in the presence of a large number of guests, and a reception will follow at the home of Miss Slayback's parents.

The wedding is of particular interest to St. Louisans. The Miltenbergers resided here before the removal to New York several years ago. Th bridegroom's mother is Mrs. Louise Franciscus Miltenberger, and his cousin, James M. Franciscus Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Franciscus of 10 Lenox place, will be one of the ushers at the ceremony.

Mrs. E. B. Mayfield of 2 Lewis place, entertained her Sunday School class at a luncheon Friday, following which a fancy work and doll sale was held.

LIST OF PATRONESSES FOR YALE MUSIC CLUB'S CONCERT

THE list of patronesses is announced for the Yale music club concert to be given at the Odeon, Jan. 3, toward which the social world of St. Louis is looking forward with interest, because the appearance of an Eastern college musical organization is always the occasion of a number of social functions, and in particular because of the disappointment of the St. Louis Yale Alumni Association, with a membership of about 250 persons, over the non-appearance of the club last year because of the fuel shortage. The concert is to include numbers by the glee, banjo and mandolin clubs, numbering 40 men in all.

Among St. Louisans who are former members of the clubs are: George W. Simmons, Fred B. Eisman, Edward Hudson Barstow, George Mather Brown, Wallace D. Simmons and Edward Gillett Hotchkiss. Duncan I. Meier is president of the local alumni association, James W. Wear is vice president and Ethan Allen H. Shepley is secretary.

The patronesses include Mmes. Gerard B. Allen, Clifford B. Allen, H. N. Arnstein, Douglas H. Atwill, Floyd B. Augustine, George A. Bass, George L. Bridge, D. M. Boyd, Arthur Bostwick, John E. Make Yourself More Attractive

WOMEN know that natural "GOOD LOOKS" is an asset in business. MEN should realize this, too. The commonest signs of middle age and the most destructive of "BEAUTY" is the lost YOUTHFUL CONTOUR OF THE FACE. A slight facial correction properly done, as in the case of Miss Edna Wallace Hopper (the actress) may mean your future happiness and success. See

WEDDINGS PERFORMED AND OTHERS PLANNED

Miss Hilda Schuler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Schuler, has set Thanksgivng day for her marriage to Louis J. Hoffmann, son of Mrs. Hannah Hoffmann. The wedding will take place at the home of the bride, 3522A Wyoming street, at 5 p. m. Miss Florence Schuler, sister of the bride, will be bridesmaid, and Edward J. Monaghan, uncle of the bridegroom, will be best man. The wedding will be attended by the immediate families of the bride and bridegroom. After Dec. 15, Mr. Hoffmann and his bride will be at home at 3919 De Tonty street.

The wedding of Miss Edeline Geronin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Geronin of Holly Grove, Ark., to Herman I. Summerfield Jr. of Memphis, was quietly solemnized Wednesday noon at the home of the bride's parents, Rabbi Wm. Fineshriber of Memphis, officiating.

The house was decorated with chrysanthemums, palms and a profusion of cut flowers. The bride's attendants were Mrs. T. Haas Marcus of St. Louis and Miss Helen Dante of Dumas, Ark. Herman Geronin, brother of the bride, acted as best man.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore her traveling costume of beige cloth, with accessories to match and a corsage of orchids, roses and lilies of the valley. After the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Summerfield Jr left immediately for New York.

Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. H. I. Summerfield, parents of the bridegroom; Herbert Summerfield, Henry Loeb Jr., Norman Bacharach of Memphis, Mrs. T. H. Marcus, St. Louis; Miss Helen Dante, Dumas, Ark.; Mrs. Hunter Girault and Miss Sara Tennenbaum of Little Rock, Mrs. Max Rollins, New York; Gabe Harris, Haynesville, La., and J. A. Berk, Magnolia, Ark.

Mr. and Mrs. Christ Jaudes of 3500 California avenue gave a luncheon Saturday, announcing the engagement of their daughter, Hilda, to William Wayne Travis of Tulsa, Ok. Jan. 1, 1923, has been selected for the date of the marriage. The couple will reside in Tulsa.

Covers were laid for 36. Those present were Misses Bertha Gaensslen, Emma Jordi, Amelia Keiser, Lottie Keehne, Marie Jaudes, Minnie Jaudes, Louise Jaudes, Helen Oehler, Dollie Mitchell, Esther Frommeyer, Doris Frank, Nellie McCarthy, Charolotte Rose, Edna Jackson, Leah Kelly, Elsie Flachman, Clara Mills, Eleanore Young, Hilda Zahner, Cuba Harrod, Elizabeth Wisghmeyer, Lorene Rodemich, Milly Herzog Emily Becker, Mildred Jackson, Adele McDonald, Gussie Morrisseau, Mildred Morrisseau, Mesdames Edwin Keiser, William Klein, Norman V. Dixon, and Louis Fink.

Miss Dorothy Lisner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Lisner of 1420 Pendleton avenue, will be married Thanksgiving night to Maurice Steingold of Detroit, at the B'nai Amoona Synagogue. After a honeymoon trip to California, they will make their home in Detroit.

The marriage of Miss Irene Coleman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Coleman of Valley Park, Mo., and Otto A. Deutschman, took place Oct. 25 at the Sacred Heart Church of Valley Park.

The Rev. and Mrs. A. Mass of 5085 Vernon avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Laura Mass, to Philip Oscherwitz of Cincinnati, son of J. Oscherwitz of Cincinnati. No date has been set for the wedding.

A wedding of Nov. 8 was that of Miss Emilie Murphy, and Louis A. Maginn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Maginn of 5566 Maple avenue. Miss Frances Maginn and W. Shepard Maginn, sister and brother of the bridegroom, were maid of honor and best man, respectively. After a short wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Maginn will reside at 5822 Westminster place.

The wedding of Miss Olga Uhlman, daughter of Mrs. Josephine Uhlman, 4309 Lindell boulevard, and Louis J. Boggiano Jr., 4882 Maryland avenue, took place at 9 o'clock on the morning of Nov. 15 at the New Cathedral, the Rev. Father Tucker officiating. Miss Virginia Boggiano, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor, and Robert Heffernan was best man.

The bride wore a three-piece suit of navy blue marvella cloth, trimmed in squirrel, and a silver cloth hat trimmed with silver grapes. Her flowers were a corsage of orchids and valley lilies. The maid of honor was gowned in a brown marvella suit with a satin hat to match, and a corsage of Ward roses.

A breakfast for the families and bridal party followed at the home of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Boggiano will be at home at 4924 Buckingham court upon their return from a honeymoon trip.

The Terry Mission, 5799 St. Louis avenue, was the scene Saturday evening, Nov. 18, of the wedding of Miss Hattie Weininger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Z. J. Weininger of St. Louis County, and Joseph C. Courtney of Topeka, Kan. The Rev. Dr. G. W. Ballinger, new pastor of the mission, performed the ceremony at 7 o'clock. The room in which the vows were said was decorated with flowers and the bridal party stood under a wedding bell. The couple will reside in Topeka.

Miss Agnes M. Blase, daughter of Mrs. Mary Blase of 4222 South Thirty-eighth street, will be married at 9 o'clock Thanksgiving day to Charles C. Vogler. The ceremony will be performed at St. Anthony's Church, and the choir, of which the bridegroom is a member, will sing. Mr. Vogler was educated at St. Joseph's College and St. Louis University.

Mr. and Mrs. I. Sullivan of 3564 California avenue announce the marriage of their son, Eugene A. Sullivan, to Christine Wallace, Nov. 22, at Hutchison, Kan. They will come to St. Louis for the holidays and will make their home in Hutchison.

The wedding of Miss Manon Doermann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Doermann of 3502 Palm street, and Carl Methudy, 2202 California avenue, took place last night at the home of the bride's parents, the Rev. Mr. Bucheimer of the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer officiating. Mrs. Laura Beiser was matron of honor, Miss Ilda Westerbeck, maid of honor; Eugene Methudy, best man, and Russell Richardson, bridegroomsman.

After a honeymoon tour Mr. Methudy and his bride will make their home with Mr. and Mrs. Doermann.

From Cologne, Germany, comes a card announcing the engagement of Miss Elly Sames of Cologne and Charles Winkler of 2250 Indiana avenue, St. Louis.

A luncheon in honor of Elizabeth Ryre Koch of Alton, Ill., was given yesterday afternoon, in the Busy Bee tea room, by a number of her friends. A shower of handkerchiefs made a pleasant surprise. The guests were: Mrs. Maude R. Johnson and Misses Constance Fuchs, Hazel Ludwig, Florence Siesfeld, Theona Bereman, Grace S'Renco, Beatrice Ettling, Augusta Whissell, Mrs. Ross C. Wafer, Ann Brynes, Cecille Dillenhein, Florence Gorman, Virginia Green, Margaret Lancaster, Isabel O'Hara, Ethelynne Sward, Agnes Wissmann, Minnie Fishman, Kathryn Maxey, Margaret Costello and Helene Kraft. Miss Koch is to be married to Dr. Groves Smith during the Christmas holidays.

The next meeting of the Miriam Chapter 17, U. O. T. S., will be held at Harburger Hall, Tuesday, Nov. 28 at 2 p. m. At 3:45 the Miriam Study Circle will present two papers, followed by discussions of "The Cloak," (N. V. Gogol), by Miss Hattie W. Thurman, and "Ward No. 6" (Anton Chekhow) by Rose L. Brown. Guests will be welcome.

The University Musical Research Club will meet at Vandervoort's Music Hall Tuesday, Nov. 28, at 2 p. m. Polyphonic and monophonic forms will be the subject under discussion and the program will be given by Mrs. Violet Duncan, Mrs. Bertha Libby Smith, and Miss Lenora Link, with Mrs. Stuart M. Chambers and Mrs. Hugo Wiemers, accompanists.

Mrs. Wiemers, who recently returned after seven months abroad, has resumed her work as director of the U. M. R. Chorus. A special chorus rehearsal will be held at 10:30 a. m., Tuesday, Dec. 5 at Baldwin Hall.

The Tuxedo Club met Nov. 14, at Vandervoort's with Mrs. F. C. Petty as hostess. Mrs. John S. Payne gave a talk. The next meeting will be held Nov. 28, which will be a sewing day for charity, at the home of Mrs. M. H. Marshall, 4118 Westminster place.

Mrs. Frederick Nussbaum, musician and composer, was honoree at a meeting of the Webster Groves Federated Literary Society Tuesday. Mrs. T. H. Heath was hostess. A group of Mrs. Nussbaum's songs and instrumental compositions were given, together with two compositions by Ellis Levy. The society devotes two meetings a year to the study of music.

The Mount Pleasant School Mothers and Teachers Circle will meet Dec. 1 at 3:30 o'clock in the kindergarten of the school. Ray Short will speak to the organization.

The Market Price

LOOK on the market page and you will see the price quotation on staple commodities, on cotton, wheat, metals, bonds, etc., and there is only one quotation—the selling price.

There is a standard of value for such commodities, governed by supply and demand; but there is no standard of value for a manufactured article, and it bears all sorts of prices—first, the manufacturer's; and last, the retailer's.

The price the consumer pays indicates his acceptance of that valuation. To claim a greater value is merely expressing an opinion, frequently biased and unfounded.

We do not quote comparative prices in our advertising, even when merchandise is reduced. We accept fluctuations as a matter of course, just as you find them on the market page—and advertise only the selling price.

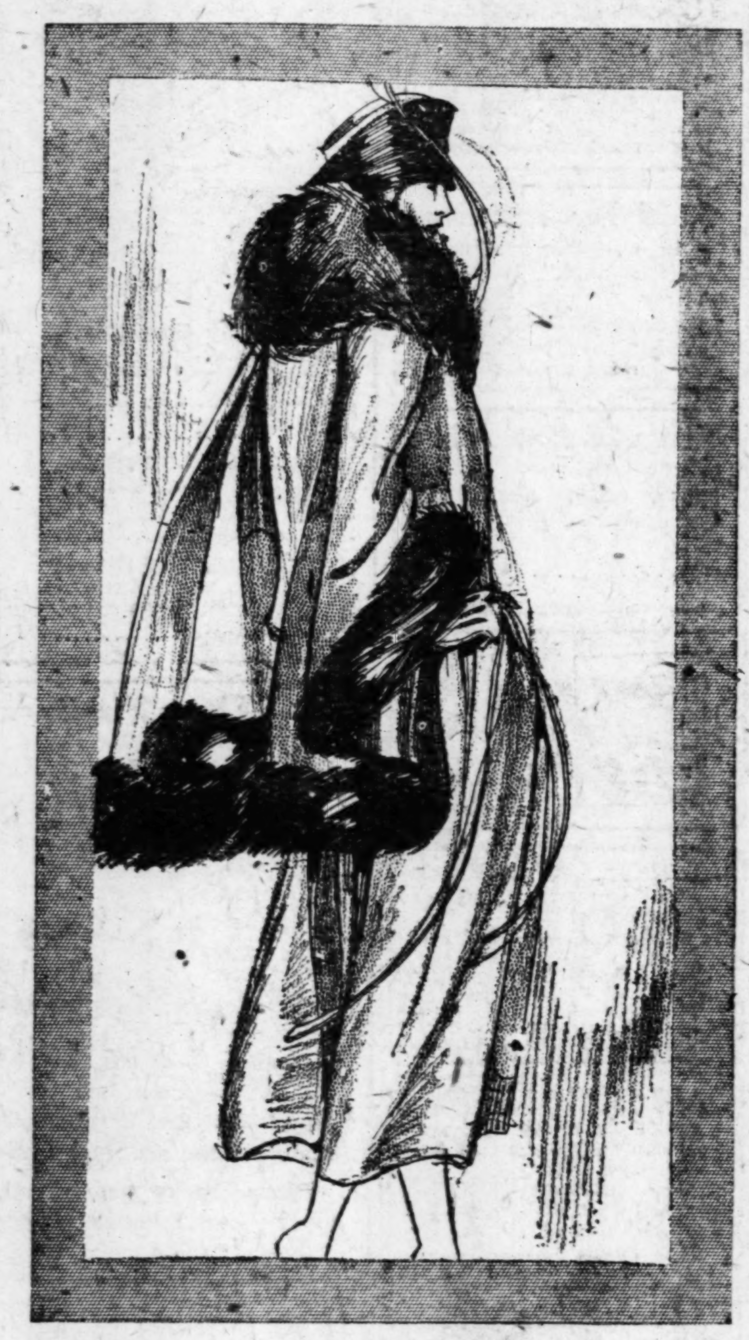
Announcing—Beginning Tomorrow—the "Original"

November Sale of Outer-Apparel



FOR twenty years we have chosen this time to offer superior merchandise at the lowest prices of the whole year. This year, as a result of long and careful planning and purchasing, we are offering an assemblage of outer-garments which excels, in beauty, quality and low price, the tremendous preceding annual sales. We invite you to attend this great event.

Suits of Distinction

In the November Sale

$29.75 and $59.75

IN the first group are smart Suits of superior fabrics, furs and styles. The handsome fabrics include marleens, velours, duvet de laine, Poiret twill and other modish materials.

The second group consists of three-piece costumes of rich marleen, with deep collars of taupe wolf and nutria. The chic blouses are of crepe de chine.

(Third Floor.)

The November Sale

HOW TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR

A Cincinnati Barber Tells How to Make a Remedy for Gray Hair

A well-known resident of Cincinnati, Ohio, who has been a barber for more than forty years, recently made the following statement:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home, at very little cost, that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray haired person look twenty years younger. It is easy to use, does not color the most delicate scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off."

WOMEN'S CLUB NOTES

Club and the Tuesday Study Club of Webster, and Mrs. G. W. Baumhoff gave an account of the luncheon at the National Federation of Women's Clubs.

After the business session, Mrs. Fortune, president, read a paper on "St. Louis Musicians and Composers."

Mrs. Nussbaum, director of the Melharmonic Club, St. Louis, and three pupils, Misses Doris Grove, Anna Sorkin and Pauline Bell, gave a musical program.

The Tuesday Literary Club met at the Artists' Guild, Nov. 21 at 2:30 p. m. Mrs. Ernest Ohle, the leader for the day, introduced Prof. M. Roy Mackenzie of Washington University, who gave an address, "George Bernard Shaw, the man and his message."

The Missouri Society, Daughters of 1812, met at the Buckingham Hotel Thursday, with Mmes. Louise Sumner, Mary Butler Ducorron and H. P. Williams as hostesses. Reports from the State Council were given by Mrs. Ray Burns, State Auditor; Mrs. L. M. Ottofy, State president, and Mrs. John Trigg Moss.

Mrs. Sumner gave a sketch of the cornerstone laying of the Victory Memorial Building in Washington. Mrs. Frank Howard, accompanied by Mrs. Lyle Campbell, pianiste, and Mrs. John H. Eggert, violiniste, sang a group of songs. A reception for new members followed.

The St. Louis Chapter, Daughters of the Confederacy, will meet Monday, Dec. 4, at the residence of Mrs. Edwin B. Sherzer, 5909 Cabanne avenue. The assisting hostesses will be Mrs. Fred Vierling and Mrs. J. J. Miller.

Mrs. J. G. Calhoun of 5736 Bartmer avenue, will entertain the executive board of the chapter at a luncheon Friday, Dec. 1.

The Bay View Reading Club met last week at the home of Mrs. R. N. Denham. "Labor Problem in England, and Titled Women in Trade" was the subject of a paper read by Miss Aylesworth, followed by a discussion by Mrs. Wood of Strachey's "Life of Queen Victoria."

The Tuesday Club of Kirkwood met at the home of the Misses Brunner Tuesday, Nov. 21. The meeting was devoted to art. The roll call was responded to with art news, and Mrs. Franklin Kean gave a talk on Missouri artists. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Moore.

Mrs. George Gellhorn will speak before the Quest Club of the Kingshighway Presbyterian Church, Tuesday, Nov. 28. Her subject will be "Woman's Adventure in the New World."

The Pleasant Hour Club, M. F. W. C., met Nov. 15 at the home of Mrs. Roy Butts, 5605 Maple avenue. A paper was read by Mrs. Joseph Kelly. The next meeting will be held December 20.

The Clotho Club met at the home of Mrs. George J. Deitz, 280 Skinker road, Nov. 16. A 1 o'clock luncheon preceded the business meeting. "Your Idea of a Failure" was given in response to the roll call. Two papers, "The Capital of Mexico," by Mrs. Louis Schoenfeld, and "Hawaiian Folk Tales" by Mrs. Thomas E. Ferguson, were read. A donation was made to The People's Hospital.

The Forethought Literary Club of Cabanne held its regular meeting Thursday, Nov. 16 at the home of Mrs. B. B. Gould, 5051 Minerva avenue. Luncheon was served at 1 o'clock. A scholarship loan fund was started, each member contributing $5. Mrs. J. M. Schumacher closed a study of contemporary American novelists from 1920 to 1922. The next meeting will be held Dec. 1 with Mrs. J. B. Wilson, 5947 Maple avenue.

The Beauty of Youth and Loveliness for St. Louis Through

MINERALAVA

The Great Corrective of Nature for All Disorders of the Human Skin Endorsed by Men and Women All Over the United States

BEAUTIFUL IRENE BORDONI says:

"I would not miss my two weekly treatments of Mineralava Beauty Clay for anything. Nothing has worked such wonders in clearing up my skin and retaining the contour of my face and neck. It is the perfect Beauty treatment."

MINERALAVA is a natural Beauty Clay that purifies the skin and by stimulating its blood circulation and its nerve tissues, brings it to that condition of perfect health that it knew in youth—free from all blemishes and wrinkles.

Discovered twenty-three years ago and perfected by noted chemists of Europe and America it had added to its own inherent qualities certain medical ingredients of great curative and stimulating power that have made it the most perfect complexion beautifier in the world today.

It corrects the blemishes you can see and it works constantly on the delicate under skin, nourishing it to a ripe and lovely texture, so that as the blemished skin flakes naturally away the new and beautiful skin is ready to take its place, new born and beautiful.

Enthusiastic women all over the United States declare that:

A MINERALAVA SKIN NEVER AGES

Hundreds of thousands of women have voluntarily testified to the wonder-working qualities of MINERALAVA and it has the enthusiastic praise of such beauties of the stage and screen as Billie Burke, Marjorie Rambeau, Julia Sanderson, Zitelka Dolores, Kyra, the dancer, Priscilla Dean and countless others who are using it and endorse it.

EVERY DEALER IN ST. LOUIS CAN SUPPLY YOU

Long after the perfection of MINERALAVA its use was limited to the Beauty Parlors where as high as $15 was often charged for a single treatment. Today it is within reach of every St. Louis home.

In spite of its original high cost MINERALAVA is today at the service of all women at $2.00 a bottle.

Each bottle contains enough for eighteen full treatments at a trifle more than ten cents a treatment. It is sold with our own—and backed by your own local dealer's—money-back guarantee, if MINERALAVA does not do all and more than we claim for it your money is refunded.

THE INTRODUCTORY TRIAL TUBE

In order that the greatest number of people may realize the tremendous advantage and benefit to be derived from MINERALAVA we have placed on the market an Introductory Trial Tube at 50 cents. Use this as directed and we are certain that no woman in search of that crowning glory, Beauty, will fail to get the full eighteen treatments in the $2.00 bottle, and award MINERALAVA a permanent and honored place on her dressing table.

Every dependable Drug and Department Store in St. Louis is ready today to furnish you your supply of MINERALAVA under our positive money-back guarantee if you're not convinced that it is the most marvellous skin corrective and Beautifier ever offered to the American people.

MINERALAVA cannot be successfully imitated.

RIGHT TO VOTE ON ANNEXATION AT ANY TIME SOUGHT

Chamber of Commerce Directors Oppose Section of New Constitution Proposed by Committee.

Opposition to any provision in the proposed new Constitution which would deprive St. Louis of the right to obtain a vote of the city and county at any time on any annexation scheme which might be worked out, was included in resolutions adopted Friday by the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce and forwarded to Daniel G. Taylor, chairman of the Constitution Convention Committee on Counties, Cities and Towns.

The recommendation of the committee to the convention on the subject of annexation was particularly opposed as being inadequate to meet the needs of St. Louis, and as having been adopted more with the idea of preserving the territorial integrity of 410 square miles per county than with meeting the peculiar local conditions in St. Louis and St. Louis County.

Chamber's Proposed Section.

In lieu of the committee recommendation which would limit annexation of county territory to 77 square miles, and which would prohibit the submission of annexation to a vote more often than once in five years, the Chamber of Commerce submitted the following as the language of the section it desired to have inserted in the new Constitution:

"The Board of Aldermen of the city of St. Louis and the County Court of St. Louis County shall, at the request of the Mayor of the city of St. Louis, meet in joint session and order an election, to be held as provided for general elections, by the qualified voters of the city and the county, of a board of 12 freeholders, six of whom shall be qualified voters of said city and the other six qualified voters of said county, whose duty shall be to propose a scheme or plan for the enlargement of the boundaries of said city, the adjustment of the relations between the city thus enlarged and the residue of said county. Said scheme or plan when agreed upon shall be submitted to the voters of said city and said county at the next general election for their approval or rejection."

Suggested Section Mandatory.

Supporters of this suggested section point out that it is mandatory and requires no action of the Legislature to carry its provisions into effect; that it provides for equal representation for the city and for the county on the Board of Freeholders and that any plan of annexation submitted to a vote first would have had public consideration by city and county residents, and would have been agreed upon by them.

The principal objection to the section proposed by the convention committee was in this language:

"Applied to St. Louis it would permit us to expand 77 square miles into St. Louis County. In doing so we could solve many practical needs, meet the urgent requests of Maplewood, for instance, but should an annexation proposal include University City, it would take an area of high values away from the county, leaving them the less developed areas, and placing the burden of county expenses on such areas. The voters might not approve this. So while on its face an opportunity to expand more than 100 per cent is provided in the committee's report, and on its face a gratifying increase, yet upon examination, it involves so deep a practical problem as to afford us little comfort."

Absolute Teamwork Between Your Doctor and Druggist

When your doctor writes a prescription it means that he has your personal requirements in mind. It means that his knowledge of medicine, together with the history of your case—if you have stated it correctly—has prompted him to prescribe that certain drugs in certain definite proportions will help nature to readjust herself.

A druggist who follows his orders to the minutest details is the one who helps him win. That's why we leave all the diagnosis and prescription to the doctor.

Then we follow his orders—EXACTLY.

FUNERAL TOMORROW OF HARRY G. BROOKINGS

Former Cupples Company Officer, 76, Came Here When 20 Years Old.

The funeral of Harry G. Brookings, 76 years old, for many years an officer of the Cupples company, will be held tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. from the residence of his brother, Robert S. Brookings, president of Washington University Corporation, at 6510 Ellenwood avenue. Burial will be in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Brookings died Friday at Barnes Hospital of heart disease, having been stricken in July when at Harbor Point, Mich. He was brought to the home of his brother in September and soon afterwards taken to Barnes Hospital. Since his retirement from business because of poor health in 1882, he spent most of his time at Santa Barbara, Cal., although he maintained a legal residence in St. Louis.

He came to St. Louis when 20 years old, shortly afterwards entering the employ of the woodenware firm of Cupples & Marston. He was a member of the firm when he retired 27 years later and his brother is now a member of the advisory board of Cupples & Co.

Brookings was reared in Baltimore. He started West shortly after the close of the Civil War, stopping for a brief period in Cincinnati and Cairo. At Cairo he was undecided whether to go up or down the river. He formed the acquaintance of a steamboat captain who recommended St. Louis and who ended the discussion by exclaimink: "Throw your trunk on board my boat and come with me to St. Louis —it will be all right."

Buerks' Golden Anniversary.

The golden anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Buerk Sr., of 2218 Withnell avenue, was celebrated with a dinner at the home of their son, Lawrence Buerk Jr., 3866 Juniata street, last evening. Seven children and eight grandchildren attended. The Buerks were born in Germany, were married in that country and came to St. Louis 42 years ago. Buerk, now retired, is 77 years old and his wife is 73.

More Valuable Than the Most Famous Diamond in the World

DR. F. J. GUILBAULT
OPTOMETRIST
and OPTICIAN

Most Reasonable Charges

The Koh-i-noor Diamond in the crown of the King of England is the most famous and most valuable jewel in the world, yet there is not one of us who would consider it as sufficient compensation for the loss of our sight.

In spite of the value we place on our eyes, we frequently neglect them, even when headaches and other annoying symptoms give warning of possible dangers.

At the very first indication of headaches or failing sight, come to my office at once, where I will carefully test your eyes, according to my perfected system of eye tests, and I will fit you with the exact glasses required to normalize your vision.

My services and most reasonable prices will prove entirely satisfactory to you, as they have to over 30,000 others who have patronized me during the past 18 years.

New York Social Life Laid Bare

New York's past and present! A story so big it has never been told —until now. A tale which already has stirred New York's élite and their Mississippi cousins to heated argument.

Don't wait to learn the story from those who are following it. Get it first-hand from the man who grasped it and gave it form. It is a vortex of events that will draw you to the very center of the living and loving and hating out of which emerged the great city of New York as it is today.

In "Within These Walls" the gifted Rupert Hughes reveals human hearts stripped of all but what causes them to beat. No history of a people could be more accurate; no fiction more pitilessly true to human motives. Just to read this swiftly enacted drama of a large city in the making is to acquire new powers of understanding the men and women with whom you work and live. Take up this story of New York as it is, and has grown to be. See if you ever read lines so laden with meaning. See if you have ever found more enticing entertainment in story form.

Neither stage nor screen can cause the exhilaration that comes from "Within These Walls." Even its quiet moments are tense with what has just transpired—or may happen next. The latest and greatest of all Hughes' novels, and you may read it now—start this evening—in The Red Book Magazine. A liberal installment and fifteen other stories and features in the December issue. At all news stands now. Twenty-five cents.

Cranberry Sauce De Luxe
(Jellied Cranberries)
Pinch or crush each berry of 1½ pounds ripe Cranberries with the fingers so that they "pop" or open up. If too hard or green to open in this manner, slit part way with knife. Use ripest red berries to get finest flavor. Dissolve 4 level cups (1¾ lbs.) sugar in 2 cups of water. Then add the broken berries. Bring slowly to a boil and then boil hard one minute. Remove from fire and stir in one bottle (scant cup) of Certo (have it poured out in cup ready to use). Skim and at once pour into moulds or glasses.

Grape Jelly
(From bottled grape juice)
Measure 7½ level cups (3¼ lbs.) sugar and 4 cups (2 lbs.) juice into large saucepan, stir, and bring to a boil. At once add one bottle (scant cup) Certo stirring constantly. Continue to stir and bring again to a hard boil for one minute stirring continually. Remove from fire, skim and pour quickly.

To Give the Hair a Naturally Wavy Effect

Ever since the virtues of the silmerine hair-curling method first became known in this country, druggists here have been having a really extraordinary demand for liquid silmerine. Its effectiveness, its convenience and its entire harmlessness doubtless have been responsible for its increasing use among well groomed women.

One need only apply a little of the liquid with a clean tooth brush before doing up the hair and the tresses will have a beautiful wavy and glossy appearance which bears no marks of artificiality. The best way is to divide the hair into strands and moisten each of them from root to tip. There is no discoloration, no sticky, streaky or other unpleasant feature. Liquid silmerine is fine for bobbed as well as long hair—also as an aid in shaping "ear muffs" and in keeping them in place over the ears.

MISSOURIANS TAKING PART IN CAPITAL'S SOCIAL AFFAIRS

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Champ Clark, who hid a mellow heart behind a somewhat gruff exterior and had a real sense of humor, once said of the United States Senate membership in which he declined several times, that the one thing that would wake up that historic body would be the advent of women Senators. He did not live long enough to see his prediction come true the other day when the grand old lady from Georgia, looking every one of her 87 useful years, a benign, gentle, grandmother in appearance, made history in the Senate. She was actually sworn in and addressed that body—the first woman in all the history of the Republic to have that privilege.

Mrs. Selden P. Spencer and Mrs. James A. Reed, wives of the Missouri Senators, were among the hundreds who crowded into the galleries to witness this memorable sight. Another Missourian in the group of onlookers was Mrs. John A. Logan, widow of the famous Civil War general, who left a sick bed to go to the chamber to see Senator Felton recognized. Among the first to congratulate the new Senator at an impromptu reception in the anteroom of the Senate was Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, wife of the president of George Washington University, who used to call Columbia, Mo., "home."

Recuperating From Campaign.

Senator and Mrs. Reed have been recuperating from campaign activities and the exhaustion—if such it may be called—of victory and the resultant congratulations—by a brief vacation at Atlantic City. They returned, of course, in time to be present at the extraordinary session of Congress called by President Harding to put before the National legislators his plans to keep the American flag afloat on the seven seas.

The Missouri colony in Washington has been invited enmasse to attend the meeting called by Mrs. Robert Lansing as the first of the season for the Washington branch of the American Central Committee for Russian Relief at which Missouri's princess, Princess Cantacuzene who has just returned from Europe, will tell of the conditions and needs of the Russian refugees in the colonies aided by this committee. She visited the groups in all of the large cities, chiefly those in England, Paris, Berlin and in Hungary.

Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant, mother of the Princess Cantacuzene, returned from Florida in time to attend the meeting and to greet her daughter. While in Berlin, Princess Cantacuzene was entertained by the Counsellor of the United States Embassy and Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins. This is of particular interest to Missourians because Mrs. Robbins spent part of her girlhood in St. Louis.

A Picturesque Wedding.

Mrs. John Gallatin Paxton of St. Louis was among the guests at one of the most picturesque weddings of the early season, that of Miss Julia Lunkin Ravenel to Lieutenant-Colonel Marion Somerville Battle, U. S. A., this wedding was the result of a war romance for Miss Ravenel served overseas with the reinforcement unit of the Army Nurse Corps, while Col. Battle was a conspicuous hero of the A. E. F. and won many decorations for his gallantry.

Missouri will present a debutante to Washington society this year in Miss Josephine Williford, who has spent much time in St. Louis, who will be the guest for the midseason of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Pembroke Thom.

Mr. and Mrs. Thom will present Miss Williford at a ball preceded by a dinner, the night of Jan. 4. Previous to that time Miss Williford will be exceedingly active in all debutante social affairs.

Just Like a Man

"My husband suffered for several years with stomach trouble. He often had colic attacks that put him to bed. But a man can't stand the pains that a woman can. He thought he was going to die and the doctors didn't seem to help him any. Like a drowning man grasping for a straw, he tried Mayr's Wonderful Remedy, which a nurse told us about, and now he is entirely well and eats anything." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph (3 stores), Enderle Drug Co. (5 stores), Brown-Cloughly, Johnson Bros. Drug Co., and druggists everywhere.

REPUTATION

THE man who buys and the man who sells are dealing mostly in faith. Some believe an enviable reputation once earned is sufficient but such is incorrect. Reputation is the beginning not an end of endeavor; a reminder that standards once won can never be relinquished. For from those who give much—much is forever expected.

There is an absolute rule which demands those who accomplish good work to continue. This rule is reputation, an insurance which protects those whose reason for buying is their belief in the concern from whom they purchase; and that belief is almost invariably based on public opinion.

Choose without fear that which the majority join you in approving. In so doing you will not be disappointed, for only that which is better and continues so indefinitely can command public commendation.

COUGHS
ARE EMBARRASSING

Constant coughing in public places is not only embarrassing to yourself, but very annoying to others. Menthol—derived from the peppermint plant—is the accepted remedy of all nose and throat specialists.

Dean's Mentholated Cough Drops are compounded with just the proper amount of menthol and pure cane sugar to make them doubly effective. Pleasant to taste—always beneficial. Now 5c

Put An End To Neuritis

Neuritis is an inflammation of the nerves, brought on by colds, injuries, bruises, malaria or infectious diseases. As a rule it settles in the shoulder, neck, forearm, thigh, leg or small of the back, causing merciless, stabbing pains that are often mistaken for rheumatism, sciatica or neuralgia.

Regardless of what caused your neuritis or where the pains are located, it is possible to obtain quick relief without taking narcotics or other dangerous drugs. An application of Tysmol over the part that hurts usually stops the misery. Tysmol is absorbed through the pores of the skin and has a soothing, healing effect upon the diseased nerves.

Don't endure this agony another day. Get a supply of Tysmol from Judge & Dolph Drug Co., as well as Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., or any reliable druggist. Price $1 everywhere. Tysmol Company, Mfg. Chemists, 400 Sutter St., San Francisco.

MOTHER! BREAK CHILD'S COLD —GIVE "CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP"
First move Little Bowels with this Harmless Laxative

Whatever else you give your child for a bad cold, sore throat or congestion be sure to first open the little one's bowels with "California Fig Syrup" to get rid of the poisons and waste which are causing the cold and congestion. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works the constipation poison, sour bile and waste right out.

Then if you call your family physician he will praise you for having given "California Fig Syrup" as the laxative because it never fails, never cramps or overacts, and even sick children love its pleasant taste.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

Matters of Current Interest to St. Louis Lovers of Art.

THOSE who are interested in art and keep in touch with the exhibitions and local art movements, have a gala week before them in view of the several important shows now in progress. The foremost is the exhibition of Dutch paintings from the fifteenth to twentieth century loaned by the Goudstikker Galleries of Amsterdam.

A Rembrandt is here. That is really all there is to say. No more is necessary. How could there be anything left to say at this late date about masterpieces which have stood the test of three centuries and held the consideration and approval of all civilization? What could now be said that has not been said before by all the world? What words or phrases in praise of these great treasures of art have not been overworked and worn threadbare?

We say "a Rembrandt is here;" in fact, there are three in this collection. The most notable is the largest one, entitled, "Heraclitus and Democritus," portraying the two old philosophers. It contains all the mellowness that it is possible for time to give to paint so marvelously applied by a master.

The full, creamy browns and yellows are richened and the darker tones have attained that velvety softness which only time can accomplish on well-mixed paint. The painting has belonged in turn to six of the most prominent collections of Europe, having been sold by its original Dutch purchaser into great English collections. As are the majority of the paintings in the Goudstikker exhibition, this canvas is in a remarkably fine state of preservation. We are told it has been so long untouched that when the painting was secured by its present owners, the colors of the sleeves of the two men's coats were unintelligible and looked to be just alike. After a careful and thorough cleaning and after being heavily varnished, the colors were found to be the rich ones we now see.

The same luscious quality found in the painting of the philosophers is evidenced in the master's work entitled, "The Apostle Paul." The sweet, serious face of the aged man surrounded by the great books in which he writes, impresses one with the deep sincerity and goodness of this follower of the faith.

Occupying a prominent space is the finely detailed large landscape by Hobbema, in which sturdy trees mark the central distance, with cattle grazing placidly near the foreground, while away into the distance spreads a charming landscape of gentle hills and verdure.

Four magnificent Van Ruysdaels are another feature of the exhibition. These, with works of Sir Anthony Van Dyck, Pieter De Hoogh, Van Leyden, Franz Hals, Jan Steen, Peter Paul Rubens, Van Goyen, Van Ostade and others including those of the more modern Dutch painters, Bosboom, Josef Israels, Sluyters, Mauve, Willem Maris, etc., constitute a wealth of masterpieces to fairly bewilder the spectator. Any one of the fine paintings in the collection is worthy of individual exhibition.

The Thumb Box Awards.

Most gratifying are the prize awards made last Saturday afternoon by the jury of the Thumb Box Exhibition which is now being held at the City Art Museum. It is unfortunate in this annual exhibition that honorable mention is not accorded in addition to the prizes given, since otherwise it is necessary that several meritorious works go unrewarded except for the distinction of having been accepted into the show.

Gustav Goetsch, recipient of the first prize for painting, won that honor by his group of six excellent studies that glow with deep color. From far across the room one's eye travels toward the restfulness of these paintings, all interesting in subject and full of strength.

The group of preliminary studies for statues by Victor S. Holm which received first prize for sculpture, well justified the distinction given it. The possibilities that are evidenced in these sketches are of decided interest and reflect those of the young artist in his own career.

The second prize for painting went to the creator of the group of fresh, bright little Grand Canyon scenes, one Marcel Olis, a young Frenchman recently arrived in St. Louis from Chicago, where he has spent most of his five years in America. A Parisian by birth and discovering his talent early, he has had the advantage of the camaraderie of great artists and of being able to study in French art schools with masters. Upon being complimented, during a brief interview, on the crystalline quality of his colors, he answered, with the proverbial shrug of his shoulders, "My paint? . . . No, it is not an accident. I have studied colors alone and color symphony. . . . . and I work. But these you see are only sketches I dashed off. I had no idea they were ever accepted until I saw in a paper that they had received a little prize." It seems that Olis' paintings are at the present time being handled by a Chicago dealer, which fact accounts for the artist not presenting his more serious works in St. Louis. If his larger pictures can surpass the exquisite little "Nocturne" and the first Grand Canyon scene, which gleams so brightly from its corner of the hall in which it now hangs, St. Louis art

Does Over-Eating Cause Appendicitis?
Undigested Food May Cause Rapid Growth of Poisonous Germs

Many people overfill the intestinal tract with more than they can digest. They eat hastily and do not chew the food properly. Thus solid lumps, especially of tough meat, are apt to pass through the stomach before the digestive fluids can act on them. These lumps then escape intestinal digestion by reason of their not being properly prepared in the stomach, and furnish a good breeding place for poisonous bacili. These bacili set up inflammation which may spread and bring on an attack of appendicitis.

A Treacherous Disease.
Appendicitis attacks at any moment even persons seemingly in good health. Usually, however, it is preceded by so-called stomach trouble, constipation or similar disturbances. Often when there is a warning feeling of uneasiness in the abdomen, appendicitis can be guarded against in exactly the same manner in which one guards against the spread of throat infection, because that is just what appendicitis is—an infection in the intestines spreading to the appendix. When one has sore throat, one can often prevent further trouble and the development of influenza or grippe by using an antiseptic wash or gargle to fight the germs and a laxative to carry off the poisons from the body. Just exactly the same procedure is necessary to fight the intestinal germs and guard against appendicitis. But instead of an antiseptic wash for the throat, an INTESTINAL antiseptic is necessary.

Intestinal Antiseptic.
There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacili in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most complete system cleanser ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removing foul matter which poisoned the system for months and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out all gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter it brings out which was poisoning you. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headache, one spoonful Adlerika ALWAYS brings relief. A longer treatment, however, is necessary in cases of obstinate constipation and long-standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of your physician.

Reports From Physicians.
"I congratulate you on the good effect I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langlois.
"I have found nothing in my 50 years' practice to excel Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.
"I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. F. M. Prettyman.
"After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the AWFUL IMPURITIES eliminated from my system." (Signed) J. E. Puckett.

Adlerika is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines on account of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

WHAT IS TO BE SEEN IN ST. LOUIS ART GALLERIES

lovers have very much of a treat in store for them.

In the group of miscellaneous works by Miss Shiela Burlingame, which took second prize for sculpture, are several excellent pieces of batik the designs of which are entirely original and quite elaborate. The work is skillfully done and compares most favorably with that done in the East by batik artists of renown.

A remarkable thing to note about Kathryn Cherry's colorful little Gloucester scenes is that even in these tiny canvases there is the same proportionate freedom with which the artist works in her larger pictures.

Gisella Loeffler's poster-pictures in this exhibition seem a little strained and lacking in the spontaneiety of some of her previous ones. The charm of her work lies in her clever personifications of moods or seasons or ideas and ideals. Without allegorical significance they become flat and are merely designs or decorations. In the past this young artist's drawings have all evidenced the influence of fairy tales: they have often been like Grimm's or Anderson's coming to life in paint. Soon she will be reading mythology and the authentic folk lore of ancient civilizations. Then her pictures will contain a fresh significance and deeper symbolism.

Display of Tempera Paintings.

Another display of interest at this time is that of the tempera paintings by William C. Emerson at the Newhouse Galleries. Mr. Emerson is becoming well known for his poetic renditions of misty morning. Although the majority of his works are but variations of a single theme readily discernable in them all, they are lovely, delicate poems of light in which tall and spreading fairy trees trace subtle shadows where elves may dance. Sometimes a rosy glow breaks over the vaporous tree tops and bespeaks the sunrise at which the fairy folk disperse. Again dreamy tree masses bend together and through the clearing beneath, one may look far into Queen Mab's own dancing grounds where Mr. Emerson has often suggested small figures we would fancy were there.

The "Cathedral Woods" owned by the Newhouse Gallery is a deviation from the customary theme on which Emerson generally paints. It is a "close up" of the mighty tree trunks in a thick forest. The red of sunset spreads over the whole, while tiny creatures of the wood are suggested as coming forth between the monstrous pillars.

Mr. Emerson, primarily a Chicago painter, has been in the East for the last several years where his works have attracted attention for their individuality and charm. He has been given one-man shows in various important Eastern galleries and is now intending to exhibit throughout the country.

In the Dealers' Gallery.

Impressive indeed is the sight that greets one upon entering the Kocian Gallery. Three gorgeous paintings hang alone upon the wall and command instant attention. In the center is a lovely upright landscape with figures called "Les Deux Confidantes," which is one of the finest and best known of that famous French painter's works, Francois Boucher. In the picture, two beautiful maidens sit pensively before the entrance to some huge old castle. One holds a carrier pigeon from the neck of which is suspended an envelope. The other, seen in profile, turns toward her friend with advice. In the foreground, sheep and dogs bring into the painting the characteristic rural note which was typical of the life of the period. The quality of the flesh tones in this picture and the finesse of the entire ensemble bespeak the early training of Boucher. Being born of a designer of fine and intricate embroideries, it is but natural that the son inherit much of the delicacy of his father's art. Boucher is especially famous for his portrayals of religious subjects and for his mural decorations. "Les Deux Confidantes" was originally hung in the home of Mme. Pompadour, in Paris, a gift from King Louis XV to his favorite. Many of Boucher's works were purchased by his royal patron, and some of his loveliest landscape and figure pieces given to Mme. Pompadour.

On the left of the Boucher is hung Franz Hals' famous portrait of Aernot Van Druyvesteyn. This painting is now estimated by its owners at $100,000. The exceptional point of this extraordinary example of Hals' portraiture is the "looseness" or freedom with which the work is handled. The manner in which the hand and sleeve is executed is that of the men of several centuries later rather than the rigid, academic style of his confreres. The freshness of the figure and the vitality in the drawing of the ruddy Dutch face bring a rare degree of life-like quality to the canvas.

To the right hangs the magnificent portrait of Miss Mary Woodgate, by Sir Thomas Lawrence. Never has warm, brown hair been so gracefully painted. The soft curls fall at random over the placid brow of the young girl whose eyes gleam and sparkle above her quizzical smile as she evades the study of the spectator. About her throat is a frilled rouching just fragile enough to enhance the delicate loveliness of the lady. Her gown is of rich velvet-plush on the sleeves of which one notes the thick sheen of light as it falls upon the shoulders. The gradation of light between the figure and background is slight but fully perceptible. Without confusion, the darkness of the background sinks away to show the gentle outline of form.

All three paintings are fully registered and authenticated, parts of the histories being on the backs of the paintings, and the rest being held by the John Levy Galleries of New York by whom they are loaned. The exhibition of which these paintings are a part, will remain in the Kocian Galleries for another week or 10 days.

A show of paintings by Victor Charreton, the well-known French "luminist," will be opened at the Scruggs - Vandervoort - Barney Art Galleries the first of December. The show will be comprised of 20 canvases covering, in their range, the fresh charm of springtime in Paris, the snow and sleet in Auvergne, and the mid-summer languor of the meadows along the Loire. This inaugurates a series of exhibitions of paintings to be held in these galleries each month during the coming season. For January there will be a two-painter exhibit consisting of portraits of Carl Bohnen of Chicago and Marie Blanke's charming flower paintings. Later a display of the works of St. Louis artists is planned to be followed by an exhibit of paintings of the Ozark regions by the Ozark group of painters.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost overnight if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old, famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound tonight and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

If Grown People who are rundown in vitality and out of sorts, would but realize the strength-restoring power of rich, nourishing Scott's Emulsion they would not dream of doing without its health-building benefits. Rich in vitamines, Scott's has helped thousands achieve strength of body.

Pepper for Theaters' Thanksgiving Viands in "Spice of 1922"

Winter Garden Spectacle at Jefferson, While "Lightnin'" Continues at American—Irene Castle Leads Orpheum's List.

AS a condiment of cayenne for Thanksgiving week's theatrical menu, the Shubert-Jefferson announces one of those Winter Garden spectacles in countless scenes which travel in special trains of seven cars. It is called "Spice of 1922," and was produced in New York last July. The book is by Jack Lait and the music is admitted by Fred Hanley and F. Fred Coots. At least a nucleus of the Gotham cast survives, including Valeska Suratt, star of the production, and Midgie Miller, former dancing partner of Leon Errol.

"Lightnin'," the late Frank Bacon's homespun comedy, remains at the American this week, with Thomas Jefferson supplying his artistic, delicate and pathetic portrayal of "Lightnin'" Bill Jones—a character whose seraphic sweetness is redeemed by the human vices of vagrancy, mendacity and alcoholism. Mrs. Irene Castle, the distinguished dancer, leads the Orpheum's holiday offering; and the Woodward Players at the Garrick, contribute gladness to the season with the comedy, "Pollyanna," which was based on Eleanor Porter's novel.

Edith Wynne Matthison Kennedy, former leading woman with Sir Henry Irving and Sir Herbert Tree, and Charles Rann Kennedy, author of "The Servant in the House," will give classical readings tomorrow afternoon and evening at the Artists' Guild. The matinee program comprises the quarrel scene from "The School for Scandal," a scene from "Sister Beatrice" and Browning's poem, "Andrea del Sarto." In the evening scenes will be read from the "Alcestis" of Euripides.

Among the entertainers of the original company of "Spice of 1922" who are not named in the advance matter as being members of the present troupe are James Watts, Jimmy Hussey, Adele Rowland and Evan Burrowes Fontaine. The list supplied of Miss Suratt's principal supporters on the road includes El Brendel, Flo Burt, Sam Hearn, George Bobbe, Eddie Nelson, Lloyd Hoffman, Florence Browne, Jack Trainor, Gattison Jones, Nitza Vernille, Wilbert Dunn, Beatrice Squire, James Gaylor, Virginia Napier, Evelyn Downing, William Berry, Nan Chapman, Sybil Stuart, Evelyn Gerald, Simone Jacquet and Arman Kaliz.

Prodigality of Scenes.

THE revue is in two acts of 30 scenes, some of the stage pictures purporting to show a Javanese Temple, the Garden of Eden, a street in Paris, an Arizona landscape, a wheat field, a Dutch windmill, the Red Lantern cafe, a Park avenue carnival, a Wall street office and a massive white and scarlet staircase scene, on which an old-fashioned cake-walk is staged. A chorus of 38 "Garden of Eden" girls is promised.

This is said to be Miss Suratt's initial appearance in a revue. Her gowns are reported to be particularly splendid. She appears at various times as a woman of the world, a California widow, a stenographer, a wife in an "eternal triangle" skit, and finally as a "scarlet strutter." As produced in New York, "Spice of 1922" was described as a combination of fun and off-color patter, with two scenes surpassing anything ventured previously in the way of feminine undress, and with the whole moving at a mad pace.

Both the American and Shubert-Jefferson will have special matinees on Thanksgiving afternoon. At the Jefferson, next week, will be presented Avery Hopwood's pungent farce, "The Demi-Virgin," which will be followed by George Arliss in William Archer's "The Green Goddess," opening on Monday evening, Dec. 11. The American announces George S. Kaufman's and Marc Connelly's first comedy, "Dulcy," for the week of Dec. 10, with Lynn Fontanne. Irving Berlin's "Music Box Revue" is promised at the American for the week of Jan. 8.

Mrs. Castle's Act.

IN her act at the Orpheum, Mrs. Castle will be assisted by her dancing partner, William Reardon, with "Do" Hupfield at the piano. Her career as a dancer has been won not only in the theater and on the recital platform, but in the ballrooms of New York's social leaders.

"The Young Rajah," "Pride of Palomar" On Local Screens

"Who Are My Parents?" and "One Week of Love" Also Among the Offerings for Current Week at the Movie Houses.

"THE Young Rajah," a drama of America and the Orient, with Rodolph Valentino and Wanda Hawley, is the week's feature at the New Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol Theaters. "The Blacksmith," a new Buster Keaton comedy, is an added attraction at all three theaters.

Valentino appears as both a handsome American college student and as an Indian Prince, wearing in the latter phases of his role some elaborate costumes.

The story is based on an uprising which occurred some time before the picture opens in India and the subsequent act of two of the ruler's aids in bringing the rightful heir to the United States. The boy, without knowing of his past, is reared by a farmer and finally wins honors on the rowing crew at Harvard. In the end he is restored to his throne.

This has been denominated "Jubilee Week" at the Missouri Theater, and stress is laid on several other attractions besides the feature picture, which is "The Pride of Palomar," a screen version of a story by Peter B. Kyne. The principal roles are portrayed by Forrest Stanley and Marjorie Daw. The picture is described as "a powerful drama of a romantic fight against foreign encroachment in California." On the bill also will be Clyde Cook in his latest comedy, "Lazy Bones." The Missouri orchestra and Organist Barrie will play special jubilee music and an added feature will be the appearance of Robinson's "Down in Dixie" Plantation Band, an aggregation of colored jazz artists.

A newcomer to the screen, Peggy Shaw, who has deserted Flo Ziegfeld's Follies for the silver sheet, appears in the new Fox feature, "Who Are My Parents?" at the Liberty Theater.

Miss Shaw takes the part of the daughter of a stern parent, who, although trying at all times to arrange for her happiness, really causes her almost continuous worry by his attempt to select the right person for her to marry. She is forced to marry secretly the man she really loves. After a few brief weeks of happiness a flaw is found in the marriage ceremony and before she and her sweetheart can have another ceremony performed, he dies and she is forced to reveal everything to her family.

Elaine Hammerstein and Conway Tearle are the associated stars in "One Week of Love," the week's offering at the Delmonte. Some of its features are a thrilling airplane crash, a terrific railroad wreck and an intimate picture of modern society "revels."

Miss Hammerstein is seen as Beth Wynn, a wealthy society girl, who, tiring of the conventional pastimes of her set, takes to airplaning. Buck Fearnley is played by Conway Tearle, in this instance an almost down-and-out American, who has cast his lot with a tough crowd that commits depredations along the Rio Grande.

The Delmonte program also includes a return engagement of Joseph Sheehan and his troupe of opera singers.

Lon Chaney in "The Trap" is the week's feature at the Rivoli. This is a story of a simple-hearted French-Canadian who becomes a wolf in human form after he has been cheated in love and in business. In the cast also are Alan Hale, Irene Rich, Dagmar Godowsky, Spottiswoode Aitken, Robert Standing, Frank Campeau and Stanley Goethals, a child actor.

What They Are Doing in the Movie Studios

THE title of Dorothy Dalton's latest picture now in production at the Long Island studio has been made "Dark Secrets." The working title when the picture was started was "Black Fury."

David Powell has been selected to play one of the principal male roles in "The Glimpses of the Moon," an Allen Dwan production which will

Peggy Shaw and Robert Agnew, in "Who Are My Parents?"—Liberty.

Elaine Hammerstein, in "One Week of Love"—Delmonte.

Rodolph Valentino, in "The Young Rajah"—New Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol.

George Ade not only wrote "Back Home and Broke," which is to be Thomas Meighan's next Paramount picture, but he toured the State of Connecticut with Alfred Green, the director, to find a "small town" with the right kind of atmosphere for the picture. After visiting nearly all of Connecticut they toured Long Island and finally found what they wanted at Sag Harbor.

Alice Brady received an ovation at the Hippodrome, Miami, Fla., recently. She is there at present making scenes in her next Paramount picture, "The Leopardess," and was induced to make a personal appearance at the theater in connection with her recent film, "Dawn of the East." She enacted a scene from "Cassie Cook of the Yellow Sea," a vaudeville sketch in which she has appeared recently.

Marlowe's Bloody "Jew of Malta" Laughed at LONDON, Nov. 25.

AFTER a repose of many years upon library shelves, Christopher Marlowe's tragedy, "The Jew of Malta," has been resurrected and brought into the life of the stage by the Phoenix Society. It was received with laughter rather than horror, and, according to the critic of the Manchester Guardian, proved an extraordinarily bad play but an interesting social document. Its historic interest lies in the fact that it was the forerunner of Shakspeare's "Merchant of Venice."

Since the play was not printed until 45 years after it was written, continues this writer, our version may be very different from Marlowe's original, and may have gone through a continuous process of degradation as it passed through the manager's hands. There are some traces in the first act that Marlowe was intrigued by the Jewish question and meant to make a character study of Barabas as the victim of race prejudice and a capital levy. But the initial hint of artistry is soon drowned in blood as the drama meanders on through its murderous and melancholy course.

Yet here is Henslow's "great hit," here is what the Elizabethan public really wanted, and if anybody still believed, despite Shakspeare's assurances to the contrary, that the groundlings of the day were men of taste and judgment, the performance of this artless, feeble fabrication of horrors should finally persuade them that the audience of Henslow and Alleyn was the same audience as that of the brothers Melville.

Elizabethans Gave Game Away.

THE point about Elizabethan is the same as the point about Victorian, melodrama—the audience knows exactly where it is. Sir Jasper, with his black mustaches, white spats, and buttonhole, was a villain at first sight to the Victorian gallery. The Elizabethan villain was just as obvious. He announced all his plots in advance, and the interest was to see how he carried them through.

Shakspeare, subtlest of the Elizabethans, was simple in this. Iago, in his soliloquy at the end of the first act of "Othello," gives the whole game away as far as suspense is concerned. We know exactly what to look for. So, too, the Jew of Malta; when he is going to poison a whole nunnery, he dopes the porridge of the votaries before our eyes.

But the Education Act has put the groundlings of today far ahead of Marlowe and the brothers Melville. We are for sophistication, not for the stark simplicities of sin. We must have mystery. We must not know till the final curtain who the villain is. Modern crime-stories and crime-plays are all written for our mystification. Not the quality of the sin, but the identity of the sinners, is the issue. We are not thrilled by the spectacle of a man salting porridge with poison and chuckling over the deed. We want to see the corpses first, and work back through exhumation and detective science to the secret hand of villainy.

"Candida" a Mystery Play.

EVEN the good dramatists exploit uncertainty for all it is worth. "Candida" is a mystery play, with the audience in suspense as to who the strong man is, poet or parson. Shakspeare would never have played this trick. For a simply public simpler things, Marlowe's Jew soon sheds humanity for sheer satanism, and the play, which has not even a fine patch of purple to its credit, depends for success purely on its cumulative pressure of frightfulness.

"The Famous Tragedy of the Rich Jew of Malta" is its name, remarks the London Times, but the house was full of laughter and of such good laughter that one were a fool to frown upon it or upon the acting that caused it. Ithamore was in all worlds, even in Marlowe's own, intended for laughter, and the Jew himself has many a twist of the lip; but the death of Abigail, the mourning over Lodowick and Mathias, the final burning of Barabas—were these intended to be as amusing as the Phoenix chose to make them?

GERMAN SINGING SOCIETY TO CELEBRATE 50TH ANNIVERSARY

Chouteau Valley Maennerchor Will Hear Numbers by Alma Dreifus and Others.

The Chouteau Valley Maennerchor, one of the oldest German singing societies of the city, will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of its existence at Eagle's Hall, Jefferson and Lafayette avenues, on Thanksgiving eve. The society was founded Nov. 24, 1872.

One of the attractive numbers of the program will be the rendition by a mixed choir, composed of members of the Chouteau Valley Maennerchor and of the members of the woman's branch of this society. These renditions will be directed by Max Gundlach. Several solo selections will be given by Alma Dreifus. The program is made up exclusively of German folksongs and popular operatic selections.

Diplomas for 25-year memberships will be presented to Charles Ruest and John Becker, honorary members of the society, at the conclusion of the vocal program, which will be directed by Theodore Faerber. Speeches will be delivered by George Withum, secretary of the North American German Singing Societies; John R. Toensfeldt and R. Bauer, president of the North American German Singing Societies.

be started soon. Bebe Daniels and Nita Naldi will have the leading feminine parts.

Turning of the camera has begun on "The Tiger's Claw," starring Jack Holt. Eva Novak has the leading feminine role.

A ship rocked by lights—a real seasick, groggy, up and down motion imparted by a group of electricians! This was a new wrinkle in realistic motion picture photography which will make its first appearance in "Ebb Tide," the Paramount picture George Melford recently finished with Lila Lee, James Kirkwood, Raymond Hatton, George Fawcett, Noah Beery and Jacqueline Logan featured.

Macey Harlan has been added to the cast of Pola Negri's first American-made picture, "Bella Donna," according to an announcement from George Fitzmaurice, who is producing it for Paramount.

At least one hour was required by Bebe Daniels each time she donned the moth costume and makeup for the "Moth Dance" which she created in "Singed Wings," the Penrhyn Stanlaws production in which she is featured. The costume, designed and made at the Famous Players-Lasky studio, is a work of art and very delicately constructed. Extreme care had to be exercised in donning it.

William David, who played with Charles Cherry in "Scandal" on Broadway a season ago, is a member of the cast of Elsie Ferguson's new picture, "Outcast." David formerly appeared in Paramount pictures with Billy Burke, and had an important part in "The Copperhead," with Lionel Barrymore. More recently he has played in Vitagraph pictures. He was on the stage with Miss Ferguson several seasons ago in "The First Lady of the Land."

Work on two pictures in production at the Thomas H. Ince Studios was stopped an entire afternoon when Charlie, the monkey, which is working with May McAvoy in a new picture played hookey. Tiring of a Spanish dance which was holding the center on his own set, Charlie sneaked away and went visiting. A few minutes later he was discovered sitting on the edge of a table in a Chinese set, being used by Cosmopolitan Productions for the filming of Fannie Hurst's story, "The Nth Commandment." With a pair of chop sticks he was gravely imitating Colleen Moore as she ate chop suey. Miss Moore begged so hard that the monkey was allowed to remain until he had mastered the use of the chop sticks and added a new trick to his international repertoire.

Miss Du Pont, who played a prominent role in "Foolish Wives," is the latest addition to the cast engaged for "Brass," a picturization of the Charles G. Norris novel. Other members of the cast include Marie Prevost, Monte Blue, Helen Ferguson, Frank Keenan, Irene Rich, Pat O'Malley, Harry Meyers, Margaret Seddon and Edward Jobson.

At last Louise Fazenda has realized a long-cherished ambition mainly to appear on the screen minus her comedy character. It is said that she has a dressed-up part, a vamp wearing slinky gowns, the latest in bizarre coiffures, smokes cigarettes with jeweled holders, in the Warner Brothers production of "The Beautiful and Damned."

"Little Church Around the Corner," an adaptation of the stage play of the same name by Marion Russell, has been completed. In the cast are Kenneth Harlan, Claire Windsor, Hobart Bosworth, Pauline Starke, Walter Long, Margaret Seddon and Cyril Chadwick.

Maurice Tourneur recently conferred with Admiral E. W. Eberle, commanding officer of the Pacific Fleet, regarding the scenes depicting the Sargossa Sea in "The Isle of Dead Ships." The Admiral graphically described the miles of entangling kelp which endangers vessels caught in its tendrils.

It is probable that when Constance Talmadge returns to Los Angeles she will be accompanied by John Emerson and Anita Loos, who will work with her on the preparation of her next screen story. No definite choice of vehicle has yet been made to follow "East Is West."

Get Rid of Your Fat

If you are needlessly burdened with superfluous fat, read the following carefully. See how easily others have reduced by my simple and efficient method of fat reduction. Some have reduced over a pound a day. All this has been accomplished without resorting to diet or tedious exercise.

Mrs. O. Whitlow writes: "I have lost 76 pounds as result of your treatment and have never felt so well in my life as I do now."

Mrs. S. Santee writes: "I have lost 70 pounds as a result of taking your treatment. I feel better in everyway. I can now take long walks without becoming tired or short of breath. I thank you very much for what you have done for me."

Mrs. E. Horner says: "Well, I am glad to inform you that I have lost 48 pounds in six weeks."

Mrs. [illegible] Felker says: "I thought I would let you know how I am getting along. I am feeling fine and have found the treatment pleasant to take at all times. I have not weighed, but my measurements show that I have reduced six inches from my bust, five inches from my waist, and 12 inches from my hips. Of course, I am pleased with the result."

I am a licensed practising physician and personally prescribe for each individual case, thus enabling me to select remedies that will produce not only a loss of weight harmlessly, but will relieve you of all the troublesome symptoms of overstoutness such as shortness of breath, palpitation of the heart, indigestion, rheumatism, gout, asthma, kidney trouble and various other troubles which often accompany overstoutness.

My treatment will relieve that depressed, tired, sleepy feeling, giving you the renewed energy and vigor which come as a result of the loss of your superfluous fat. My treatment is the only scientific treatment known that will produce a loss of weight with positively no harm to the system.

You are not required to change in the slightest from your regular mode of living. There is no dieting or exercising that you have to follow. It is simple, easy and pleasant to take.

If you are overstout do not postpone but sit down right now and send for my free trial treatment and my plan whereby I am to be paid only after reduction has taken place if you so desire.

This Laxative Works Fine on Old People

Thousands have kept themselves healthy with Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin

ADVANCING age with its subdued ambitions and strivings could be made very happy if only good health accompanied it, and the basis of good health, as everyone learns upon reaching the age of 60, is the regular daily movement of the bowels. If it can be effected through the food you eat, the water you drink and the exercise you take, so much the better. But if nature will not operate it must be assisted or sickness will follow. Neglected constipation causes the blood pressure to go up 28 per cent, and that is the forerunner of hardening of the arteries. It makes rheumatism and gout worse, too.

The ideal constipation remedy for people of advancing years is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a vegetable compound of Egyptian senna and pepsin with pleasant-tasting aromatics. It is gentle and mild, and does not cramp or gripe. It is a mistake to think you need a violent salt or powder or pill, calomel, coal-tar drugs and such things. They purge and weaken you, and their reaction tends to make you more constipated than before.

Now try the milder method. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin does not lose its good effect with repeated use, and increased doses are unnecessary. Mrs. E. M. Burress of Enfield, N. C., who is 73, keeps herself in good health with it, and Mr. Charles Chorman of Stapleton, Staten Island, N. Y., wasted fifteen years and considerable money on other remedies before finding steady relief with Syrup Pepsin.

Use Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin yourself the next time you suffer from constipation, biliousness, headache, sleeplessness, indigestion, piles or night cramps. Many thousands of elderly people use nothing else, and it costs them less than a cent a dose. Druggists have sold it successfully for 30 years, and it is the most widely bought family laxative in the world.

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I urge you to try Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 515 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois. Do it now!

Mason & Hamlin

A MASTERPIECE

There are some productions of genius of such distinctive quality that they are separated from all others and classed as masterpieces.

In a true sense the Mason & Hamlin Piano is a masterpiece—a masterpiece in its tonal quality and furthermore in its exquisite workmanship.

As a result of its unique system of construction, developed in 1900, it has set a new standard of piano tone and durability and is pronounced the most beautiful piano the world has ever known.

It is presented to the public—not in price competition with any other, which its cost and quality preclude, but as a work of art to be judged solely on its merit. In the words of its maker's trade-mark inscription:

Early Buyers Will Get Preference

All season the factory has been behind on the wonderful Six Coupe model.

Everywhere purchasers have eagerly sought it out as an enclosed car value that far outranks its field.

We've just been able to get a few. They go on display today.

The industry's finest body craftsmen have created for it a body of shapely grace, swung smartly low to the road, on the rugged Nash chassis.

The interior is richly distinctive with all those luxuries and niceties of appointment that adorn America's most costly coupes.

Choicest mohair forms the upholstery. And there's a new heater that wards off the chill of raw days and keeps you warm in zero weather.

All instruments are finely nickeled and arranged with a thoughtful eye to your comfort and convenience.

Headlamps and cowl lamps are patterned after the new barrel-vogue and an exclusive Nash device for quickly focusing the headlights at any angle is a new and interesting feature.

All these attractions and many more await your inspection. The reduced price is $1890. But you must come early.

One of the most gratifying benefits of a Nash ownership in St. Louis, is the excellent character of service that backs up the car's performance.

Every advantage that the great Nash resources can command is constantly employed in emphasizing prompt and skillful attention.

A local Nash, for instance, is serviced in remarkably commodious and completely equipped quarters, manned by a corps of expert and veteran Nash mechanics. And each Nash is guarded by a doubly sufficient stock of parts.

Come in, and see how admirably Nash owners are protected.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really Better Than Ready-Made Cough Syrup, and Saves About $2. Easily and Quickly Prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple homemade cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Calve, St. Denis, Bonucci Here This Week

WITH the Symphony Orchestra out of town during Thanksgiving week, the musical field will be occupied by recitalists. Tomorrow evening, at the St. Louis University Auditorium Mrs. Edythe Marmion Brosius, harpist, will give a program, assisted by the university's glee club and orchestra, for the benefit of the institution's endowment fund.

On Tuesday evening the Apollo Club, directed by Charles Galloway, will give a concert at the Odeon, presenting Arturo Bonucci, a highly praised violoncellist. On the same evening Marguerite Volavy, Bohemian, pianist, and Blanche de Costa, soprano, will be heard for the first time here in a joint recital at the Sheldon Memorial Auditorium.

The star event of the holiday week will be the appearance of Mme. Emma Calve, contralto, and most famous of Carmens, on Thanksgiving night at the Odeon. Then, on Saturday night, also at the Odeon, will come an exhibition of dancing by Ruth St. Denis, Ted Shawn and a company of eight Denishawn Dancers, all girls.

Mme. Calve's Big Program.

THIS will be Mme. Calve's first St. Louis appearance since the eminent artist, who was born in 1864, achieved a public return which amazed the East. Inevitably, her program includes the "Habanera" from "Carmen." Her other numbers are announced as follows:

Aria, "Casta Diva," from Bellini's "Norma;" "Aria de Cleopatra," Handel; "In questa tomba," Beethoven; "Serenade," Bizet; "Nocturne," Franck; "La Captive," Berlioz; "The Rose and the Nightingale," Rimsky-Korsakoff; "Cradle Song" and "Homeland Mine," Gretchanioff; "Plaisir d'Amour," Martini; "La Mort du Cosaque," Moniuwsko; "Aria des Cartes" and "Chanson Boheme," Bizet; and "Clavelitos," Alvarez. Mme. Yvonne Dienne will be at the piano, and will play one solo number, Grieg's "Ballade."

With the Apollo Club, Signor Donucci will play Boccherini's Adagio and Allegro, Locatelli's Adagio and Menuetto Variato, Lalo's Intermezzo and "Russian Song," an Allegro by Nachez, Fiscer's "Csardas," one of the Chopin Nocturnes and Popper's "La Fileuse."

The male chorus is to sing Dudley Buck's arrangement of Gounod's "The Anvil," Cecil Forsyth's "At the Play," Philip James' "To an Antique Stiletto," with Director Galloway at the piano; Mendelssohn's "To the Sons of Art," and Liszt's "Cavalry Song."

Oriental Dance Specialties.

SUMPTUOUS stage settings, particularly of an Oriental character, are promised for Miss St. Denis' entertainment. She specializes in dances of the East, and will offer scenes of Japan, Siam, India, Java, Egypt and China—some in solo appearances and some with Ted Shawn and the whole company. Dances of a more heroic mold and some of a comedy character are to be given by Shawn. Ensembles undertaking musical interpretations are included.

The program which Mme. Brosius will play tomorrow night includes Hasselmans' "Priere," Beethoven's "Minuet," Chopin's Prelude in C Minor, Schuecker's Mazurka, Zabel's "La Source" and several other pieces. Among the student glee club's essays will be a sixteenth century French song, "Le bon petit Roi d'Yvetot," an old Russian song of boatmen on the Volga, and Verdi's "O Hail Us, Ye Free." The student orchestra is to play Meyerbeer's "Coronation March," the triumphal march from "Aida," and the overture to "Poet and Peasant."

Dr. Arthur E. Bostwick, public librarian, will speak on "Music and Its Connection With the Library," at 5 o'clock this afternoon at the Artists' Guild, where the Musicians' Guild will hold a meeting. A program will be given by Miss Margaret Reno, mezzo-soprano, and David Earle, pianist.

A Large Church Organ.

WHAT is said to be one of the largest church organs in the country will be dedicated soon at the Second Presbyterian Church. When completed it will have 3778 pipes, 61 speaking stops, 39 couplers, 26 piston combinations, eight different pedal movements, five tremolos, a set of cathedral chimes and a harp. There will be two consoles, one in the chancel and one in the balcony, and the entire organ will be playable from either. There are two blowers, in the front tower and in the basement. Ernest Prang Stamm, organist at the church, is to give a series of recitals on the new instrument.

Pupils of the violin, vocal and expression departments of the Strassberger Conservatories will give a recital next Sunday evening at the South Side Auditorium. Hunter Jones, pianist, and Miss Birdie E. Hilb, soprano, will give a concert tomorrow evening at parish house at St. Michael and All Angels' Church, 6315 Wydown avenue. On the program will be manuscript settings of four of Sara Teasdale's poems, by Jones. Rhys Herbert's cantata, "Bethany," will be given tonight at Zion Lutheran Church, Twenty-first and Benton streets, under the direction of E. H. Thuernau.

Paul Friess will give the first of a series of organ recitals this evening at St. John's Episcopal Church, 3636 Arsenal street, with Miss Mollie Peters and Earl Hinearson as soloists.

The San Carlo Opera Company's engagement at the Odeon, for the week of Jan. 14, will open with "Aida." Marie Rappold, for years one of the leading dramatic sopranos at the Metropolitan, will sing the title role, and Manuel Salazar, also a guest artist from the Metropolitan, will appear as Radames.

GUSIKOFF IS SOLOIST AT TODAY'S MATINEE

Then Orchestra Begins First Tour, Visiting Columbia and Kansas City.

Following this afternoon's popular concert at the Odeon, at which Concertmaster Gusikoff will be soloist, the Symphony Orchestra will depart for its first short tour of the season. On Tuesday afternoon and evening it will play two concerts at Columbia, Mo. On Wednesday afternoon and Thursday evening will be given the first of three pairs of concerts which the orchestra will offer this year in Kansas City.

The orchestra will return to St. Louis next Friday morning, but Director Ganz will give piano recitals at Le Mars, Ia., on Friday and in Kansas City next Sunday, reaching home on Monday of next week. In his absence, next Sunday afternoon's popular concert will be conducted by Assistant Director Frederick Fischer.

Gusikoff, this afternoon, will play the Saint-Saens concerto in B minor and the orchestral numbers will include Schubert's "Marche Militaire," Auber's overture to "Fra Diavolo," MacDowell's "Scotch Poem," Samuel Gardner's "From the Canebreak," Sibelius' "Valse Triste" and Herbert's "Irish Rhapsody."

Gusikoff will also be soloist at Tuesday evening's concert at Columbia, playing the Saint-Saens concerto. H. Max Steindel, leader of the orchestra's violoncello section, will be soloist at the Tuesday matinee concert in Columbia, playing the Boellmann "Variations."

Ponselle Kansas City Soloist.

Thursday night's program in Kansas City will comprise Goldmark's "Sakuntala" overture, Borodine's "Second Symphony," the Weber-Weingaertner "Invitation to the Dance," and Rossini's overture to William Tell. Miss Rosa Ponselle, dramatic soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will be soloist and will sing two arias—"pleurez, pleurez," from Massenet's "Le Cid," and "Ernani Involami," from Verdi's "Ernani."

As was the case last year, the Wednesday matinee concert in Kansas City will be for children, and among the numbers will be the first movement of Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony. Mrs. Howard Austin, contralto, of Kansas City, will sing as soloist the Saint-Saens aria, "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice," from "Samson and Delilah."

The next regular concerts in St. Louis will be given on Dec. 8 and 9, with Steindel playing, for the first time in this city, Haydn's concerto for violoncello, in D major. Another "first time" work in this city to be played on the same occasion is Ravel's "Rhapsodie Espagnole." Miss Fannie Block, St. Louis contralto, will be soloist at next Sunday's popular concert, giving the Robin Woman's aria from Cadman's "Shanewis."

PEPPER FOR THEATERS' THANKSGIVING VIANDS IN "SPICE OF 1922"

Artistic costumes and settings are promised. Others on the same bill include Olsen and Johnson, in a blend of song, piano-playing and buffoonery; Elizabeth W. Murray, vocalist and raconteuse; Leo Donnelly and Marjorie Dalton, in a playlet, "'Tis and 'Tisn't," by S. Jay Kaufman; R. C. Hillman, English composer of the music to "Buddies," in a vocal turn called "Originality;" and Kay, Hamlin and Kay, mid-air gymnasts. For next week, the Orpheum's headliner will be Duci de Kerekjarto, violinist, who gave a recital recently at Carnegie Hall, New York.

The name-part of "Pollyanna" will be undertaken by Hazel Whitmore, playing a crippled orphan girl who goes to live with a maiden aunt, there to encounter and captivate that crusty old bachelor and woman-hater, John Pendleton—a role to be essayed by John Warner.

A revue called "Hello, New York," is billed this week at the Empress, with Phil Baker, comedian, late of the "Greenwich Village Follies" as one of the featured entertainers. Others in the cast are Helen Eley, Lon Hascall, Betty Peirce, Agnes Gilday, Maurice Cole, Sid Silvers and Cissy Hayden's "Sixteen Dancing Dolls."

Other Vaudeville Bills.

TELEPATHIC and mind-reading stunts by Mme. Eva Fay head the Rialto's schedule; besides Stan Stanley, comedian; Fred Whitfield and Marie Ireland, in a rural satire; the Six Hassans, Arabian tumblers; Stanley, Doyle and Reno, yodelers and fun-makers, and Halkings's "Comedy Silhouettes."

For the first half of the week the Columbia will offer Francis Rose and Du Ross, allround entertainers; the Three Hamel Sisters, in a song and dance act; Craig and Catto, vocalists and comedians, and Draper and Henry, in negro impersonations. The Kiltie Band, with music from Scotland and Ireland, will head the program beginning Thursday, which includes the Romano Sisters, dancers. The sixth chapter of the film serial, "Speed," with Clyde Hutchison, will be shown all week, as will "Lazy Bones," with Clyde Cook. Another picture, "Don't Write Letters," starring Gareth Hughes, will run until Thursday.

George Wilson, veteran minstrel, will head a company of 10 at the Grand Opera House, in an act called "Stranded." The bill also presents the De Marlo Five, Maureen Englin, Larimer and Hudson, the Humberto Brothers, Marsh and Williams, in "Broadway to the Bowery"; "Senator" Murphy, "the people's choice"; and Sam Milton and Walter Lehman, former St. Louis newsboys, in "Have a Good Time," said to be comedy of the "nut" species.

TOLEDO

Fireless Cookstoves

$42 Values For....... $33.50

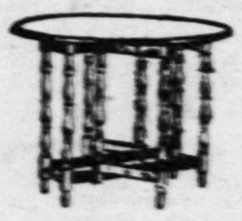
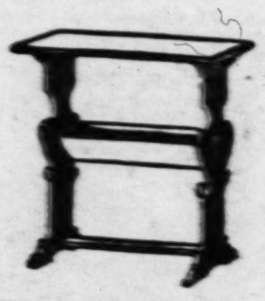
A special demonstration sale price on the latest improved two-well model, with solid steel case, raised on legs, and finished in durable enamel. Complete with full set of heating units, aluminum utensils and thermometer. Will do any kind of cooking—come in and see it demonstrated.

Mrs. Fauver, domestic science expert, is in charge of demonstrations.



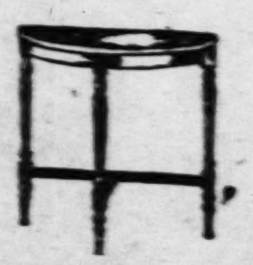
Gate-Leg Table $19.85

When extended as shown here, this Table measures 42x45 inches and it serves admirably as a card-table or tea-table. When folded it fits snugly against the wall, takes hardly any space and is quaintly ornamental. Built of solid walnut; your choice of American walnut or brown mahogany finish.



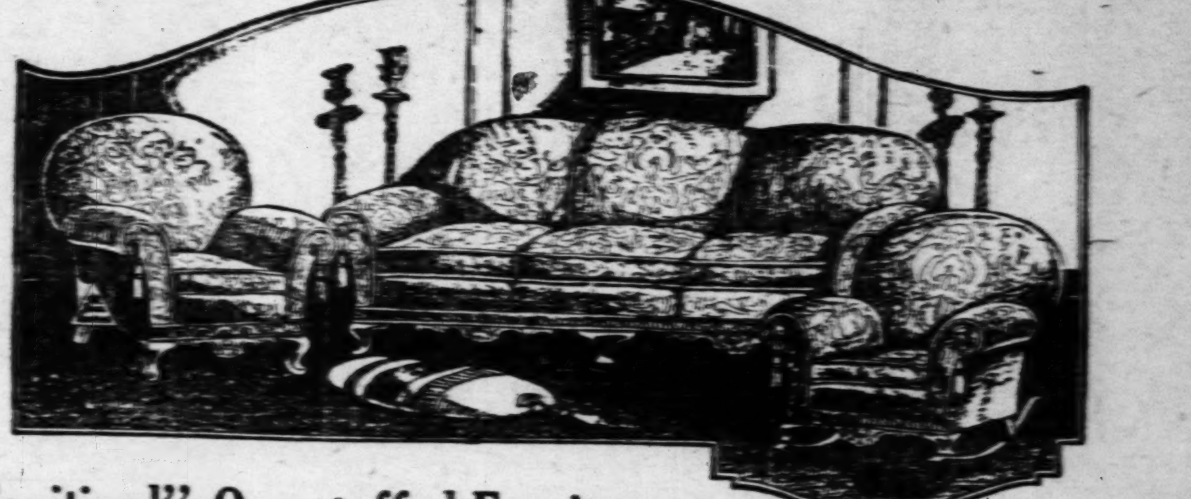
End Tables $8.95

A charmingly designed and sturdily built little table that's very companionable when placed at one end of the davenport or next to your favorite arm chair. Top measures 24x15 inches. There's a convenient trough for books and magazines.



End Tables $4.75

A gracefully designed, mahogany finished Table that is mighty good-looking and very moderately priced. No living room is really complete without a Table like this placed at one end of the davenport.



"Sanitized" Overstuffed Furniture

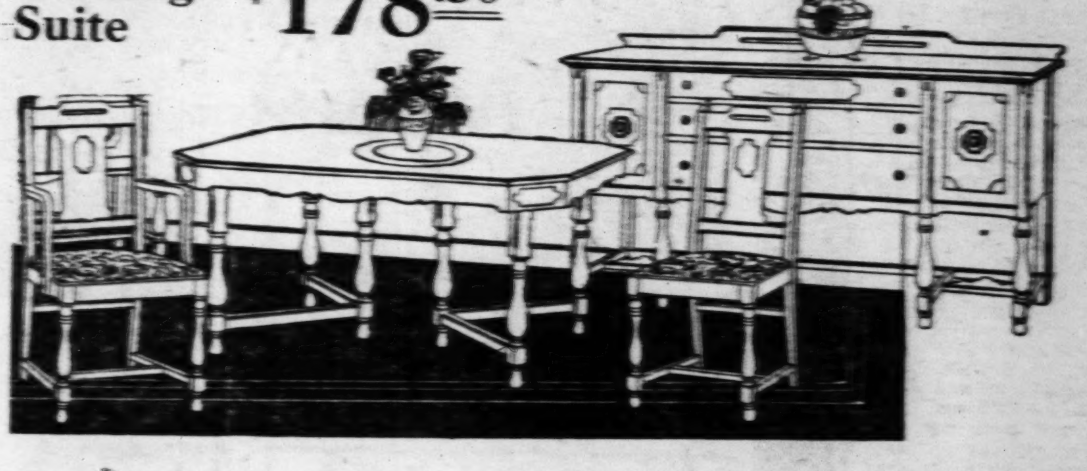
Free from the menace of germs—safely protected against moths—luxuriously beautiful in appearance.

Every particle of raw material that goes into this "Sanitized" Furniture has been treated by a new and patented scientific process that renders it forever free from germs, forever immune from the attacks of moths.

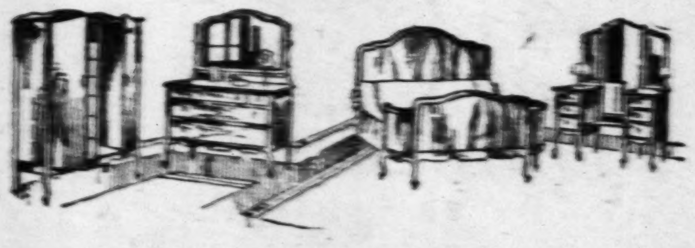
Our selection of "Sanitized" Suites includes a delightful variety of styles at a wide range of prices.

The three-piece Rex "Sanitized" Suite illustrated is priced at $199.50. Frames of mahogany, Queen Anne design, richly carved and polychromed, upholstered in choice velour, taupe, blue or mulberry. $199.50

8-Piece Dining-Room Suite $178.50



A beauty—in the Italian Renaissance style. And that it's a bargain no one, who examines it carefully, can deny. The buffet is 72 inches long; there's a 48x60-inch oblong extension table, one armchair and five straight chairs—all for $178.50. Buffet doors are exquisitely carved. Chairs have full box seats with loose tapestry cushions. Finished in beautiful two-tone dusty walnut.



4-Piece Bedroom Suite, $249.50

The beautiful simplicity of the Queen Anne Period design is most pleasingly exemplified in this Suite. And it's a real value, for it's built of genuine American walnut. The double bed is of bow-end design; dresser and full vanity dresser are each 48 inches wide and the chifforobe is 44 inches wide.

SEE DR. COFFEE
Tuesday and Wednesday,
But Not Thursday

Dr. W. O. Coffee announces he will be in his St. Louis offices Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, but not Thursday on account of Thanksgiving. He is having the most remarkable success with his special treatment He says no one should remain deaf or suffer with head noises or catarrh. They should not submit to a surgical operation on the nose, throat or ears until they get his opinion. He says about half of the people that suffer with deafness or head noises can be benefited or completely relieved by his method and all cases of catarrh should be curable. He is treating thousands of people, restoring hearing to a woman in St. Louis that had been going deaf 48 years. He has published a booklet that tells all about his method of treatment and thousands of cases treated. It explains about catarrh and deafness. It tells of the cases that are curable and incurable. He wants to send one of these booklets to every person suffering, free. He wants to explain about catarrh of the nose, head or throat especially mild cases of deafness where one ear is getting bad and the other just getting started; that is, better and worse with each cold. He says most of these cases can be relieved. He will examine you free this week, tell you the truth about your case. His 30 years experience in this specialty enables him to treat many cases successfully where others fail. If you suffer with deafness, head noises, catarrh, cross-eyes write for his booklet. He will make a special discount on all glasses fit, on all operations this week. He is in his St. Louis offices two days each week, Wednesday and Thursday, room 409 Odd Fellows' Bldg., 816 Olive St. 'Phone Olive 8413. Hours 8:30 to 4:30, no others. Better get his opinion.

Jane Cowl, Ethel Barrymore Will Play Juliet

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.

THE Capulets and Montagues are coming to town. Plans for a future appearance of Jane Cowl as Juliet are bruited about Broadway, and now comes the announcement that Ethel Barrymore is also rehearsing the role. But productions are said to be due in four weeks. Miss Cowl has always wanted to play the Capulet maid, and so has Miss Barrymore.

Mackay Morris will play the role of Romeo to Miss Barrymore's Juliet, it is reported, and Dudley Digges will appear as Friar Laurence. Laurette Taylor is another actress with ambitions to ask what's in a name from a moonlit balcony.

Only three new productions are announced for next week. "The Bunch and Judy" is to open Tuesday night at the Globe, with Joseph Cawthorne, Fred and Adele Astaire and many others. It is a musical comedy, by Jerome Kern, Anne Caldwell and Hugh Ford. "The Bootleggers," a comedy about prohibition, by William A. Page, will be shown Monday night at the Thirty-ninth Street Theater. Another all-negro musical comedy, "Lisa," is due Monday night at Daly's.

Future Plays by the Kapeks.

AN American manager has contracted for the next three plays of Josef and Karel Kapek, authors of the insect comedy, "The World We Live In," and has obtained an option on the three to follow those. . . . The next offering of the Equity Players will be "Why Not?" a new work by Jesse Lynch Williams. "The Bird of Paradise" was released for stock production last week, apparently writing finis to its career of many years as a touring attraction.

"The Cat and the Canary," which has been running at the National since February, is to close on Dec. 2. . . . Reports from Chicago are that William Hodge's new play, "For All of Us," presented Monday night at the La Salle Theater, concerns a wealthy banker, afflicted with what he believes to be an incurable ailment; his forbearing wife, and a young girl with whom he has been having an affair and who, with his wife's complete knowledge, he has brought into his home as a nurse.

An outsider, coming into the house by chance, implants in the invalid's mind the belief that wrong thinking is at the root of all human ills. Under the outsider's kindly guidance, the banker cures himself, effects a reconciliation with his wife, and gives up the girl to his son. His amour, it proves, has been of the platonic sort, and it is the boy whom she really loves.

Grace George will close her engagement here in "To Love" next Saturday night and will travel to Philadelphia and then Chicago with the adaptation of Paul Geraldy's play. . . Avery Hopwood's "Why Men Leave Home" is leaving town. . . . Frank Dazey, son of Charles T. Dazey, who wrote "In Old Kentucky," is the author of a play called "Peter Weston," in which Frank Keenan appeared last Sunday night in San Francisco.

Duncan Quits Equity Players.

AUGUSTINE DUNCAN has resigned as director of the Equity Players. . . Out of the West, where Margaret Anglin is playing in "The Woman of Bronze," comes a report that she will appear in New York soon in a drama called "The Sea Woman," by Willard Robertson, who is now cast in one of the lesser roles of "Whispering Wires."

"The Revue Russe" ended a brief and disastrous tour last week in Baltimore, and will return to Paris. Its American losses are said to have been approximately $100,000. . . It is rumored that "The Czarina" is not meeting with success on the road, and that Doris Keane will be seen here in a new play before the season is over.

Edward Knobloch, here on another visit, is said to have a play about Poe, under managerial consideration. . . Martha Hedman and her husband have written a play called "Lydia Vane," and tried it out in stock, preparatory to a metropolitan showing. . . In addition to presenting David Warfield in "The Merchant of Venice," Mr. Belasco threatens to produce "Romeo and Juliet," with Lenore Ulric, and "Henry V," with Lionel Atwill.

PLAYS BY GALSWORTHY ACTORS.

THREE plays by members of the "Loyalties" Company are likely to have performances in the near future. Two are by James Dale, "Honorable Women" and another not yet named; the third is "Autumn Roses," by Laurence Hanray. . . Marjorie Leach has been engaged to replace Georgia O'Ramey in "Daffydill." . . . "Rose Bernd" never suffered such an accelerated tempo as on the opening night of John Barrymore's "Hamlet." At 10:30 o'clock Miss Ethel Barrymore rushed into the Sam H. Harris Theater, in time to see her brother murder Polonius.

Lowell Sherman has another heavy, black-browed role in "The Masked Woman," adapted from the French of De Fiers and De Croisset, which was put into rehearsal this week. . . . Ilsa Marvenga, of the Nollendorf Theater, Berlin, is to be starred in the American production of the German musical comedy, "Gri Gri."

It is reported that Alfred Lunt, after "Banco" closes here next week, will appear in a play by Booth Tarkington, called "Cunnell Blake." . . . Fay Bainter plays the part of a circus rider in Monckton Hoffe's "The Painted Lady," which opens soon at the Ritz. . . . Eugene O'Neill is in town, polishing up his newest play, "The Fountain," for an early production, perhaps with Fritz Leiber as star.

TREASURY OF HEROES AND HEROINES, by Clayton Edwards. "Lives of the most dramatic and adventurous quality have been gathered from all corners of the earth and from every age in history, in such a way that they may cover the widest possible variety of human experience."—Preface.

LANCE OF KANANA; A STORY OF ARABIA, by Henry W. French. —How a brave Bedouin boy, though called a coward by his tribe, gave his life to save Arabia from her enemies. A story of courage and patriotism.

THE MUTINEERS, by Charles Boardman Hawes.—At the age of 16, Benjamin Lathrop put out from Salem Harbor, a green hand on the Island Princess, a sailing ship bound for Canton, China, with a cargo of ginseng and woolen goods, and in the hold of the ship, a fortune of $100,000 in gold. There followed a voyage in which the boy played a man's part through appalling times of murder and mutiny. A stirring tale of sea life 60 years ago.

BOY'S KING ARTHUR, by Sir Thomas Malory. Edited by Sidney Lanier; illustrated by N. C. Wyeth.—An excellent rendering of Malory's King Arthur, beautifully illustrated. A most attractive book.

JIM DAVIS, by John Masefield.—Adventures of an English boy who is captured by smugglers and forced to aid them in two raids before he can escape. A thrilling tale.

MASTER SIMON'S GARDEN, by Cornelia Meigs.—A gay garden in a sober Puritan town is cherished by generation after generation who come to see that more than flowers were planted, even "the seeds of Liberty and Justice and freedom for all." A charming story well told.

POOL OF STARS, by Cornelia Meigs.—Story of the mystery of a ruined house and the attempts of a boy and girl to solve it.

MEN OF IRON, by Howard Pyle. —How brave Myles Falworth, squire-at-arms, was created Knight of the Bath. A story of chivalry in the time of Henry IV of England: one of the most perfect books of its kind.

BLACK ARROW, by Robert Louis Stevenson.—The story of young Richard Shelton and the outlaw band of the "black arrow" during the Wars of the Roses.

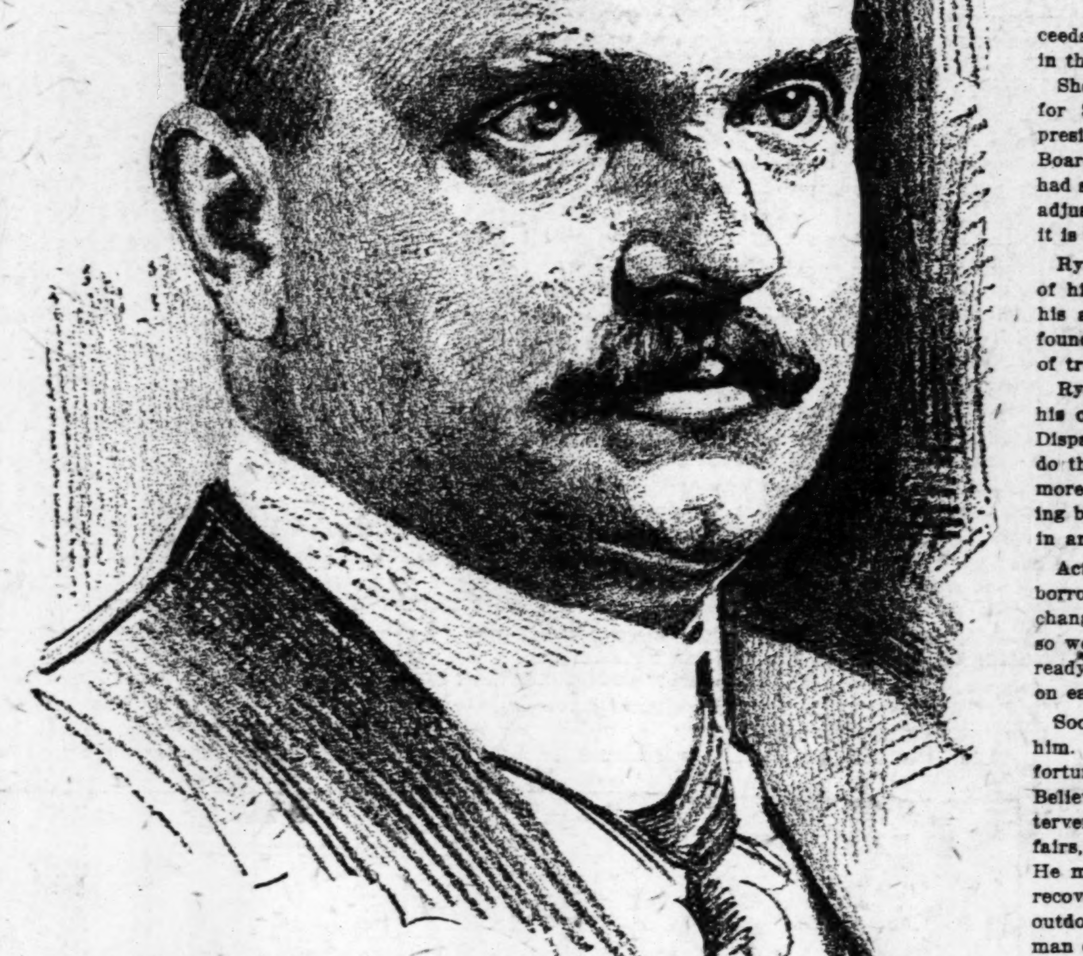
Allan Ryan, Wall Street's "Stormy Petrel," Bankrupt Last July, Owing $32.000,000, Is Back on His Feet Again and Ready for Another Spectacular Grapple With His Enemies

Operator, Who Won His Sobriquet Because He Is Always "Starting Something," Is Expected to Be Heard From Soon by Those Who Remember How He Upset the Speculative Market by His Corner in Stutz, Which Resulted in a Scandal Involving Some Directors of the Stock Exchange.

When Schwab, Du Pont, Untermyer and Others, Known to Be Close Friends of His Father, Fail to Press Claims, Report Circulates in Street That Parent, From Whom He Once Was Estranged, Helped Him---Otherwise Mystery of His Quick Comeback Is Unexplained.



Allan A. Ryan

Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.

WALL STREET seldom gets a shock. At least, if it does, Wall street seldom admits it. Wall street is hardened. Compared with the old times, Wall street nowadays has a Black Friday six days in the week, sometimes twice a day, and it requires something out of the ordinary to give it a slam.

Allan A. Ryan has supplied it. He has done it before now and he has done it again. He has come back. Not that Wall street didn't expect Allan Ryan to come back. It did. The jolt is that he has come back so soon.

The man who filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy only last July, with liabilities placed at [illegible],477, has been discharged from bankruptcy and his hat is in the ring for another joust with the money god, all his wearing apparel is in the ring saving the shirt on his back, if the word of [illegible] G. Caffey, former United States Attorney for this district of New York, who was appointed receiver for the Ryan firm when it went into liquidation, is to be accepted. Mr. Caffey was asked today as to the status of the Ryan unsecured debts and he said:

"Half of the unsecured debts are due to Ryan's wife and she has declined to present her claims. The remaining unsecured debts are held by persons who have not yet presented their claims and as the law gives all creditors one year from the date of the filing of bankruptcy petition to set forth their claims, we cannot tell what will happen. But this much is certain, Ryan has pledged everything but his shirt."

He Has Been "Broke" Before.

Eight years ago Ryan was without a penny in the world or an asset except his seat on the Stock Exchange, which he had managed to keep through several years of illness. In eight years he watched a colossal fortune rise, and then tumble to ruins. Today, cleared of his liabilities, he emerges from the bankruptcy wreck into which he was plunged last July and is free to duplicate if he can his meteoric rise that culminated with the corner on Stutz Motors early in 1920, one of the most spectacular financial maneuvers that Wall street has ever witnessed. He was discharged [illegible] of this week by Judge Augustus N. Hand in the Federal Court here.

Ryan, though the son of Thomas Fortune Ryan, one of America's richest men and formerly one of Wall street's greatest operators, has always been "on his own" from the days when he left college. He had a genius for making money and he preferred to do it by himself and in his own way. He never called on father to show him the way, and, since he has been operating, he is said to have been for a large part of the time in disagreement with his father.

When Ryan last July filed his petition in voluntary bankruptcy, listing liabilities of $32,435,477, with $27,806,984 secured, his collapse was recorded as one of the most sensational failures that Wall street had ever known. And the dramatic "bust up" came as a sequel to his spectacular corner on Stutz Motors in the spring of 1920 and his resulting expulsion from the Stock Exchange.

The "Street" Set Out to "Get" Him.

That corner was, in the language of the street, a "humdinger." It made the street sit up. When it was at length realized that the daring operator had slung one over on the astute financiers who line the architectural gorge in the vicinity of the United State Subtreasury, the "street" took its medicine and at once set about a program of revenge. Wall street neither forgives nor forgets. Any man who will run a stock up from something like $22 or $23 to more than $750 is a man whom the "street" must haze. It hazed Ryan. It "got" him, according to predictions. The failure was the result.

Several weeks after the appointment of Caffey as receiver for the Ryan business, the liabilities of the bankrupt operator were reduced about $12,000,000 because of duplication in his schedules. The principal claims against him were held by the Guaranty Trust Co., Chase National Bank, Mechanics and Metals National Bank, First National Bank, Lawyers' Title and Trust Co., Allan A. Ryan & Co., A. A. Housman & Co., H. Hentz & Co., State Mutual Life Assurance Co., New York Life Insurance Co. and the Equitable Life Assurance Society.

Of Ryan's liabilities, $4,621,234.72 were unsecured. Of this amount, $2,860,669.39 is owing to Sara Tucker Ryan, his wife, and the balance to Chas. M. Schwab, Harry Payne Whitney, Samuel Untermyer, T. Coleman Du Pont and others.

The discharge of Ryan from bankruptcy makes possible now the carrying out of his business plans and within a short time directors and an official organization will be chosen for Allan A. Ryan & Co., Inc., according to what George E. Lewis, the Ryan attorney, said today. The organization was incorporated a few months ago, but pending the receivership it went on further than the naming of a dummy board of directors.

Called "Stormy Petrel" by Wall Street

While the figures are large, when looked at in the light of statistics in a romantic story, they are correspondingly dry. It is the human interest element in the Ryan failure and recovery which makes it worthy of treatment outside the financial columns of a newspaper.

Down in Wall Street there is a tendency to go to the zoological gardens when a nickname is wanted. The bulls and bears have long known about the Wolf of Wall Street. And there was a famous old manipulator of gas and lighting stocks who was grimly referred to as the Wall Street Mole, because he seemed to be working underground all the time.

To Wall Street, Allan A. Ryan has been the "Stormy Petrel." Thus was he known. He was always starting something and but once did he start anything he could not finish. That was the Stutz coup. In half a dozen cases he skilfully put together or started going a dozen big industrial concerns, ran the proverbial shoestring into a pile of $30,0000,000, became one of the leaders of the speculative element in the street and finally tackled the all powerful New York Stock Exchange in the Stutz corner in one of the hottest engagements that body of traders has ever fought.

Samuel Untermyer

The zenith of his stock market career was reached in the peak of the bull movement in the fall of 1919. He had been especially fortunate in his speculative activities. The stocks he had sponsored had moved up rapidly. They had made quick and easy money for those who had followed his operations. At that time it had only to be rumored around the street that "Ryan is buying" to start an upward movement in any stock to which his fancy directed.

Ran Shoe String to $30,000,000

Although Ryan was noted for being close-mouthed about his wealth, an incident that occurred in the fall of 1919 is worth relating. After a strenuous day in the market in which all of "the Ryan stock" had moved up vigorously, he telephone the head of a large banking institution who had aided him in getting over the tight places in some of his operations and asked the banker to drive up town with him.

"I have just had the bookkeeper figure up my worth tonight," he said to the banker, "and here are the figures." The list set forth beyond all question the $30,000,000 parlayed from a shoestring. It was ont long after this that the famous Stutz fight began.

In the early part of 1920, stock of the Stutz Motor Co., of which Ryan was then president and a director, began to undergo perplexing market fluctuations. Before many weeks had passed Wall Street woke up to find that an apparent corner existed and that thousands of shares had been sold "short" with no prospect of "covering."

Investigation was begun and Ryan and his associates were alleged to have bought 31,000 shares of the stock for themselves during March, 1920, and to have used the corner to force up the price of the tsock until it had reached $750 a share. On March 31, trading in Stutz Motors was suspended and an indefinite moratorium was declared, in which there could be no calls for delivery of shares.

Later, at the request of Ryan, the stock was stricken from the list.

Governors of the Stock Exchange, after further investigation, charged openly that a corner existed. Ryan defied them, and then achieved the master stroke of his career when he forced 58 of his brokers to pay him $550 a share for the stock they had sold "short" at prices ranging from 100 to 391. Some 5500 shares were involved in the transaction and a sum of $1,650,000 was added to his fortune.

His Row With Stock Exchange.

Ryan shortly afterward was summoned to appear before the Board of Governors on charges that he was guilty of conduct inconsistnet with the equitable principles of trade." He refused to appear. The governors, thereupon, after calling in representatives of the 58 houses who were short of Stutz stock and obtaining their verification of questionnaires concerning stock dealings, voted to expel Ryan from the Exchange. His seat on the Exchange, which had been purchased years ago for about $4500, was sold for $98,000, the proceeds from this sale being listed among his assets in the bankruptcy petition.

Shortly after his expulsion, Ryan brought suit for $1,000,000 against William H. Remick, the president of the Exchange, and members of the Board of Governors, several of whom, he alleged, had sold Stutz Motor shares "short." It is said an adjustment has been reached on this suit and that it is to be dismissed.

Ryan's troubles increased rapidly after the loss of his seat and four months after his expulsion his affairs had fallen into such a state that he found it necessary to place his assets in the hands of trustees for protection.

Ryan went into Wall street at an early age on his own hook, because, as he once told a Post-Dispatch correspondent, "I had to have money to do the things I wanted to do and you can make more money with less brains in less time executing buying and selling orders on commission than in any other way."

Acting upon this conviction, he is said to have borrowed the money to buy a seat on the Exchange and set about it. His early ventures were so well timed and executed that at 25 he had already accumulated a million and seemed to be on easy street.

Soon after this it was that misfortune overtook him. Several unlucky transactions cut down his fortune and he became ill with a severe cold. Believing that he had tuberculosis, his father, intervening for the first time in his personal affairs, rushed him on a special train to Denver. He made the trip on a cot, and for a while his recovery was a matter of grave doubt. But the outdoor air of Colorado eventually made a new man out of him.

Entered the Munitions Field.

When he returned to Wall setreet several years later his personal funds were gone and he had a family to care for. That was in 1914. Just how much assistance he had from his father, both during his fledgling days in Wall street, and in his rehabilitation is a matter of much debate among those who are supposed to know the Ryan family intimately, but in an interview with a correspondent of the Post-Dispatch in 1920 he recalled as follows some of the circumstances that attended his new start on the Exchange just when disaster threatened:

"It was in 1914," he said, and my mother had guaranteed my notes at a certain national bank to help me support my family and get a new start in business. I was just beginning to 'come back' when the war in Europe broke out and the Exchange closed.

"I remember exactly how I reached for my hat when that news came. My partner asked me where I was going and I told him up to the bank to explain that I could not continue my monthly payments on these notes until business resumed again. On the way up to the bank an idea darted into my head—munitions. And then another—food; and another—transportation. Europe had stopped producing and had gone to destroying and would need munitions to kill with and food to eat while she fought and transportation to get them across the ocean, and America would have to meet the demand.

"I went into the bank repeating those words like a refrain—food, munitions, transportation—and after I had arranged about my notes I told them they'd have to get busy furnishing Europe with those three necessities and would have to lend me more money so I could get busy, too.

"That," said Ryan, "is how I got on my feet again. And as fast as I got capital to use I invested it in my lifelong hunch and bought production. Stutz came first and the Stromberg Carburetors, and since then Consolidated Textiles and Continental Candy and a lot of others.

"Avoid Preferred Stock, Buy Common."

"Production—buying it and developing it—that's my enthusiasm. Think of the demand. This country brings $15,000,000,000 of new wealth out of the ground every year, and that's all got to be turned into human uses by production. It's the one genuine sure thing there is. You can't miss on it if you follow sound business principles.

"What are those business principles? Well, the first is don't be a spendthrift with your surplus earnings. Keep your dividends down and pour the surpluses back into the business, as Mr. Harriman poured them back into his railroad and as we've done in Stutz, for instance, until your plant is in a condition to meet your demand and your financial foundation is absolutely sure. Another is avoid preferred stock and bonds as you would poison. As long as fixed dividend and interest charges stand against your earnings your president will have to be working partly for the capitalists who hold those securities when he ought to be working wholly for production. If only common stock is out and lean weeks or months or year come, you're in a position just to lock the stable door and let the horse stand quiet till the going's better."

Ryan was born in New York on May 5, 1879. He received his early education in England and later was graduated from Georgetown University at Washington. A New York World writer who visited him when his wave of fortune was at its crest characterized him thus:

"He is a man who knows precisely where he stands, exactly what he wants and he moves promptly and directly to get it—a rich man who cares very little for money, but very much for being constantly busy at something productive—a builder and doer and, when necessary, a fighter, but essentially a simple hearted home man, fonder and prouder of his three children than of all his other achievements and possessions. He stands 6 feet, 2 inches in height and is rangy rather than compactly built. He has a frank and friendly brown eye and an equally friendly smile, though he is apt to get tremendously in earnest when his mind concentrates on any topic. Indeed, simple and forceful directness seems to be his most marked characteristic."

It was on the occasion of this visit that Ryan gave his version of the Stutz corner controversy in which he was then involved. His story of it was as follows:

His Version of Stutz Corner.

"Certain New York Stock Exchange members, including some of the governors and their clients, started a joy ride on the securities of the Stutz Motor Car Co., selling shares short, with the idea, possibly, of securing control or at any rate realizing largely on the manipulation. Instead, they found themselves squeezed in an unbreakable corner, facing a loss of many millions. By the code of the street, they should have taken this loss and settled their contracts. But they did not. First and of its own motion, the Board of Governors broke all precedent by interfering in a corner. They suspended all trading in Stutz until further notice. This action not only helped the 'shorts,' some of whom, I charge, as members of the governing body, voted on the ruling—by relieving them indefinitely of the obligation to deliver the stock they had contracted to deliver, but also, by destroying its negotiable value, the moratorium deprived me of the use of the very large sum of money I had invested in its purchase.

"Second, the disillusioned raiders formed a protective committee, engaged counsel and announced their intention of seeking relief from their contract in the courts, thus violating precedent for a second time. It has always been an unwritten law that disputes between the mem-

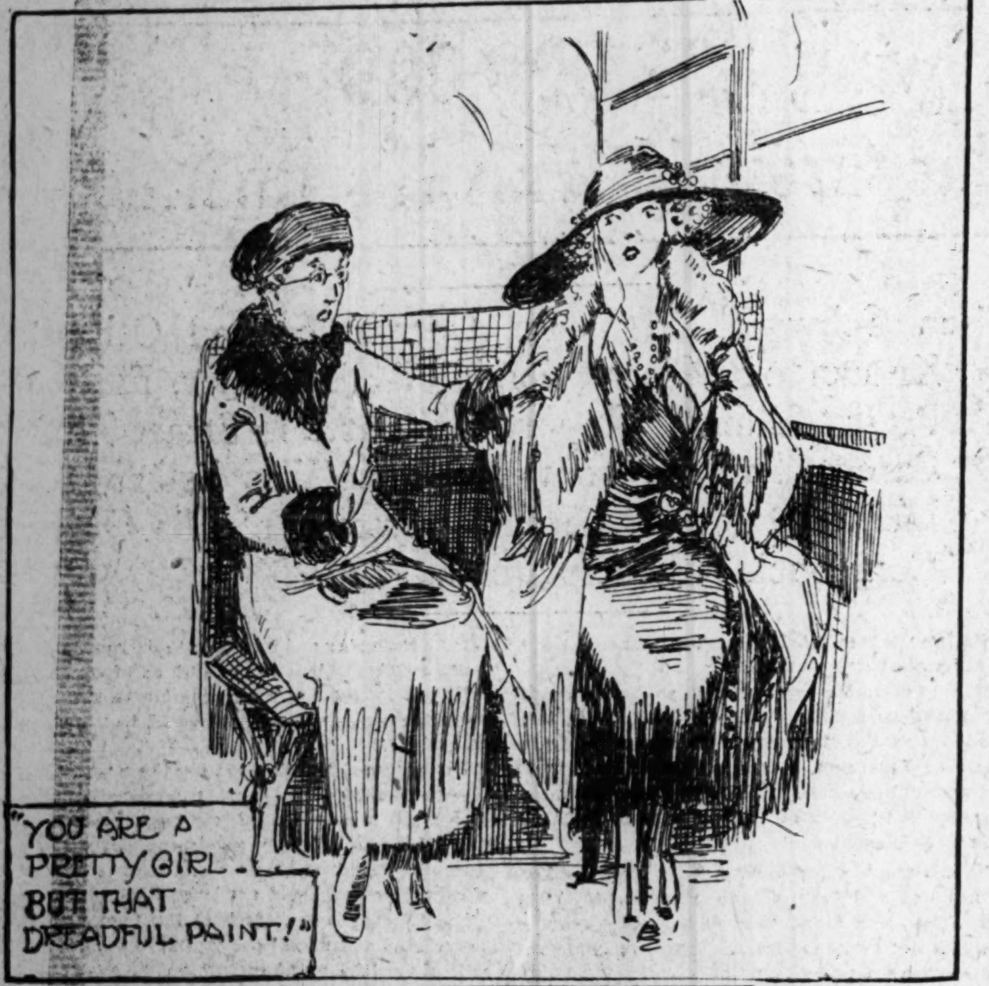
Lights and Shadows in Life of Oldest Social Worker Among St. Louis' Poor

MRS. SUE OWENS TELLS OF VISITING HOMES OF THE HUMBLE AND GIVING AID THEREIN 42 YEARS



"YOU ARE A PRETTY GIRL - BUT THAT DREADFUL PAINT!"

How She Helped an Old Woman Keep Her Family of Seven Grandchildren Together and How They All Grew Up to Be Important Citizens---After What She Has Seen Many Times, No One Can Make Her Believe Prayer Is Not Effective---Prefers to Be known as a Plain Missionary and Doubts That Social Settlement Work Is as Scientific as It Professes to Be.

By MARGUERITE MARTYN

ON Friday, Nov. 17, Mrs. Sue Owens, greeting the parishioners of Boyle Memorial Center at the regular weekly prayer meeting, reminded them that it was just 35 years to the day of the month and the day of the week since she presided over the first of the meetings which have continued since without a single omission, every week, at this mission.

Everybody whose dwelling place has been in the district bounded by Twelfth street and the river and Cass and Chouteau avenues has reason to know that Mrs. Owens has been unfailingly on the job, conducting the meetings or, between times, rounding up the congregation, for it is said of her by her co-workers that there is not a dwelling house in the whole district that she has not visited at one time or another.

Mrs. Owens began her missionary work even longer than 35 years ago, for it was in 1881 that the First Methodist Church surrendered its site at Eighth and Washington to the onrush of commerce and moved to the West End. Mrs. Owens, at that time a parish visitor residing at the parsonage, might have moved with the rest of the church staff. Instead, she went to the pastor and said: "What are we going to do about our poor people who must continue to live down here?"

The pastor sincerely regretted that they would not be able to take them along, but could offer no alternative to their abandonment. Whereupon Mrs. Owens announced that she, herself, intended to remain with them. Accordingly, on Friday, Nov. 17, 1887, having prevailed upon the Y. M. C. A. to permit her to call a meeting at their building, then at Eleventh and Locust streets, she asked the people to join her in an all-day service of praise and prayer, with the object of getting a building that would serve poor people even better, and in which they would feel more at home than they ever had in the rich, fine church.

The result was, in less than a year, the erection of the building at 816 North Eleventh street which has been a center of social and religious ministration to this congested neighborhood ever since. At first it was supported interdenominationally, later being taken over by the Presbyterians.

A Seat of Experimental Work

Many of the first experiments in the "institutional church" idea were tried out here. One of the first industrial schools with classes in domestic science and handicraft flourished here, with an attendance as high as 600 at times. Some of the first recreational clubs for boys and girls, among the first under-age kindergarten and day nurseries and mothers' meetings where problems in child welfare were discussed, were instituted here, though these more modern designations were not always given to these gatherings.

The neighborhood has changed and the same undertakings for the relief of humanity have been taken up and enlarged through other agencies in many other parts of the city. Certain of the activities are still carried on by the pastor, the Rev. Paul E. Nelson, and a staff of assistants, and in accordance with the founder's idea the work here partakes more of the religious character than in most other social settlements.

Mrs. Owens probably is the oldest social service worker in point of length of service in the city, though she prefers the older-fashioned name, "missionary." "These what-do-you-call-em's, social workers?" she remarked when I went to interview her at the home of her widowed daughter-in-law, with whose family she has lived at 5947 Bartmer avenue for a number of years.

"I rejoice over all the work being done in a scientific way for the uplifting of the masses," she went on. "More good is being done for humanity than ever before. The public playgrounds and baths, the municipal athletic associations, community centers, the visiting nurses, the probation work, and all the other aspects of social service are fine things. Social service is all right if the attitude of the worker is right, but my experience is that becoming a Christian brings its own material guidance. It may be that you can learn in schools how to help humanity, but to me nothing surpasses the Bible as a textbook. Unless the heart and example of Jesus Christ are in the work, scientific knowledge avails nothing.

"You cannot fool poor people and you cannot fool children.

"I recollect a story which you may have heard, but which I know to be a true story. A settlement worker invited a little girl in one of her classes to visit in her home. The child's mother had cautioned her to take her teacher as an example in all things and try to copy her. No sooner had she arrived in the grand drawing room than the child began to ask questions. 'Do you live upstairs or down? How many rooms have you got? Where do you sleep? Where do your children sleep? How much do you spend for food? What do you have to eat? Does your husband drink? Does he come home soused?'

"'Why, you inquisitive, impertinent little girl,' exclaimed the social worker.

"'Well, I was just trying to act as you do when you come to our home,' responded the child.

Reforming a "Hopeless" Case

"Now, in my parish visiting, I counsel people to become Christians, but I do not tell them how to run their households or take care of their babies. I ask them to come to the mission and there, if they choose, they can learn how other people live. You have heard of the bum who said he asked for soup and they gave him soap and he got salvation? Well, that is about what they get from us, though not necessarily in the same order.

"We do not overemphasize the material gifts. There was a lad who came to the mission drunk, again and again. I would clean him up, get him warm clothes and he would fare forth and in due time return, drunk and disreputable again. It looked like a hopeless case. The pastor said, 'He isn't worth killing.'

"'Well,' I replied, 'he's not fit to die, so I can't give him up.'

"One day the boy said to me: 'Mother Owens, pray for me, pray for me again.'

"Exasperated, I exploded with, 'Get up and pray for yourself!'

"He did, and if you'll believe it, the next time he came to see me he was a changed man. Later, being rejected for enlistment in the army, he went to the war as a secretary for the Y. M. C. A., and now he has a fine position and is as godly and upright a young man as you'd care to see.

"I have found some miserable conditions that the social workers no doubt would have handled differently. I recall one instance. Two mothers had died, leaving between them seven children. The old grandmother was attempting to take care of them and keep them together. Their daily fare, she told me, consisted of stale bread soaked in lard and water and then fried. Possibly I should have reported the case to some social agencies that would have put the children into institutions, but the old grandmother was so set on keeping them together.

Good of Keeping a Family Together

Instead, I told our pastor's wife and she got a group of young church ladies to pledge themselves to deliver a basket of groceries at the house once a week. The old grandmother has long since passed on, but every one of those seven children has turned out well. Some of them are rich or prosperous and all have fine characters and the most unusual affection for one another.

"And I recall another, a Spartan mother, if there ever was one. She had seven daughters and one son. She used to go out and wash all day and then scrub office buildings at night. During all the years she did this she kept her children in our industrial school and Sunday school.

Today the son is an engineer with a company in India. The daughters all have married well. They used to live in the foulest alley in our district. Now the girls live in fine houses in good neighborhoods and I occasionally see their names in the society items. The mother is still living, and nothing is too good for her. It is the delight of her daughters to see that she knows nothing but ease and comfort and all that is good and beautiful in life.

"I think some of these poor women could set examples in some ways to the more fortunate women who patronize them, don't you?

"And the children of our Sunday schools," she went on. "When I visit a West End Sunday school I am always struck with how much better-mannered are the children of our schools than those of the more fortunate classes.

"Our young girls, too, our little flappers," she added, "are they not only trying in their mistaken way to imitate the example set them in supposedly higher circles of society?"

Did she think girls of today compared favorably with girls of a generation ago?

"With the liberties which are accorded or which they take, they do seem more bold and careless. That dreadful paint they put on their faces! They frighten me with their masklike faces. The poor little things. They are only trying to outshine one another in the eyes of the boys. I sat next to one on the street car, and as is a habit of mine, got into conversation with her.

"'You are a pretty girl. But that paint! Ugh! It's scarey!'

"She put her hand over her cheek and I could see her blush even under the paint. They are not without conscience. But why blame the girls for everything? Why not blame the boys? It is the boys who first estimate success only on a money basis. They think if they can offer a wife money, nothing else need be expected of them, and the girl gets to thinking if she can marry money that she has made the greatest conquest. In my travels back and forth on the street cars, never does a boy get up and give me a seat, these days, while so frequently do girls show me this courtesy that I have been moved to ask if there were some concerted agreement among them always to give an old woman a seat.

"I blame the boys for all this conscienceless behavior more than I blame the girls.

"Not long ago a Police Sergeant asked me to go to a disreputable house and see if I could persuade a country girl who had arrived there that day to return home. I went, though I felt that in that house it was a hopeless undertaking.

"There was a great roomful of very young boys and girls, the girls almost as naked as society ladies at evening functions. They were a sight. The boys jeered and sneered at me. I had to slap one insolent young cub in the face. But after I had given them a good talking to the girls, many of them, were in tears, and all meekly accepted the little leaflets I passed around.

"When I got outside I gave that Sergeant a good scolding for sending me through such an experience. He said he was just trying to test me. He had kept within hearing of me all the time, he said. I suppose you can't blame the police, who see so much wickedness, for being skeptical about anybody trying to do good. Afterward he went back and arrested the girl and the young fellow who brought her there, as he should have done in the first place, the Mann act covering their offense."

Confirming what the interviewer had been told, that there is scarcely a dwelling in the district she had not visited at some time, Mrs. Owens said:

Foolish Questions Friends Sometimes Ask

"I seldom meet with a cold reception. It is easy, oh, so easy, to find people who are craving spiritual counsel. I make so few fruitless visits that I am convinced the Lord directs me where to go. One almost uncanny experience I recall. I went to a house where a woman sprang at me, saying: 'Are you the woman who came to me in my dream last night?' 'Mercy alive, no,' said I. Then she told me how she had been worried to distraction about a niece who had got in trouble, that the night before she had prayed, then gone to sleep and in her dream there appeared before her a woman who looked exactly like me, save that there was a halo about her head. Well, at least there could be no doubt about my being here now and ready and able to help her niece through her trouble.

"My solicitous friends sometimes ask me what disinfectant I use or offer to provide me with some, for visiting in the houses of the poor. I've never used any kind of disinfectant, and I've never, so far as I know, collected a germ.

"And I am often asked if I believe all the people we try to help are worthy. Now, I never ask these poor people if they are worthy, though I never fail to ask these people who have everything if they are worthy.

"I've met with some horrible examples of depravity, but I've never yet lost faith that there is a spark of good as long as there is life in their bodies. It may be a lost chord and hard to find, but it is there. Many and many a girl I have prayed over and implored to turn from evil ways and I have gone away convinced that I was having no effect. But I do not abandon hope. I believe that a kind word or a kind deed never dies.

"And how many of them—I cannot begin to enumerate how many of them—have sent for me at the end, when they came to die in charity hospitals or in some more forsaken spot.

"'I have been so unhappy,' they always tell me. 'Even when I fought and rebelled against you, I was unhappy. And though I would not listen to you, you never looked mad at me. Just now, when I sent for you, I knew you would come. Won't you pray for me again?'

"It is those who turn out well that we are least likely to hear from afterward," said Mrs. Owens, though not with bitterness, rather with a twinkle of satisfaction in her eye. "Some of my younger associates are inclined to call this ingratitude. 'Why don't these people that have made good come back and help us with the others?' they ask. I say, 'Why, when they have succeeded in getting out of the mire, should they risk the slightest contamination from their early environment?'

"A woman came to me not long ago, with a troubled conscience. She had been among the fallen at one time, but, by good luck, in another city, starting in a better environment, had shed her past, had married and was moving in good society. Was she not deceiving the good people with whom she associated? Shouldn't she let them know she had not always been any better than she ought to have been? She wanted to know. I told her she was just silly to think she should tell anybody. There were too many ready to kick her down again.

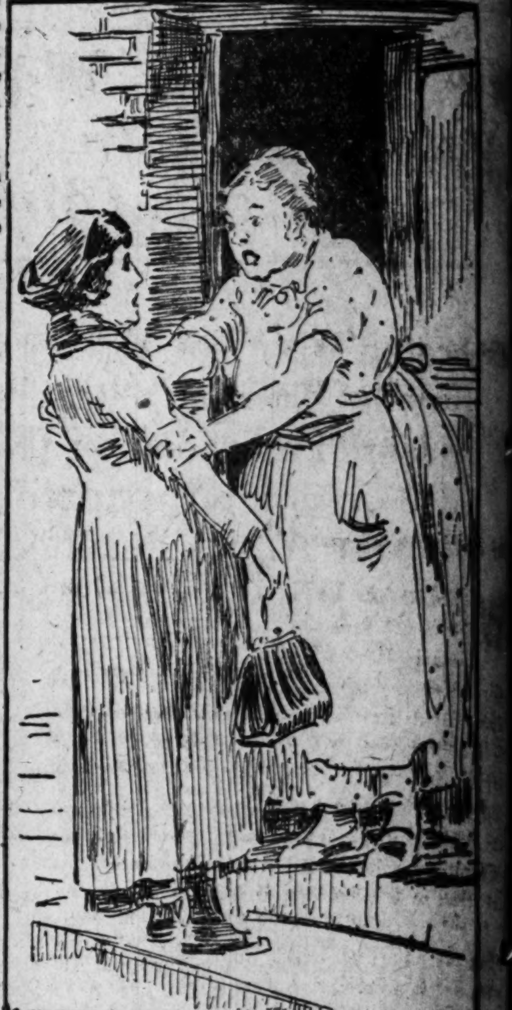
"There was one detail of reparation that remained to be made. She had committed the error of marrying her present husband without a divorce from a previous one. I got a lawyer who could manage the divorce, then a discreet pastor, who remarried her to her later husband and they have returned to their home.

"Many of those who have become prosperous come back and want to pay me money for past services.

"It gives them satisfaction sometimes to contribute out of their earnings to the mission, but we limit their gifts. If anybody has experienced something during the week for which she feels especially thankful, she is invited to put a penny in the thank-offering box. The box has been emptied of $100 in pennies more than once."

Mrs. Owens the last seven or eight years has given up her parish visiting, climbing the steep steps of the tenements proving too much for her strength in advancing years. She continues to conduct her weekly prayer meetings. She is able to feel that she has fulfilled the mission she undertook so many years ago, and for which she says the following simple formula has sufficed as a guiding motto:

"I expect to pass through this world but once. Therefore, if there is any good that I can do, or any kind word that I can say, let me do it now. Let me not defer or neglect it. For I shall not pass this way again."



"'ARE YOU THE WOMAN THAT CAME TO ME IN MY DREAM?' 'MERCY ALIVE, NO!' SAID I"

Not all her efforts at human regeneration have borne the good results of those just told of, she will admit. Many of the gangsters and gunmen who recently have fallen into the dragnet of the police or suffered retribution by their own methods have been known to her as boys and she sighs over them and finds excuses for them.

"That poor Charlie Vance was one of my boys," she sighed. "You cannot make laws by which to judge all cases, for each is an individual and a different problem. One rule that would surely help matters would be leniency toward first offenders. First offenders should never be sent to jail. That practice has made more criminals than it has ever saved. But, after all, it depends upon what is in the boy, whether the prison helps or harms him. So many of them are mentally deficient or warped.

"The psychiatric clinic in connection with the Juvenile Court is an excellent step. Many youthful criminals are the result of bad housing conditions and these high prices that make it necessary for all the members of the family to work out and leave nobody at home to look after the children.

"And there is the drink evil. Prohibition is responsible just now for terrible turmoil and much crime. Why, I understand the liquor they get is as bad as concentrated lye. Still, I have great hopes of prohibition, if only they give it a fair trial. The people who are howling for modification of the Volstead act and cheaper and better liquor are not so much the people in our neighborhood. There is less poverty and more thrift. They know they are better off without it. The rising generation realizes this and they will profit by it after all the old soaks have

Meet the Judge and Opposing Counsel in the Celebrated Herrin Riot Trials

ALSO BEHOLD A WORD PICTURE OF THE SETTING FOR LEGAL BATTLE IN MARION'S QUAINT OLD COURTHOUSE

Here in the shadows of this beautiful wood was enacted on the 22d of last June, the terrible tragedy in which 20 men, employed in the Herrin strip mine, were shot down by a frenzied crowd of rioters who resented the bringing in of these men from other places to work the mine during the strike then in progress. The victims all fell at a point in the center of the photograph. Because of the thickness of the foliage of this wood, it has not been possible heretofore to show by photograph the sinister scene of the tragedy. But the falling leaves, brought down by the frosts of autumn, have lightened it up sufficiently to make the taking of this photograph possible during the past week.

WHY JUDGE ELECTED TO PRESIDE HIMSELF INSTEAD OF CALLING ANOTHER JURIST THOUGH HE LIVES IN COUNTY

He Might Easily Have Shirked Task That Is Sure to Turn Many of His Neighbors Against Him but Will Do His Duty —Local Prosecutor's Zeal Is Disarming His Critics.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch
MARION, Ill., Nov. 25

WILLIAMSON COUNTY'S Courthouse, upon which the eyes of the country are focused, because there the first of the Herrin massacre cases is on trial, is a house set on a hill, with Marion, bustling county seat, sloping away in four directions. Its architecture of an earlier day, in contrast to the modern business houses and office buildings that face the square, in the center of which it stands, is typical of the incongruity of the trial for a medieval massacre in the midst of a humane civilization.

As the examination of veniremen has droned along the past two weeks the honks of automobiles which swarm the square have sometimes been needed to remind that the procedure is of today. It is the procedure that is followed throughout the State, archaic enough in some particulars, but there is a casualness and easy informality that is not known elsewhere in the State.

The coutroom is large, as county courtrooms go, with bare walls and high ceiling and high windows which let in a garish glare. There is an ample inclosed court space at the east end and behind the railing are benches for the populace. It was built before the day of the study of acoustics, so hearing is haphazard. In an effort to correct this, some changes were made at the beginning of the trial. The bench was moved from the east wall to the south end of the inclosed space, against the south wall, a proceeding which displaced the dust-covered candidates' pictures which had been pinned there for two years and left as the only remaining wall decorations pictures of Judge Dewitt T. Hartwell and President Warren G. Harding and an American flag hanging awry across the corner of the Harding poster.

A Young, Alert, Immaculate Judge

The witness stand is to the Judge's left, the jury box is against the east wall, where the bench formerly was, and the counsel tables are in the angle formed by the bench and the jury box, with the audience spread at right angles to the inclosure.

There, these November days, Judge Hartwell has been umpiring the great American game of jury-picking as it is played in Williamson County between all-star teams of attorneys for the State of Illinois and for the five union coal miners on trial for their lives as alleged participants in the Herrin massacre of June 22, when 20 employes of the Lester strip mine were killed or so maimed that they afterward died.

This Judge Hartwell is another incongruous incident in a chapter of incongruities. Although from first to last, as prosecutor and Judge, he has played a large part in the court life of turbulent Williamson, he does not seem to belong. He is not the type one expects on the bench of the lower tier of counties. He is young, as Judges go, 42, but looks much younger. Under a loitering manner and occasional absent-mindedness is an alertness at first not suspected and a legal acumen seasoned with common sense. His immaculacy gives the courtroom its one sartorial accent.

His maxim seems to be that the bench was made for the Judge and not the Judge for the bench. He does not sit upon it as upon a throne, above and apart. Half of the time he doesn't sit upon it at all. If utterance is required of him, he prefers to make it standing on one leg, with the other well elevated upon anything handy. If nothing in particular is required of him, for the time being, in the way of passing upon a challenge or mediating the lawyers' disputes, he may be found down at the railing telling a story to the reporters and prisoners or outside smoking a cigarette.

Judge Calls Citizenry by First Names

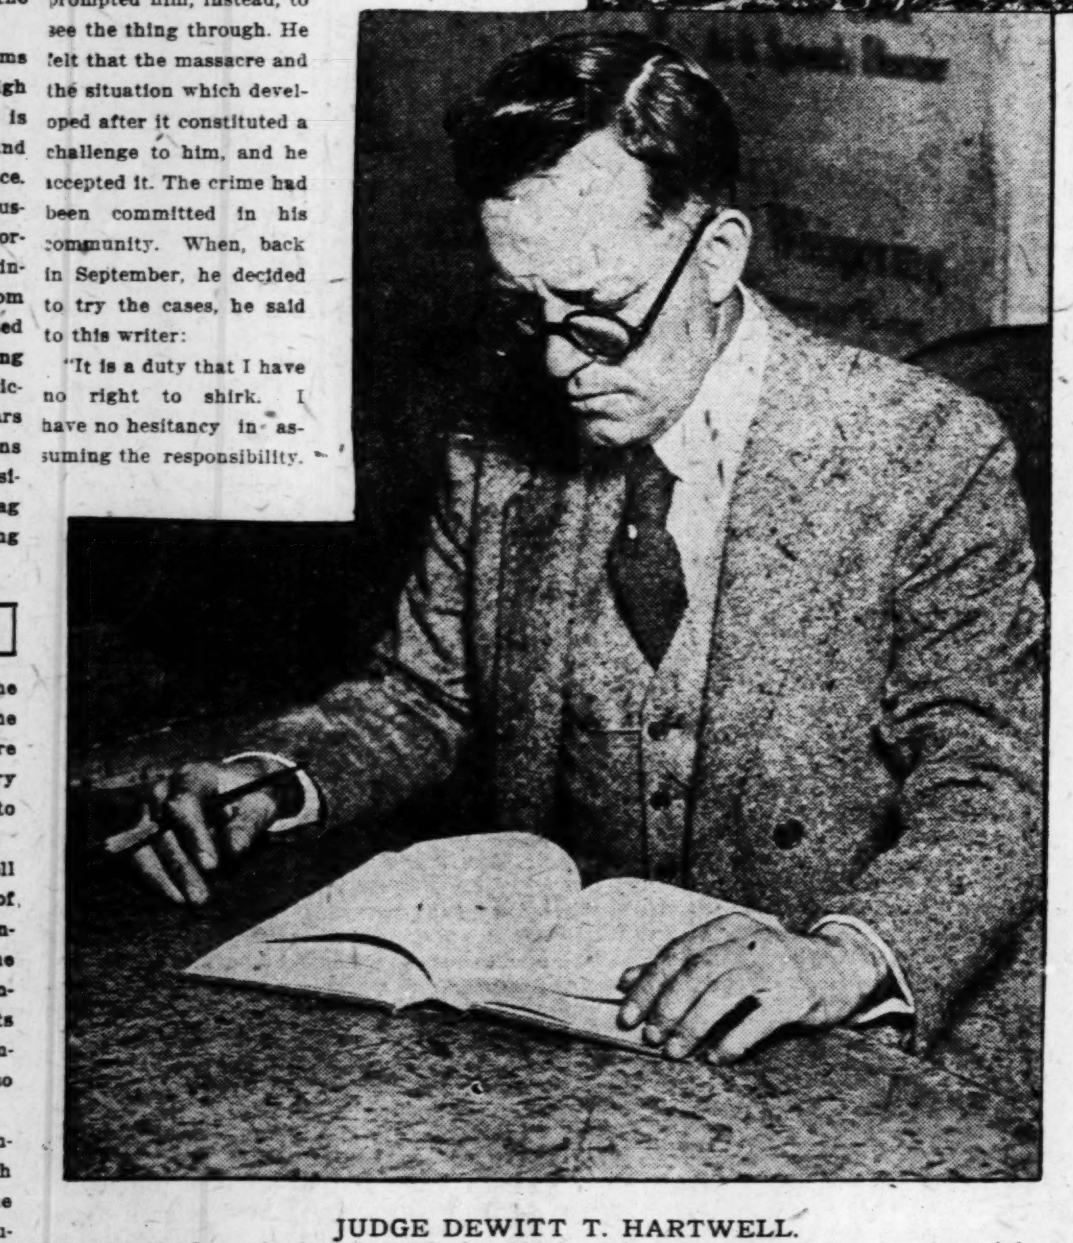
He "Jims" and "Johns" the citizenry from the bench, as the fashion is, and is fatherly with men old enough to be his father who seek indulgence. Most of the lawyers are older than he, but when, in chambers, they fulminate over disputed points, he pacifies them by calling them "boys" and expressing a willingness to sanction what "you fellows" agree upon.

It was expected, following the return of the indictments, that a separate riot court would be constituted and that Judge Hartwell would call in another Judge from another county to sit. It was somehow felt that this would be the tactful thing to do, inasmuch as the thing had happened in his county, with everybody outside Williamson County looking upon the officials of the county with distrust and harboring the idea that every man in politics was after the miners' vote, and all that.

It is a fact, too, that a good many of the people of the county who wanted the Herrin murderers punished hoped that he would not try the cases, and the miners generally hoped that he would.

But all of the things which others thought should prompt Judge Hartwell to abdicate prompted him, instead, to see the thing through. He felt that the massacre and the situation which developed after it constituted a challenge to him, and he accepted it. The crime had been committed in his community. When, back in September, he decided to try the cases, he said to this writer:

"It is a duty that I have no right to shirk. I have no hesitancy in assuming the responsibility. and will do my full duty. There is no reason for me to avoid trying them. I do not fear physical consequences, and I want nothing in politics. I would be greatly better off if I had never entered politics."



JUDGE DEWITT T. HARTWELL.
Photographed on the bench at Marion, during a session of the Herrin riot trial.

Judge Sees His Duty and Does It

It may be that he was not oblivious to the nation-wide attention which would be centered upon the trials. He does not expect to come through it all without criticism, but he has pride of name and pride of family, and it is unlikely that he would count as gain any advantage that might accrue from his rulings in the case, at the cost of hurt to these.

It was as Prosecutor, before he became Judge, that he impressed himself upon his county. His father, L. D. Hartwell, was Prosecutor before him. He assisted his father when the senior Hartwell was State's Attorney. From 1903 to 1907 he was City Attorney. Marion was then a mecca for gamblers. He prosecuted 111 of them and broke up the gambling ring.

In the seven years, from 1908 to 1915, that he was State's Attorney, he tried 8000 cases and sent 450 men to prison. He prosecuted liquor violators under the local option law and obtained convictions, but Judges let them off with small fines. He resigned in 1915 to take the judgeship for an unexpired term, and has been Judge ever since. He fined liquor violators $1500 to $3000 and saw that the fines were paid, and sent them to jail for four, five and six months.

In presiding he cares little for petty precedents or ceremonials. A rap of the knuckles and "give us order in the court" take the place of the ancient and honorable "Oyez, Oyez, Oyez." He likes to grapple with legal intricacies, and sometimes takes a good deal of time revealing, by monologue, the processes by which he arrives at a "sustained" or "overruled." But he is particular to keep his record straight, and in the absence of a stenographer sometimes stops the machinery while he painstakingly makes an entry. He has an aversion to the written form, and his findings are always verbal.

Counsel Put Feet On Tables

Court decorum permits feet on council tables and the reading of newspapers and trials of expectoration markmanship, with ancient metal cuspidors as targets. The loose tops of these crash and rattle prodigiously when the receptacles are kicked by meandering feet.

As the Judge, becoming restive under the droning of the lawyers, starts to leave the bench for a little visit with the reporters he inadvertently kicks his own particular cuspidor and condemns it in the vernacular.

Something reminds him of the time that he was defending a bunch of miners who were charged with boycotting a butcher. They were "as guilty as hell," he confides, having duly and properly adopted a resolution at a meeting, but the only way the accused could be convicted was with the testimony of others at the meeting who were not accused. So he got them all together at his office and instructed the witnesses how to plead their constitutional privileges.

The trial came on and the witnesses refused to answer on the ground that it would tend to incriminate them. One of them forgot his little speech but he had the main idea and explained that he couldn't testify against the accused because they had all got together in Hartwell's office and agreed not to tell on each other and claimed privilege under the constitution and bylaws of the miners' union.

The five prisoners, keen for diversion to relieve the monotony, joined in the laugh, but when the Judge says to Bert Grace, one of them:

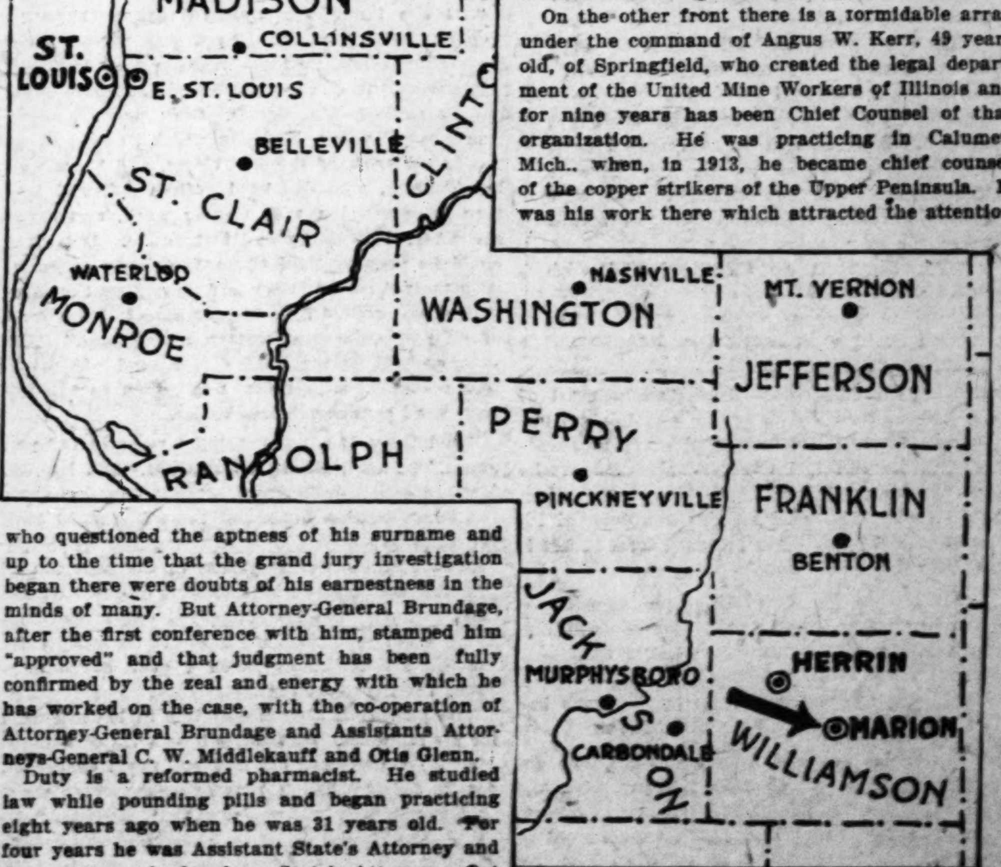
"Weren't you in that bunch, Bert," he denies that he was in that scrape.

The Judge goes back to the bench but he is down presently asking a reporter for a cigarette and taking two from the proffered pack and going outside for a little smoke and a little cogitation.

His familiars call him "Dee."

The forces of the people are led by Delos Leon Duty, A. P., which means Able Prosecutor, State's Attorney of Williamson County. The A. P. degree is conferred by people of discriminating judgment whether they agree with him in all things or not. When the massacre occurred there were not wanting ironical persons who questioned the aptness of his surname and up to the time that the grand jury investigation began there were doubts of his earnestness in the minds of many. But Attorney-General Brundage, after the first conference with him, stamped him "approved" and that judgment has been fully confirmed by the zeal and energy with which he has worked on the case, with the co-operation of Attorney-General Brundage and Assistants Attorneys-General C. W. Middlekauff and Otis Glenn.

Map Showing Relation of Scene of Mine Riot Trials to St. Louis



Duty is a reformed pharmacist. He studied law while pounding pills and began practicing eight years ago when he was 31 years old. For four years he was Assistant State's Attorney and for two years he has been State's Attorney. Out of 180 felony cases that he has prosecuted he has lost only four.

He is tall and slim, unmarried, partly bald. He sits in court with his chair tilted, even teetering, as he fires questions at veniremen in a tense, high pitched voice. He speaks in the vocabulary of the law, reeling off sentences of prodigious length and parenthetical involutions but so flawlessly that an untutored venireman can, with becoming brevity, answer yes or no and not err therein. They say he is chain lightning at cross examination, but that is yet to come.

Attorney-General Brundage has not attended the jury picking, but he is represented by Assistant Attorney-General Middlekauff, back of Duty's machine gun with his heavy artillery, ready for the opening of the real battle. Middlekauff has taken only an advisory part in the jury picking, but he will bring to the trial of the case a highly specialized experience in riot prosecutions. For six years, as head of the Illinois law enforcement department, he handled all riot cases, including the East St. Louis race riots in 1917, the Prager lynching at Collinsville in 1918 and the Chicago race riots in 1919. He is 55 years old and has been practicing 31 years. Singularly, except for his law enforcement activities, his practice has always been civil.

At the time of the Herrin atrocity, he was Assistant United States District Attorney. Brundage borrowed him. He moved his family to Marion and set up housekeeping and has been there ever since.

And here is Otis F. Glenn of Murphysboro, State Senator and Assistant Attorney-General, mentioned as a gubernatorial probability, helping Duty question veniremen and whose heavy guns will stand wheel to wheel with Middlekauff's later on. In practice since 1902 and twice State's Attorney of Jackson County.

In the case also are Duty's assistants, Ray Henson and George T. Carter.

On the other front there is a formidable array under the command of Angus W. Kerr, 49 years old, of Springfield, who created the legal department of the United Mine Workers of Illinois and for nine years has been Chief Counsel of that organization. He was practicing in Calumet, Mich., when, in 1913, he became chief counsel of the copper strikers of the Upper Peninsula. It was his work there which attracted the attention of the United Mine Workers and led to his being asked to come to Illinois. In Michigan he was an assistant prosecutor six years and a prosecutor four years and was in the Legislature and on the State Tax Commission.

Kerr has been content to have the jury-picking done by local men, like Rufus Neely and George B. White, who know their people, and has been content to sit back and advise, along with George R. Stone and A. C. Lewis and R. T. Cook and William P. Seeber, and that's about all.

In the amenities of the counsel table, Kerr "Brothers" the gentlemen on the other side, but when his voice is raised in argument over disputed points in the game of jury getting it quickly becomes strident. It is obviously an effect of temperament, but it is the sort of thing, too, that his clientele likes.

Back of these lawyers sit five men charged with murder. Back of the five men are the United Mine Workers of Illinois, says Frank Farrington, their leader.

The prosecution is in the name of The People of the State of Illinois.

SPECIMEN OF REPARTEE BETWEEN SPECTATORS AND LAWYERS

MARION, Ill., Nov. 25.

THE lawyers in the Herrin massacre case were ding-donging the talesmen and trying to find out if they had opinions and if so why so, when an old residenter ambled in to get an earful for the town forum, in continuous session on the sunny side of the Court House.

He crowded into the front row, where he could hear very well, but he was not happy. He was chewing a generous quid and signs on the walls admonished him to respect the floor.

It came to a pass at last that he had to either spit or choke or get out.

Judge Rufus Neely, Lincolnesque jury picker for the defense, had straightened from a jackknife posture and was walking around to get the kinks out of his long legs.

"Hey, Jedge," called the old residenter, enunciating at the risk of drowning, "reach me a spittoon."

Judge Neely's motto is "We strive to please." He pushed two or three lawyers out of the way, retrieved one of the heavy metal cuspidors with a loose jangling cover and hoisted it over the heads of the prisoners and reporters to the nearly submerged citizen, who expectorated after the frank and free fashion of the town philosophers, came up for air and gurgled, "Thank ye, Jedge."

"I don't mind doing it for you this time," said Neely, "but don't get the idea that I'm working for you regular."

"Ain't I been keeping ye up for 25 year?" piped the patriarch.

"All right," said the Judge by way of ending the repartee, "let's let it drop."

"Drapped she be, Jedge," said the old settler as he spat with fine precision at the old cuspidor and composed himself for an hour's solid enjoyment.

Blind and Paralyzed for 28 Years, "Shut-In" Says Post-Dispatch Radio Has Brought the World to Him Again

Samuel L. Peckham listening to musical selections in his room that are being broadcast from the Post-Dispatch radio studio.
—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

Samuel L. Peckham Tells of the Recent Enjoyment of Music and Lectures Which Had Been Denied to Him Since His Great Affliction Began—Renews His Interest in Life.

A MESSAGE of gratitude in behalf of the army of shut-ins who, made prisoners in their rooms by illness or physical disability, now find a new world of art and cultural association opened to them through the Radio Broadcasting Service of the Post-Dispatch, is that of Samuel L. Peckham of 5635 Waterman avenue, who for the last 28 years has been confined to his home, helplessly paralyzed below the waist, and blind.

"You who are physically sound and active," he was saying as he sat in his reclining chair in the family apartment where he resides with his wife and nurse—"you who never have been forced to lie, year in and year out, shut off from the scenes of your former activities, can never understand the feeling of us whose only contact with the world has been within our rooms or from our windows.

"You cannot then realize what it has meant to us, the shut-ins, to have that world we used to know brought to our bedside as radio now makes it possible to do. The addresses of intelligent speakers, the excellent concerts of our Symphony Orchestra and the musical programs such as those arranged and broadcast by the Post-Dispatch—all this has opened to us a veritable paradise on earth. It gives us something to think about, to live on and look forward to when otherwise our lot would seem too hard to bear.

Soothing Pain of Sufferers.

"Truly," he continued, "this radio achievement is something to marvel at. They tell me it is the little wire running to the top of my roof that makes this possible and that it is the waves in the ether that carry voices over wide reaches of space. All that may be true, but there is something bigger and grander than that in radio. It is like the hand of a divinity soothing the pain of a suffering humanity. Why, I can sit here and hear voices singing or speaking first in Pittsburg, then in Schenectady, than in Atlanta—all in addition to those in our own city. They seem so near they make me forget that I am an invalid and that I mingled with the world and saw human faces for the last time some 30 years ago. Is not that something to marvel at?

"In my younger days I could see, walk and run and work with the best of you, but we could hear only what we were near to, then. So, you see, even with affliction have come improvements over the old order of things. Now from our easy chairs and firesides we can hear every word of an address in New York; we can hear the steps of the dancers when our municipal opera is broadcast, and we can feel the very presence of the singers. You can't get much closer to life than that. The talking machine was a wonderful invention and we had much pleasure from it, but it can't compare with radio."

Mr. Peckham's Letter That Resulted in This Interview

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The wee small voice within forces me to express to you and your associates what the Post-Dispatch Radio Service is doing for humanity. The writer, for many years physically unable to leave his room, and thus cut off from music, eloquence and cultural contacts with the world, now has the world brought in to him by the splendid public spirit of the Post-Dispatch. His isolation is ended. Scholarship brings its message to him; sweet music cheers and thrills; great voices speak and sing. Sir, you have changed a purgatory of pain and isolation into something like a heaven upon earth.

Brought up in the City of Boston, which is famed for its culture and love of music, from whose inspiration I have for long been separated, can you imagine the joy to one like myself to listen to your transmission of our Symphony Concert, with its magnificent orchestration, its superb artistry, its perfection of technique—all guided by a master hand? And all this and many other pleasures to which to look forward in the future, brought about by the broad visioned and unselfish service to humanity of your great newspaper. These are the things that force me to express my gratitude to an institution that is making many sad hearts happy, and many stricken lives again worth living.

May your paper and all connected with it be blessed with unlimited success in every department of its social and commercial enterprise. Were you to build an aerial high enough to correspond with the thankful prayers of the unfortunates like myself who are living in the new earthly paradise created by you, it would reach the very skies.

With heartfelt appreciation, and with many, many thanks, I am

Sincerely yours,
Samuel L. Peckham.

Here the speaker paused to assure himself that his visitors were comfortable. He is frail and emaciated from his long illness, but strikingly cheerful withal and frequently disposed to jest.

Could the reporter help him back to the bed from his chair? No sir, not for a minute.

"I never let anybody help me about," he declared. "I have got to keep fighting. It's the best way to keep alive. They told me 30 years ago that I could not live, but I have served as honorary pallbearer for a lot of them and I'm still here. I was 68 last week, too, but everybody tells me I don't look that old. I want to live until I can hear from every country in the world with my radio set. At the present rate of progress that time will not be far off. Why, I'm expecting to tune in on Africa any day now."

A native of Boston, Mr. Peckham came to St. Louis 38 years ago and engaged in business as manager of Sonnenfeld's Apparel Co. He acquired a wide acquaintance among business and professional men in the city and although illness has kept him a prisoner since 1894, he has not lost interest in business affairs or his old business associates and he inquires about them affectionately.

"My friends have all been good to me," he continued. "They call me up, come to visit me frequently and read to me. How I enjoy that. I was having Clemenceau's speech read to me when you came in. You see, I was brought up in an atmosphere of culture, was trained in music and took great delight in educational affairs and the classics. I missed these things sorely when illness made me a shut-in. My friends made it easier for me. They came often and brought musicians to play and sing for me. I don't know how I would have lived without them, but, after all, all they could do was not like this radio. It is not like having my receiving set at my side, where I can hear every day the thoughts and the very pulsation of the world outside. No," he corrected himself, "it is not outside any more, but it is only since the transmission of sound by radio became possible that life has seemed like it did in former years."

Just Can't Learn to Like Jazz.

What sort of program did he like best? Well, he liked variety.

"All are interesting to me because they are company," he said. "But you ask what I like best—then I like best the addresses of brilliant men who tell us of world problems and guide us in our thoughts and activities. Only recently there was a talk by Gov. Hyde, in which he told us of the grand work of the Red Cross, and there was Dr. Taussig, who delivered such a splendid lecture in connection with Cancer week, and there are others interesting and instructive. But what could be grander than those Symphony concerts, with their superb artistry and magnificent orchestration, all guided by a master hand? I am fond of all music, for that matter, except jazz." The speaker held up his hand and winced. "That is terrible stuff. You know I got used to the fox trot, but I cannot get used to jazz.

"And there is another thing I want to tell you about," he said, sitting up straight, then leaning forward in his enthusiasm. "That minstrel show the Post-Dispatch broadcast the other night took the cake."

(The speaker was referring to the program of minstrel songs given by members of the Kiwanis Club recently and broadcast from the Post-Dispatch studio.) "I wish you could have seen me laugh. I don't know when I ever heard anything funnier than that."

The patient is almost childlike in his affection for his radio set. He fondles it as a lad of 5 might cling to a cherished top and was much concerned for its safety when it became necessary to move it a few inches. "If you break it," he said, half-seriously, "I will have to kick you, crippled as I am.

"I hope you will tell all invalids who are prisoners like myself what they are missing if they don't have radio sets," he continued. "For us who have them I can only say that if you build an aerial great enough to correspond with our thankful prayers it will reach to heaven.

"Don't forget that I am going to hear from Africa pretty soon," he called in parting.

That the radio programs of the Post-Dispatch are rendering a service to many others is evidenced by a letter from Dr. Leon Harrison. It is one of many hundreds of letters received weekly in appreciation of this service. An extract from Dr. Harrison's letter follows:

"I imagine, Mr. Editor, that there are many thousands of unfortunate individuals shut in like Mr. Peckham, with radio sets, whose warm feelings of gratitude find a voice through his former letter. It acknowledges an invaluable public service that your newspaper is evidently rendering to humanity by bringing, as Mr. Peckham says, the voices both of eloquence and song into darkened homes and stricken lives."

Foster Parents' Love Much Outweighs Grandma's Million, Court Decides

TWO LITTLE GIRLS GIVEN TO MOTHER'S DEAREST FRIENDS

In This Twentieth Century Fairy Tale, Justice Decides No Riches Can Compensate for Joyous Home Life of Two Children, Though It Means Great Financial Loss to Them—Perfectly Happy Where They Are and Would Not Be if Changed.

By Elizabeth Houghton.
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

FANWOOD, N. J., Nov. 25.

THE story of the two little Holliday girls, Millicent and Marion, aged 7 and 9, and the stern grandmother who wanted to take them away from their adoring foster-parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Sherwood, in Fanwood, N. J., to live cooped up in a flat in Brooklyn, is a twentieth-century fairy tale, with the happiest of happy endings.

Judge Mitchell May of the Kings County Court plays the role of fairy godfather who, of course, in all fairy stories, represents the powers of good. By a deeply human decision made after hearing both sides of the case and personally observing the people involved, he decided that the children should grow up with the dearest friends of their dead parents rather than with Mrs. Susie Church Holliday of 354 Ocean avenue, Brooklyn, their grandmother. She is rich and promised to give them "part" of her estate when she died. But Judge May said that he considered this far less important than their immediate happiness.

Ever since the children's mother died in April, 1921, Mrs. Holliday Sr. has been trying to get custody of the little ones, said Mr. Sherwood the other day. But was it because of a heart long starved of the maternal instinct or was it merely to assert her legal rights? This was the question Judge May had to decide.

12 Years Without Word to Son

The grandmother, he found, had never spoken to her son or his wife since their marriage, 12 years ago. Hard and unforgiving, because she considered it a mesalliance, Mrs. Holliday had never once written to her grandchildren or sent them the little presents at Christmas and birthdays that grandmothers usually love to wrap up and post to children. Her son died. At the same time her daughter-in-law took influenza in the 1918 epidemic and was left with lung trouble. Still no word from the grandmother, living alone with her riches and her memories.

When the mother of the two little girls found that she must go off to Florida in search of health she took Marion and Millicent to her friends, the Sherwoods, who lived near, and begged them to take care of her children. She did not know if she would ever see them again, but she was happy in the thought that they would have tender care. And Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood, who had one son but never any daughters, became devoted to the delicate, fairy-like little creatures who had come to them.

Three years later the young mother died far away. When her will was opened it was found she had "willed" her children, together with the income of $10,000 for their maintenance, to the kind friends who had already sheltered them half of their lives.

The day after the funeral the grandmother broke her frozen silence. She sent a messenger to the house in Fanwood, N. J., to demand custody of the children. And the children cried and begged to stay with the Sherwoods. Not long after, Mr. Sherwood relates, he was approached in his place of business in the coldest manner in the world, and when he refused to give up the sacred trust which was dedicated to him he was insulted. After that the legal proceedings began.

Dramatic Scene in Court

This is the story up to the time the briefs came to Judge May. He refused to decide without seeing the contestants.

It was a dramatic moment when the children, clinging to the hand of Mrs. Sherwood, timid and fearful of the new surroundings, were brought into court and faced the grandmother they had never seen. Each side gave testimony, and not the least important part of it, said Judge May's decision, was the children's strongly apparent devotion to their foster-parents.

In treating of the grandmother's offer to give them part of her money when she died, Judge May said: "No amount of inquiry would induce her to state what part of her estate would go to the children. I watched very carefully to note the little acts of omission or commission which might aid me in pushing aside the curtains of the past and forming a better estimate of the entire matter."

With rare insight and yet the strictest sense of justice, he continued:

"I did this the more particularly that I might not be unduly influenced by the human emotions which move us all, especially those of us who have children of our own."

MARION HOLLIDAY. MILLICENT HOLLIDAY.

The chance that death might again deprive them of their home and care did not escape, for he continued:

"It must be borne in mind the petitioner (Mrs. Holliday) is an old woman whose span of life is uncertain, who has had little to do with children for many years, whose demeanor indicates a person habitually determined, resolute, dominating, unsympathetic and self-satisfied, and whose general bearing lends itself to the impression that her action in this proceeding was the result not of the dictates of conscience, but of a desire to perform a duty, prompted perhaps by a wish to assert her legal rights.

Grandmother's Demeanor

"During the hearing she sat without so much as a glance at her grandchildren, her lips tightly compressed, her face stern and severe, betraying no sign of a smile of kindness or tenderness as these children moved playfully about. She remained as though ignorant of their presence.

"There is nothing in the past conduct of this petitioner to justify the assumption that she will throw around these children the atmosphere of affection and proper solicitude by which they are now surrounded. She has given no evidence of affection other than her mere say-so. That say-so has been counteracted by her conduct toward her son, with whom she had no relationship during the 12 years of his married life, by her unforgiving and unrelenting attitude after his death, leaving a widow and two children, and the widow not strong, and by her attitude of indifference to the children."

The minute a reporter went into the comfortable brown house by the roadside in Fanwood, where Marion and Millicent live, the Judge's remarks were easily understood. There was a big brown sofa with room for three, just right to curl up on while "mother" read aloud. A tall, brown-tweedish man in eyeglasses, with a very quiet voice, stood in front of the cozy open fire. This was Mr. Sherwood. The others were out for a walk.

And in They Came

On the piano lay a copy of the "Happy Farmer," the piece that every little girl who is beginning music learns to play by heart. Marion is very musical and is being given every opportunity to develop her talent.

"Their mother," began Mr. Sherwood, "was an extremely beautiful woman"—and at that in they came—two little, laughing, radiant creatures, all rosy from their afternoon out of doors. They wore blue silk dresses just alike and they had their bobbed hair curled for Sunday, just alike but, oh, so different.

Marion, the older, slim and graceful, with blue eyes and black lashes; Millicent, round and fat and never still, her white-stockinged legs tumbling about in a wonderful romp with mother, in a series of frantic efforts to turn handsprings on the carpet.

They do not have to "mind their p's and q's" in the dreadful way that children are sometimes made to do. "Manners are important," said this remarkable mother, "but just now we think a good time is the most important thing of all."

And so Millicent proudly displayed her play wrist watch brought from the Danbury fair, and Marion, a little more shy, told about "Peg," the wonderful cat they had, who used to jump on a chair and stop the pendulum of the clock with his paw and pull pins out of the pincushion with his teeth.

And then they all told about the glorious farm up at Westport, Conn., where they spend every summer, swimming and playing with animals.

"I can swim," said Marion proudly, "and I'm going to have a bicycle and learn to ride, too."

A Tiny Mermaid

Mr. Sherwood could not say enough about the splendid way the little girl had got the hang of swimming. "And doesn't she look like a little drowned rat when her hair is all plastered down and she's just come up from the bottom of the pond!" he teased her affectionately. "We have a tidewater pond with a gate, especially arranged to be perfectly safe for the children. Every summer my wife and I take them on motor trips, too. Last year we went up to Amherst, where my son is at college, over the beautiful Mohawk trail, and we all enjoyed it immensely."

What could a million dollars mean to such happy children as these?

"Mother, please read this." Millicent suddenly produced a book of fairy tales and turned the leaves busily from back to front, as though she were an old and experienced reader who didn't really need any assistance at all. She doesn't remember her mother.

But Marion does. When she heard that her grandmother wanted to take her away she cried dreadfully and used to have frightening dreams at night. "Oh, mother, what if the Judge should cut us in half, like Solomon in the Bible!" said Marion one night as she was being put to bed.

Mrs. Sherwood told how when the little girls came they had moved them into Raymond's room, next door to their own bedroom, building on another room further away for their own child, because he was older and better able to take care of himself.

Nothing is too much for the Sherwoods to do for the children who were willed to them. They are taken to the best doctors when they are ill and sent to the best school and given a party on every birthday and corrected when they speak bad English (but not too often). They have whole families of dolls and pretty dresses galore.

But, best of all, they are truly loved, and this is why Judge May ended his decision with the words:

"I am of the firm belief that the interests of the children will be best subserved by leaving them in the custody of the respondents (Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood)."

Thus ends the story of "two little girls who gave up a million dollars and lived happily on the income from $10,000 ever after."

LIGHTS AND SHADOWS IN LIFE OF OLDEST SOCIAL WORKER HERE

killed themselves off. I think alcoholic liquor should be treated, not as a beverage, but as a drug.

The narcotic act is being enforced. Why can't the liquor act be enforced as well? It will be in time. I remember the day when it was possible for children to go to the drug store and get morphine.

I have failed to convey an impression of Mrs. Owens' personality if I have not given in these lines some indication of a saving sense of humor that has survived in her in spite of her contacts with the seamy side of life. All her sympathy with the poor, all the pulls upon her heartstrings, have not unduly weakened her in a physical sense nor daunted her in spirit. She is a lively, sprightly little body, with a quick, crisp manner of speaking. She really would give you the impression that she has got a lot of fun out of her mission. In the immediate neighborhood of the Center she has many colored friends.

" 'An old black woman met me on the street,' she related, 'and threw her arms around me, almost taking me off my feet. 'Great whiz!' I said, 'What do you mean, Mandy, making such an exhibition out here where everybody can see you?' 'It's because I love you so,' she said. 'And there's sompin' I been wantin' to ask you, Mis' Owens. We are both gettin' nigh to the pearly gates. I want to know, if you git thar first, won't you kinda wait around a little while and help me to git in?' 'No, I won't promise you that,' said I. 'You go on praying and being good and helping yourself to get in.' 'Well,' she said, 'if I git that first I'se a gonna wait around for you.' 'Do as you like about that,' I said, 'but I'm not going to depend entirely upon you.'

Only a few days ago I heard she was dying and I went to see her. Her old head looked so black against the snowy pillow. 'Mandy,' I said, 'Are you almost home?' 'I'se almost thar,' she replied. 'Will you wait around the gate for me a little while?' I asked, and she replied very faintly, 'I'll wait for you. I'll help you git in.' "

bers must be settled inside the exchange. To seek escape by going outside, till this one instance, has constituted the unspeakable offense of 'welching' on an adverse contract. In my eyes it still is just that, and it is welching aided and abetted by the very governing body which had always been the first to frown on the mere suspicion of it."

The oldest of the children of Thomas F. Ryan is John Barry Ryan, of whom little is heard in financial circles. There was an older brother, William, who died in 1906. Another brother, Joseph, died within the last three years, leaving the bulk of his estate to a young woman and to a widow who immediately entered upon a contest.

Those who know the family well say that Allan inherited much of his father's financial genius as well as many of his physcal characteristics. Of the former there is little question and there are excellent grounds for believing that he inherited much of his sire's bluntness of disposition and determination. At one period, early in Allan Ryan's career as a business man, the impression prevailed that he was his father's favorite son, but when the elder Ryan remarried in 1917 within a comparatively short time after the death of his first wife a difference arose between father and son which attained a great deal of publicity.

To what extent the breach has since been healed is a family secret now in which few friends have shared. But there have been rumors that so great was the elder Ryan's private pride in his son's ability as a financier he was willing to help him when the crash came, and while not going the whole length in protecting him and setting him on his financial feet again, he at least kept an eye out for the boy and saw that his enemies did not quite devour him to the last shred. This he did in part, so the Wall street story goes, by buying in his son's Stutz stock when he finally had to let go of his corner. It probably also accounts for the fact that Schwab, Untermeyer and Du Pont, large unsecured creditors, presented no claims against Allan. All are friends of Thomas F. Ryan.

In the present scheme for recovery no sign of the hand of Thomas Fortune Ryan has so far been discernible. There are those in the Wall street district who assert that Allen Ryan has worked out his own plans and is about to go it alone again

One must wait to know the inside story of that. As Allan Ryan was tight-lipped about his business affairs, so is he most guarded in all his conversations regarding family matters. His open letters at the time of his father's second marriage were doubly remarkable because they constituted a violation of a rule he had observed regarding his family all his life.

Where a man has so few intimate friends as Allan Ryan, it is difficult

LESS MEAT IF KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a Glass of Salts If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Troubles You

No man or woman who eats too much meat can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Big meat eating may develop uric acid, which excites the kidneys; they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood; then we get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleepiness and bladder disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys, or your back hurts, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, and in a few days your kidneys may act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys; also to neutralize the acids so they no longer cause irritation, thus often ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications.

WASHING WON'T RID HEAD OF DANDRUFF

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store and it never fails to do the work.

Better Than Calomel

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Are a Harmless Substitute.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive-colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "logy" and "heavy." They "clear" clouded brain and "pep up" the spirits. 15c and 30c.

ALLAN RYAN, WHO OWED $32,000,000, BACK ON HIS FEET

to obtain confirmation of rumors which have their origin in the street, though it must be said that whenever the "street" circulates a rumor about an important personage as assiduously as it has passed around the story that Allan Ryan was having the quiet backing of his father in the present rehabilitation, there are generally grounds for accepting it. In no other way can the "street" explain the mystery of Allan's quick financial recovery.

Among those who knew him well, Allan Ryan is called most democratic. Those who don't know him so well, or rather those whom he does not permit to know him well, call him brusque and arrogant. However, there is a small coterie of friends who swear by him and refer with affection to his simple tastes and habits.

He is not a sportsman in the accepted sense of the term. He owns a yacht, and that is about the extent to which he has ever gone in on the amusements usually associated with wealthy New Yorkers.

If he ever has had a hobby it has been aviation. He was one of the founders of the Aeronautical Club of America 10 years ago, and was an officer of the organization. He was the main financial backer and promoter of the first aero meeting in this country, one held at the Belmont Park racetrack in the summer of 1911. His three children are Virginia, Theodore and Allan Jr.

THE INSTRUMENT OF QUALITY

Sonora

CLEAR AS A BELL

The Imperial $150

Over a Half Million in Use

THE greatest proof of Sonora's value is its popularity, but back of that popularity is the Sonora tone which has revolutionized phonograph history.

Such exceptional clarity and charm of reproduction early won the applause of musical leaders. Then one by one a vast public listened, became convinced, and desired to own "the Highest Class Talking Machine in the World". Between the Sonora model that is exactly suited to your needs, and an inferior machine, there may be no difference in price. The difference in satisfaction, in pride of possession, in purity and fineness of tone is incalculable. Sonora's loyalty to an ideal has won the public's loyalty to Sonora. It is worth your while to hear the new Sonora models.

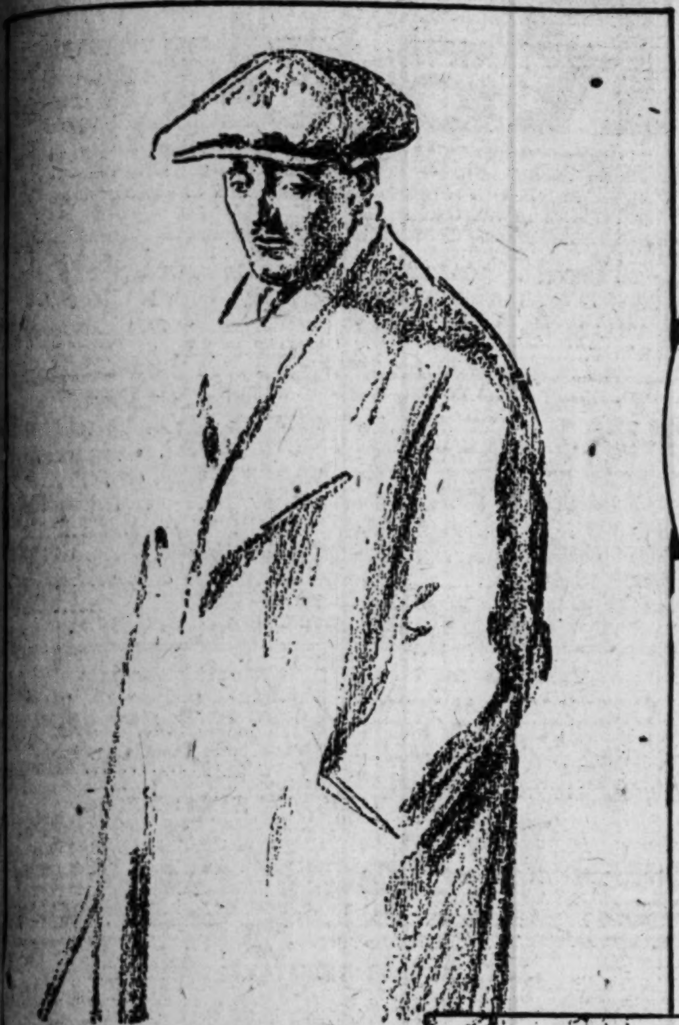
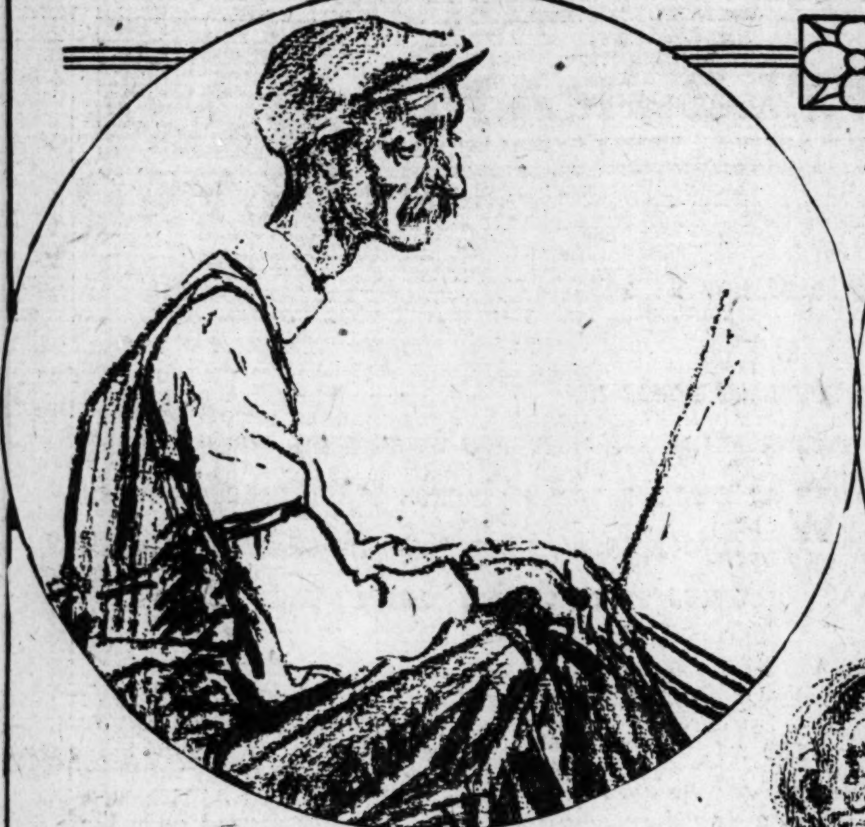
THE BIG OUTDOORS

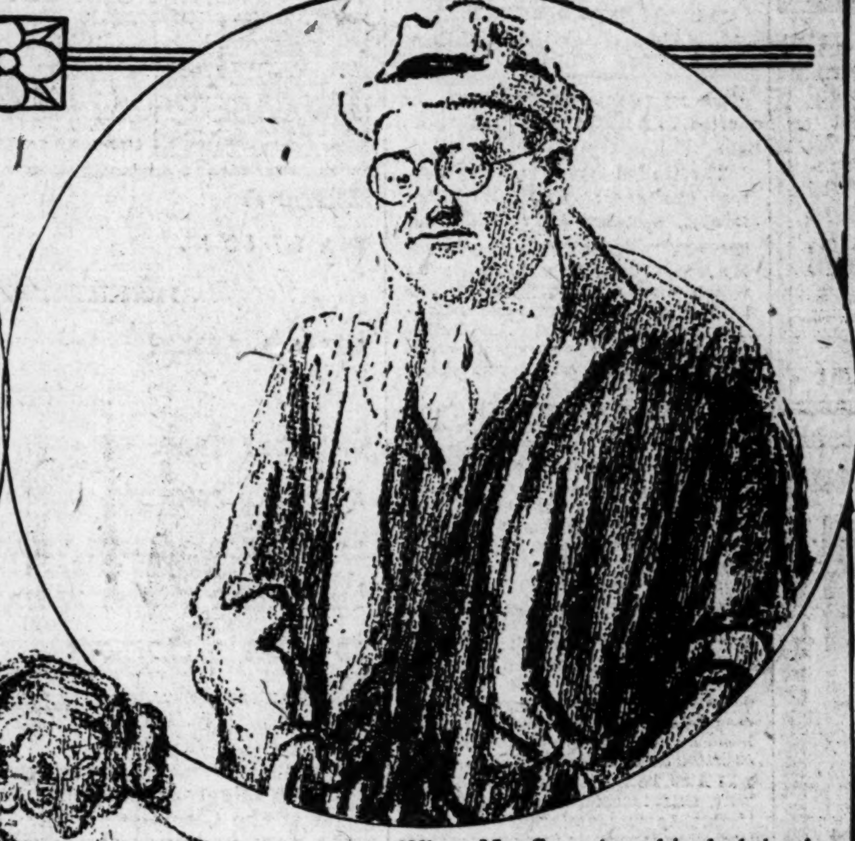
By W. E. Hill



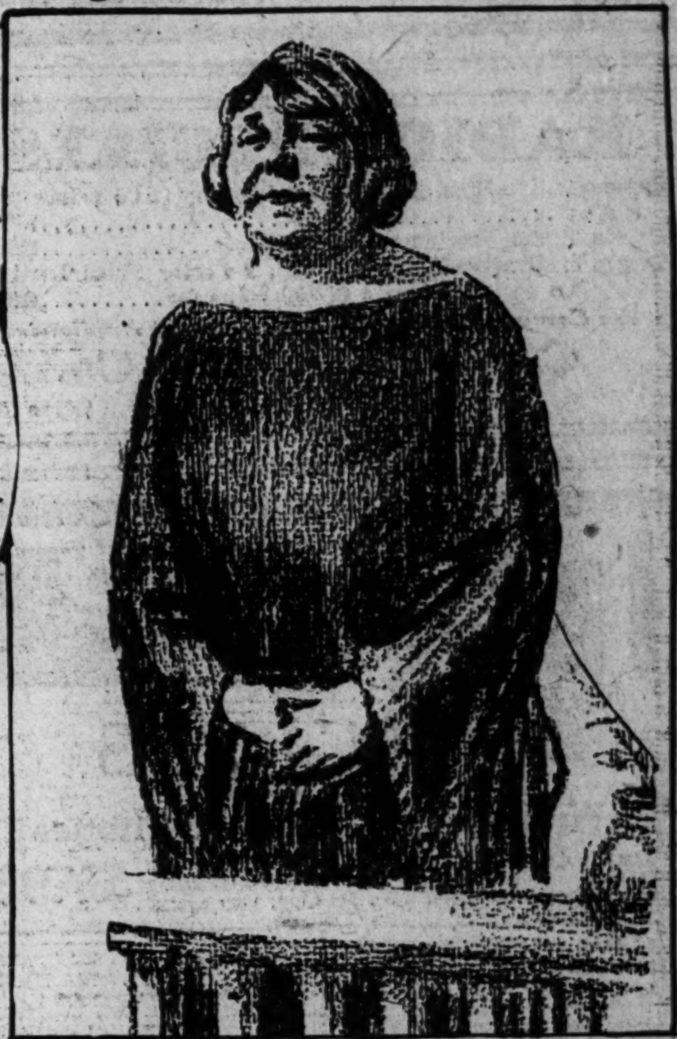
Isn't nature just WONDERFUL? When you stop to think of all it means to the budding poet—and what it's done for him. The day of the spring poet is past, however, so if your idea of a regular poet is one who skips over the greensward singing about April showers and May flowers, you may as well turn right around and go home. The 1922 model poet doesn't waste any kind words on spring—or summer either. He takes on something like this: "Oh, let me forget the pangs of your terrible beauty, oh, fierce June, and you, too, vile August, oversexed and rotting wickedly. Let me rather seek shelter of cool November. Oh, lead me to the slaughter, sweet autumnal death—and the ever dreamless sleep." Of course, it should be spaced differently, but this is the gist of it.



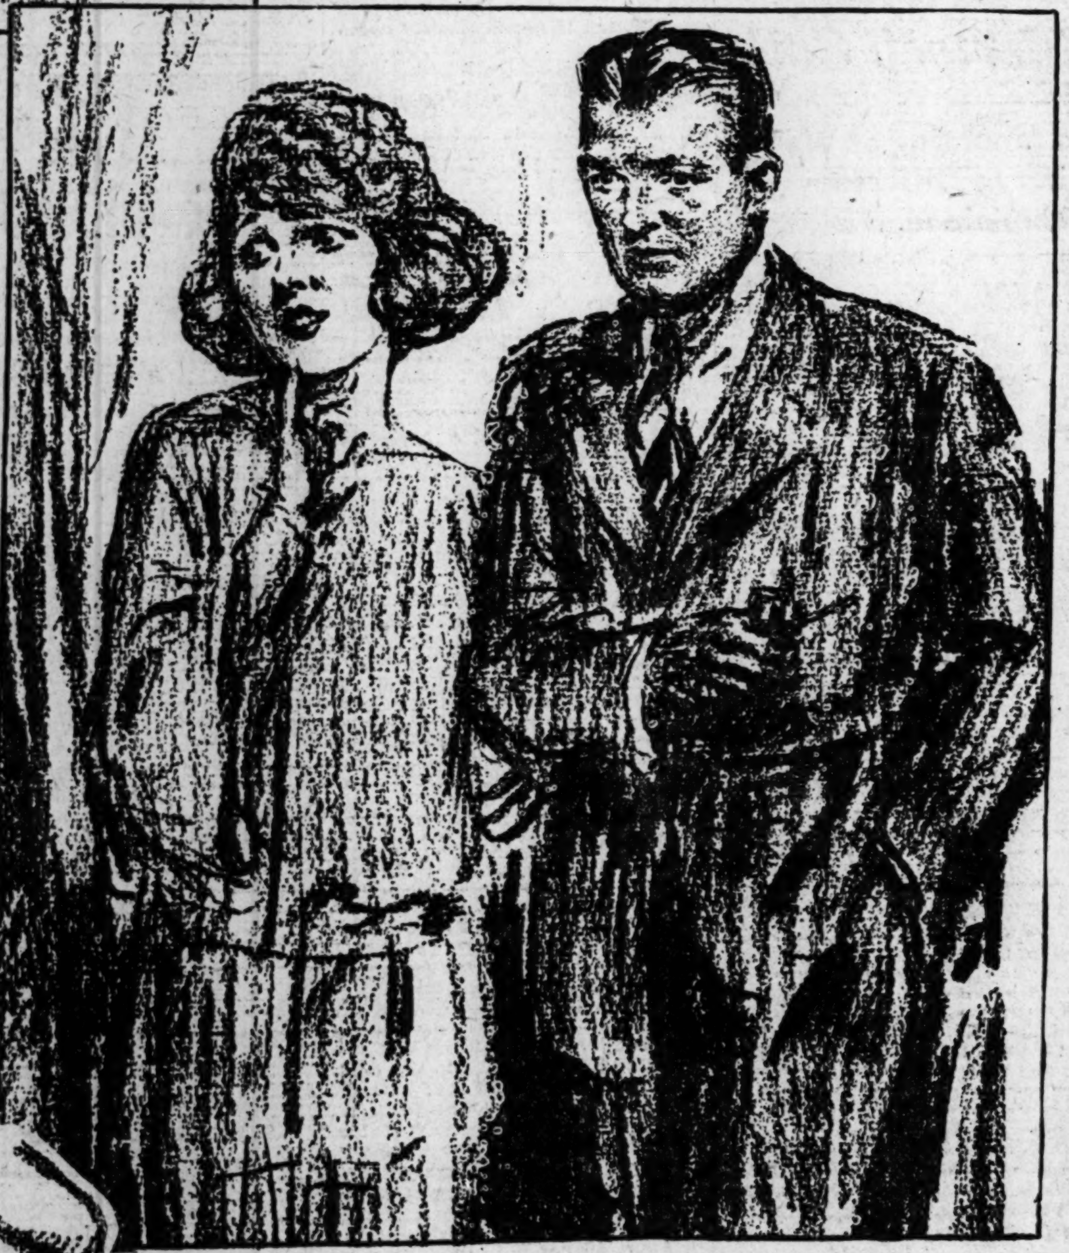
"Out in the big outdoors, where life is free, and men are men, with hearts of oak and arms of brawn," so the scenario writer put it. Well, maybe so, but too often they are built more on the order of Hi Peebles, shown here, en route to the east meadow with a load of fertilizer.



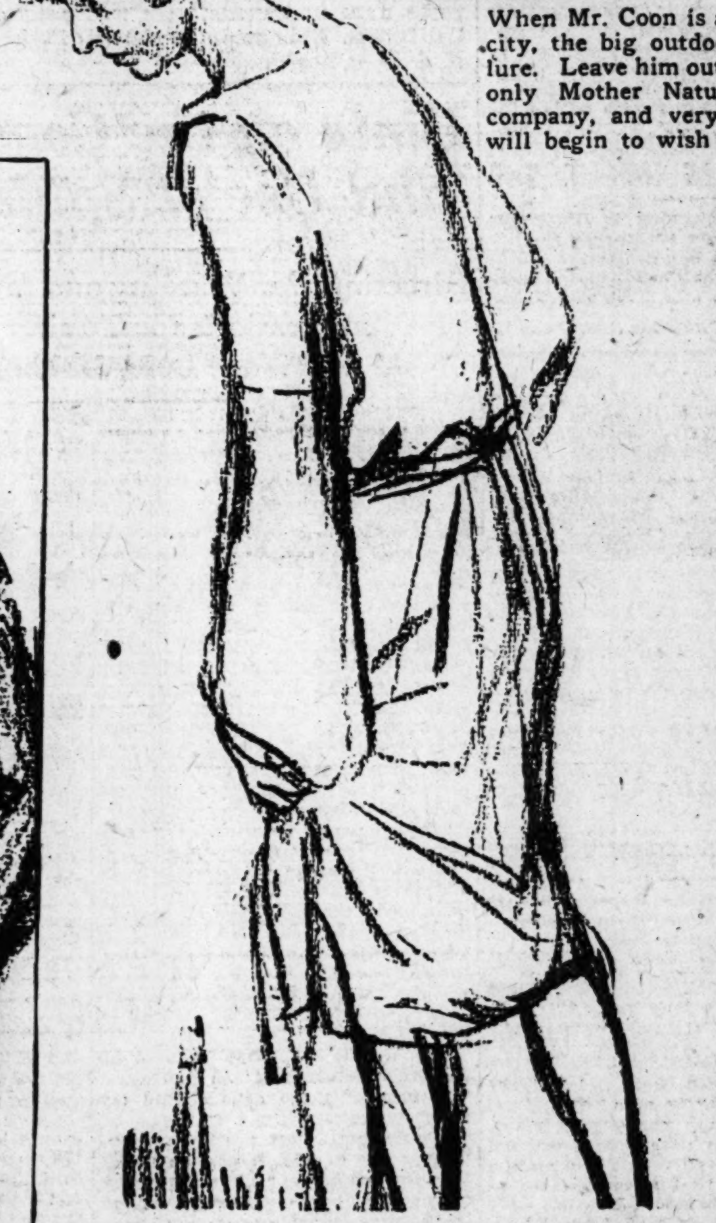
When Mr. Coon is at his desk in the city, the big outdoors has an awful lure. Leave him out in the open with only Mother Nature to keep him company, and very soon Mr. Coon will begin to wish for the city.



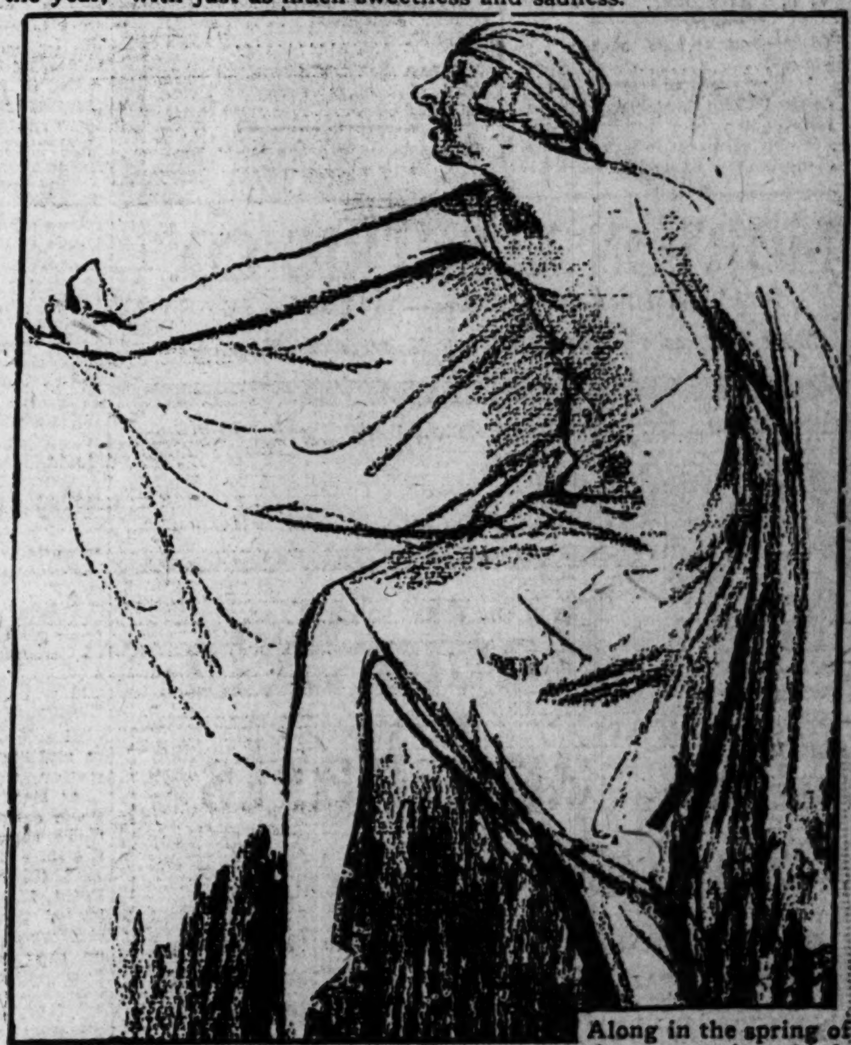
The gentle feminine touch. The sentimental lady who loves the big outdoors is very fond of quoting something apropos of the season. If it's early summer, or even as late as the twentieth of July, she will murmur, "Oh, what is so rare as a day in June," sweetly and sadly. But if it's any other month of the year, say up to the middle of April, she will announce that "Now come the melancholy days, the saddest of all the year," with just as much sweetness and sadness.



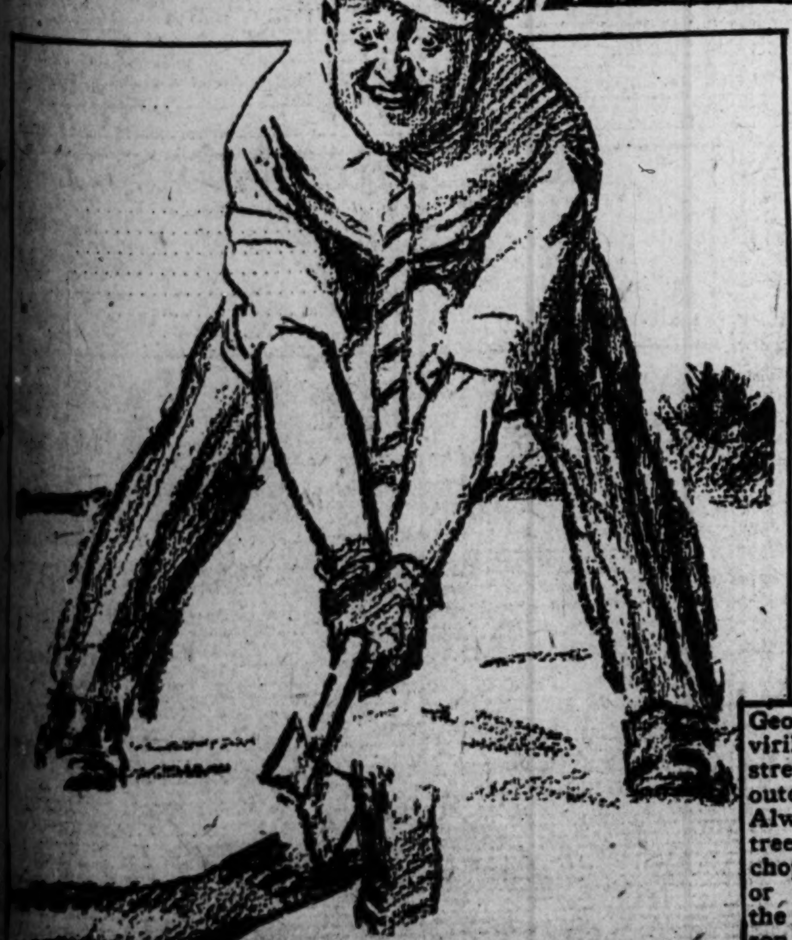
Anything in the big outdoors that makes for beauty in the landscape has a surprising effect on Marcia. "Oh, Winfield," Marcia will cry, "just look at this lovely, lovely grove of trees! I just KNOW that if we look HARD we will see a FAIRY! I just know I'll meet a fairy some day! Wouldn't you just LOVE to meet a fairy here, Winfield?"



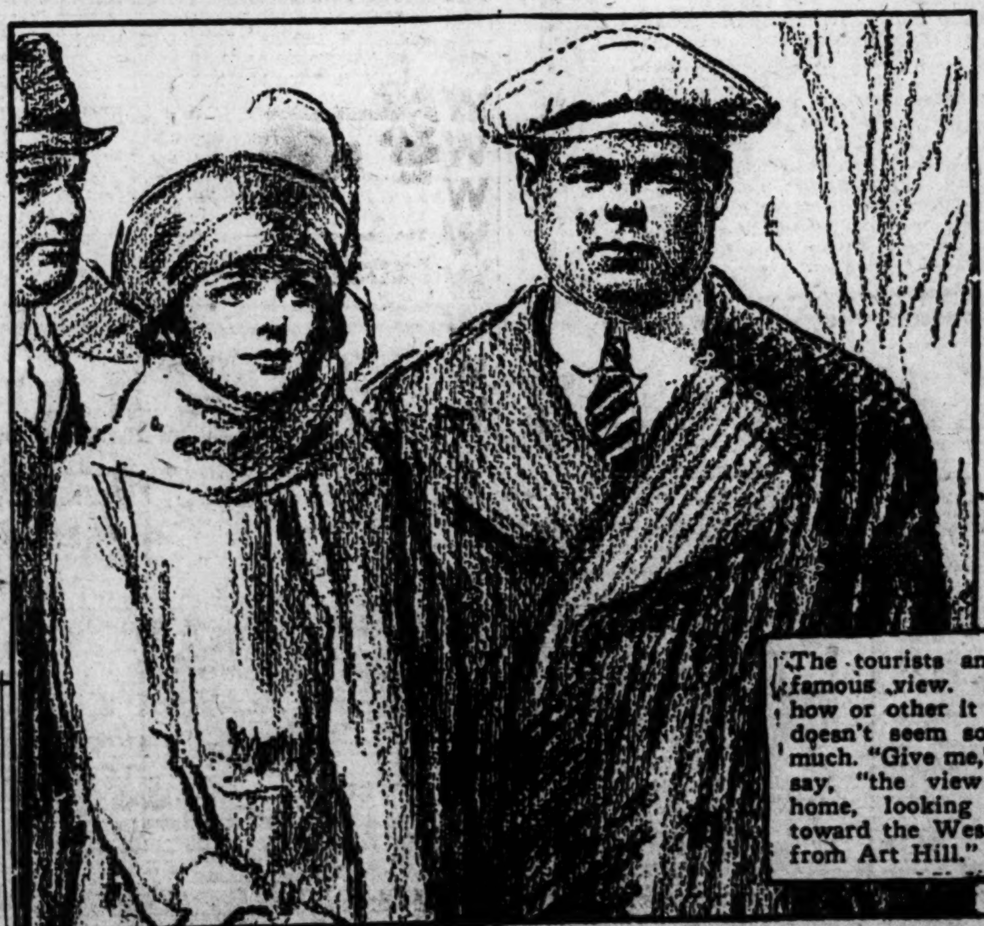
The great, big, free outdoors is all right for those who like it, but a good, close-trimmed lawn is more to the liking of the timid lady who was born fearful that something—a woodchuck, or a snake, maybe—would jump out at her from the long grass!



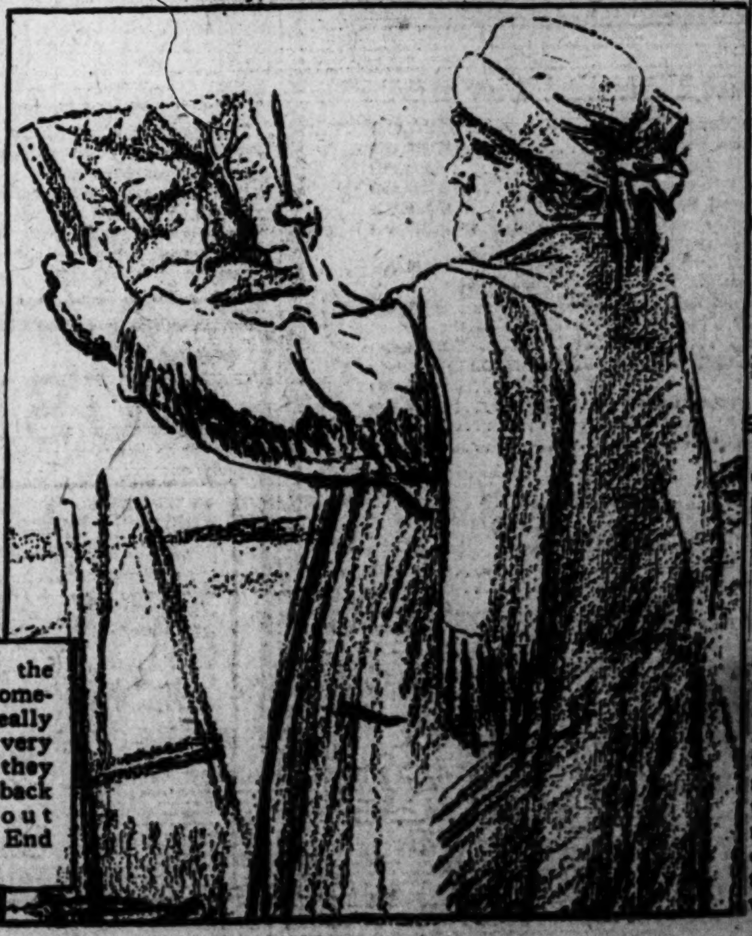
Along in the spring of the year when birds are chirping and the crocus, etc., etc., the lady with the early Greek complex succumbs to the lure of the big outdoors. Right out before everybody she makes her appearance as poverty, or chastity, or lust, as the case may be, in the spring pageant given for the benefit of the College Alumnae Association.



Georgia is one of those virile redbloods whose strenuosity in the big outdoors is appalling. Always pulling up big trees by the roots or chopping them down or digging holes in the ground for no reason at all!



The tourists and the famous view. Somehow or other it really doesn't seem so very much. "Give me," they say, "the view back home, looking out toward the West End from Art Hill."



The big outdoors and Art—Capital A, please—are constantly at war with each other. Artists are always complaining that such and such a landscape doesn't compose well, or model well or that the country is all wrong in feeling. And so the artists, being thwarted on every side, have to go back to their studios and make up something out of their own heads that won't be all wrong in feeling.

RADIO INSPECTOR WILL BE IN ST. LOUIS DEC. 2

All Amateurs Holding Second Grade Operators' Licenses Must Appear for Examination.

The Post-Dispatch has been requested to publish the following notice:

The United States radio inspector announces that Markham Swartz, assistant U. S. radio inspector, will arrive in St. Louis, Mo., Saturday, Dec. 2, 1922, on which date examinations will be held in the civil service examination room of the Postoffice Building, for radio operators, amateur first-grade and commercial first and second class.

All radio operators holding amateur second-grade licenses, residing within a radius of 50 miles of the above city, must appear for examination on the above date. Amateur second-grade licenses are only issued until the applicant can present himself for examination for amateur first-grade license. No amateur second-grade licenses will be issued in the vicinity of St. Louis for a period of three months after these examinations are given.

Commercial, experimental, special and technical and training school licensed stations will be inspected. Amateur stations, who have been interfering with the reception of broadcasting programs, will also be inspected to ascertain why this interference exists, and if due to any violation of the United States radio communication laws, the penalty may be enforced.

Owing to the great amount of business the inspector has to transact, it is not likely that he will be in St. Louis again any time within the near future.

BUGLE CALLS FOR K S D

Preliminary Warning Is Given the Broadcasting of Market Reports Day by Day.

Ever since the Post-Dispatch radio station K S D began the broadcasting of market reports, last June, it has ben customary to warn listeners that transmission was about to begin by giving, for a minute or so, a series of army bugle calls. These calls, in several respects, were not ideal for the purpose but they served until this week when Station K S D electrified its day time listeners with something entirely different.

The new series of bugle calls were made especially for Station K S D in the laboratories of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co., with especial consideration for the needs of radio transmission. Hundreds of country banks, merchants and farmers will hereafter hear these notes immediately preceding the latest market quotations.

The purpose of this warning, of course, is to give the listener an opportunity to "tune in" perfectly before the announcement of quotations begin.

RADIO AIDS EINSTEIN TESTS

Scientists Making Experiments in the Indian Ocean During Recent Solar Eclipse.

Special radio time signals sent from NSS, Annapolis, for the benefit of scientists in the Indian Ocean working on a test of the Einstein Theory of Relativity during the recent solar eclipse, were nearly twice as audible as those of a commercial station, the navy has been advised.

At least their time signals reached Paris satisfactorily. A radio station there reports that a comparison of the time signals sent out by the navy with those transmitted from Rocky Point, L. I., showed that the audibility of the navy signals was 158.2, compared with 87.5 for Rocky Point on the audibility scale. Reports from Australia and the Indian Ocean, however, have not yet been received. Naval signals were sent out on 17,145 meters and those of the commercial station on 13,800, and they were also transmitted at different times, so their reception would not be difficult.

The positive plate of a storage battery, when in good condition, will show a chocolate color, and on the negative a gray lead color. Plates which are almost white in appearance are sulphated, caused by overdischarge or allowing the battery to stand in a discharged condition.

This telegram, from her husband, was received in St. Louis by Mrs. Alfred A. Hebert, a guest at the Claridge Hotel. Hebert, a New York advertising man, recently started on a big game hunt in Canada. He will rejoin his wife here about Dec. 15, and they will then go to California. This message shows in what remote places the Post-Dispatch broadcasting station K S D is heard.

Hints on the Construction and Use of Spiderweb Coils

Directions for Winding and Mounting as Well as Suggestions for Tuning to Different Wave Lengths Explained.

Many requests have been received for detailed information regarding the construction and use of spiderweb coils. The following data is the result of some special experiments carried on for the purpose of finding out which form, type and size would give the best results for amateur "dx" (distance) work, as well as efficient broadcast reception.

For best results the forms for the coils should be made of clear mica about .010 inch thick (pieces 3"x4" may be purchased at any hardware store). Excellent results have been achieved using forms having an outside diameter of three inches, and 11 teeth three-quarters of an inch long. This makes the circle at the base of the teeth one and one-half inches in diameter.

Contrary to usual practice, it has been found that there are advantages in winding the coils with small wire. This increases the decrement, makes the set easier to tune on continuous wave (C. W.) and spark signals, and distorts far less than a variometer set.

The number of turns cannot be definitely determined in advance. The user of these coils should try different combinations of turns on the coils until best results are obtained. As a rule, it will be found that the primary and the secondary coils should be wound with from 20 to 35 turns, depending on the aerial and the length of connections in the circuit. The "tickler" coil will require from 45 to 70 turns, depending on the size of the other coils and the rest of the circuit. The turns on the tickler should be varied until the circuit can be made to oscillate or cease to oscillate on any wave-length covered by the set.

The connection between the grid terminal on the vacuum-tube socket and the grid condenser should be as short as possible. It is suggested that the grid condenser be connected directly to the V. T. socket.

For very fine tuning a .0005 mfd. variable condenser may be connected across the phones and "B" battery, and it gives a true vernier adjustment.

These coils when constructed as outlined above, function somewhat the same as a Reinartz tuner. The set will cover a wide range of wave-lengths with but a single setting of the primary condenser, the energy apparently being transferred to the secondary circuit by shock excitation. This simplifies tuning, as the secondary condenser is used as the wave-length control and the primary condenser is used only to get a closer adjustment after a station is picked up.

There are five things which control the wave length and regeneration of a set of this type. They are: Primary condenser, secondary condenser, rheostat, and the coupling between the primary and secondary coils, and secondary and tickler. This sounds like a good many adjustments to watch, but they are very easily handled. For most work the coupling between the primary and secondary coils should be fairly colse and it may be left constant. This eliminates one adjustment. If the number of turns on the coil is correct, and the operator will experiment a little he will find that the set will be responsive over a large band of wave lengths by simply changing the adjustment on the secondary condenser. This eliminates another control. Varying the rheostat sometimes aids materially in fine tuning but it may be left constant. We now have eliminated all but two controls—the secondary condenser, and the coupling between the secondary and tickler coils. It is not necessary to vary this coupling for C. W. reception. Thus we have a tuner which works well on spark signals with but two controls, and on C. W. signals with only one control. Any one who has handled a receiving set will admit that this is desirable.

For broadcast reception primary condenser may be left in one position. Then the coupling between the secondary and tickler coils is decreased until the set begins to oscillate, then slowly vary the secondary condenser until the whistle of the carrier wave is heard. It will be found that there are really two whistles only one or two degrees apart on the condenser. The condenser should be set at a point midway between these two whistles and the filament rheostat turned up or down slowly until the voice or music is heard best. The bridging condenser which is connected across the "B" battery and phones (mentioned above) is useful in tuning more sharply, but is not absolutely necessary.

There are three types of receiving sets in common use at the present time; the vario-coupler—twin-variometer, honeycomb, and the single-circuit set, but the condenser-tuned spiderwebs have some advantages over each type. First, considering the vario-coupler and variometer set: Spiderweb coils, if properly handled, will give just as loud spark signals and will be much more selective on C. W. In the opinion of the writer, they will tune easier, give louder signals; and less interference from spark stations will be experienced than with variometer sets. Also distortion is reduced to a minimum.

In comparison with honeycombs, there can be no argument. Honeycombs tune in a similar manner to spiderwebs, but the signal strength is much less, and in addition, since no shellac or other binder is needed to retain the wire, the distributed capacity is less.

Comparing the average single-circuit set with spiderwebs, the latter will be found to have the following advantages: Greater selectivity (due to loose coupling), and the ability to vary either the primary or secondary coil independently. The capacity effects so troublesome in single-circuit sets do not exist in spiderweb sets.

Spiderwebs have another advantage over variometer and single-circuit sets in that they can be readily mounted on plugs and used in a standard honeycomb coil mounting for short-wave work, and honeycombs substituted for longer waves, thus making an all-wave set that is truly economical to construct and efficient on all wavelengths. The primary is usually mounted on the left, the secondary in the center, and the tickler on the right.

It may be of interest to the readers of this article to know of some of the results obtained with this set using long-wave honeycomb coils. I D O, Rome, Italy; P O Z, Nauen, Germany, and O N A, Banana, Belgian Congo, Africa, have been copied, in addition to many other foreign and domestic arc and spark stations. It is understood, of course, that these stations were communicating by means of code signals.

Needless to say, practically all the broadcasting stations in the United States have been heard, using only one stage of audio-frequency amplification, and many, with the detector alone. In conclusion, if a person has only a limited amount of money to spend but is willing to take a little time and care in constructing and experimenting with a set, spiderwebs, if properly made, cannot be surpassed.

TOOTH EXTRACTED "VIA RADIO," PLIERS USED

Services of Physician on Another Ship Summoned — Molar Drawn, Pain Relieved.

The wonders of wireless will probably never cease to startle the world out of its ennui. The latest accomplishment of radio was the extraction of an aching molar across 800 miles of heaving seas. The story of the tooth-pulling by wireless became known upon the arrival in New York of the big steamship America, of the United States Lines.

It was late in the night and Dr. E. Wood, surgeon of the America, had long since retired to his cabin, when he was aroused by a pounding on the door. He arose to be greeted by the wireless operator with a radiogram, one of the strangest Dr. Wood in his many years at sea had ever received.

The message was from the captain of a small freight vessel, and stated that he had been suffering for five days with a toothache, and that he desired aid in yanking the offending molar. Although a surgeon, and not a dentist, Dr. Wood decided that it was an emergency in which he must not be found wanting.

By wireless, the America's surgeon called for a detailed history of the aching molar, and when he had been given the desired information, he decided that an extraction was necessary to give the freight captain relief. The toothachy sailor-man informed Dr. Wood that his chief engineer was prepared to pull the tormenting molar with a pair of wire pliers, providing detailed directions were furnished.

With all the exactness of which he is capable, the surgeon of the America sent directions for the extraction of the molar. Back came a message from the freighter stating that the directions were fully understood and that the volunteer dentist, with the wire pliers, was about to execute the job.

Half an hour later came this message to the America:

"Tooth successfully yanked. Your generous assistance warmly appreciated. God bless you."

And so more wireless history has been made. Ship surgeons are being called upon more and more since the perfection of wireless in giving aid to small vessels that carry no doctor. Pulling a tooth by wireless, however, is a test that had never before been applied.

COW MILKED 4 TIMES A DAY

British Animal Milked Four Times Daily; Had Five Calves.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—A British Friesian cow named "Brookside Colantha," more than 8 years old, is not only producing 3000 gallons of milk a year, but is working overtime to beat this record.

The cow is milked four times a day and has frequently given more than 11 gallons in one day. She has had five calves, and has yielded more than 50 times her own weight in milk. There are said to be 59 "3000 gallon" cows in this country, of which 55 are British Friesians.

Radio Questions Answered

All Queries Must Be Accompanied by the Name and Address of the Sender.

Will a Columbia "Hot Shot" 6-volt battery work as well as a storage battery? Will it work better than four dry cells? H. W.

A. It will work as well as a storage battery while it lasts, but dry cells of any kind will not give the same satisfaction as a storage battery because of their comparatively short life.

Q. How often is it advisable to get a new "B" battery?

A. Whenever the old one will not operate the set.

Q. How far can I receive, using a vacuum tube detector, vario-coupler and twin-variometer set?

A. Sets of this kind have picked up signals from a distance of a thousand miles. It depends on their efficiency as well as proper aerial and ground.

Q. Could I attach a one vacuum tube set to a victrola?

A. Yes, if the signals can be heard loud and distinct with the 'phones lying on the table. They will not be very loud through the horn, however.

Ans. to R. R.: Until Government legislation of some kind is made, there is probably no way of eliminating the interference with which you are troubled, except with the use of a loop aerial and radio-frequency amplifiers.

Q. Is it necessary to have a lightning switch when using a bed spring for an aerial? H. B. H.

A. No.

Q. I am 45 feet from Keokuk power wires. Will they interfere with broadcast reception, using a crystal detector? F. E. B.

A. In all probability you will hear a hum, which is practically impossible to "tune out." But the best and surest way is to experiment and find out.

Q. Can an audiotron amplifier be used with a crystal detector? M. M.

A. Yes.

Q. The secondary (inside coil) of a loose-coupler is commonly tapped, but a slider is used for varying the inductance of the primary. Is it possible to tap the primary instead of using a slider? V. E. O'H.

A. Yes, and tapped coils are, in some ways, more efficient than those employing a slider. Switch points and a lever arm make better contact, but to get the fine adjustment possible with a slider, a variable condenser connected in parallel with the tapped coil is necessary. This makes possible tuning "between the taps." A few of the disadvantages of using a slider are: Dirt and dust collect along the path of the slider resulting in a poor contact. Sliders wear into the wire on the coil and make rewinding necessary after continued use. Tuning instruments of this kind are not adaptable to panel mounting, as are coils of the tapped type.

Q. We have a crystal set; now it is my understanding that when a sensitive spot is found by the cat whisker on the crystal, same is never to be moved and that the moving of it would get a different station. Am I right? R. & J. V.

A. You would not, by adjusting the cat whisker, tune into different stations unless by chance a new spot was so very much more sensitive than any of the others. In that event a station might become audible on that one spot only.

Ans. to V. W. R. Call at reception room, second floor, Post-Dispatch Building, any afternoon between 3 and 4 o'clock.

Q. Please tell me what department of the Government gives instructions for making and operating a radio set. C. S.

A. Write to the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C.

Q. When listening to the Kansas City Star, and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, I am unable to separate them. Why is this? F. E. B.

A. This is due to the fact that, in compliance with Government regulations, both stations transmit on 400 meter wave length; however with careful adjustment of your secondary coupling, this interference may be reduced to a minimum.

Q. I have a receiving set consisting of a variocoupler and galena detector. Would the addition of a variable condenser across the secondary do any good? L. G.

A. It will permit of sharper tuning, but will not increase the signal strength.

Q. Can a loud speaker be added to my set which consists of a loose coupler, variable condenser and detector? C. H. C.

A. You do not state whether your detector is of the crystal or vacuum tube type. In either case a loud speaker can be used with the addition of two stages of audio-frequency amplification.

Q. My receiving set works fine in day time, but at night when I tune in there is so much static from the city electric light plant which is near me, that it is impossible to hear. Is there any way of eliminating this interference? H. C.

A. You do not state any details regarding the relative position of your aerial with respect to the power wires, however, in some cases, placing the antenna at right angles to the power lines has reduced this trouble to a minimum.

Q. Please give the constructional details for making a Magnavox loud-speaker, and the necessary articles rquired. I have the horn. (B. H.)

A. We do not have this information. The loud-speaker you mention is made at Oakland, Cal., and we refer you to them.

Q. Please tell me how to connect a lead-in to a four-wire antenna. (H. M.)

A. A wire is brought down from each of the aerial strands and they are twisted together just before being connected to the lightning protector or switch. Another method is to have four short wires, one from each on the aerial, brought together, "V" shaped, and a single lead-in wire from the end of the "V" to the instruments.

Q. Can I obtain a radio map of the U. S., and also a list of the broadcasting stations, from the Post-Dispatch. (T. S. H.)

A. No, the Post-Dispatch has not published a list of stations. They may be obtained at most radio stores and book dealers.

NAVAL RADIO-EQUIPPED SPOTTING PLANE TESTED AT CLEVELAND

First of Several Airships of New Type to Be Used for Spotting and Correcting the Range of Big Guns.

A new naval "spotting" plane equipped with a recently perfected radio telegraph set was officially tested before a board of naval officers at Cleveland, O., Wednesday, Nov. 15. The plane is a three-seater, designed for observing and reporting to the ships in action the fall of shells and their distance from the enemy ship or target. It is the first of several newly developed spotting planes designed for naval work and was built by the Glenn Martin company.

One of the most important features of the "M" as the craft is designated, is its radio equipment, which is said to especially meet the requirements of instantaneous and constant communication by radio telegraph between the "spotters" and the flagship, where the fleet gunnery officer and the Admiral control the fire, or to individual ship's gunnery officers if the fire is controlled separately.

Only general information regarding the navy's "spotting" radio sets is available, but it is known that the sets so designated are modern tube telegraph sets operating on continuous wave and having excellent characteristics for range and reliability. They are especially rugged in their construction and guaranteed to "stand up" better than the ordinary radio plane sets. Power and range are withheld, but it is understood that they will transmit 300 or 400 miles. Satisfactory communication is assured, even though a great number of planes are sending messages at the same time.

The power is generated by a wind-driven generator with a self-regulatory fan giving constant revolutions at all air speeds, so as to furnish the tubes with a steady voltage.

New Broadcasting Map.

The Radio Section of the Department of Commerce has found it necessary to use a larger broadcasting map, the old one having become too small for practical use in locating the 564 broadcasting stations now in existence. The new map, which is 5 by 7 feet in size, is divided into radio districts, and each station is located in its approximate position.

ST. LOUIS CHURCH INSTALLS RADIO BROADCASTING STATION

King's Highway Presbyterian Will Transmit First Program Sunday Evening, Nov. 26.

On Sunday evening, Nov. 26, the King's Highway Presbyterian Church radio broadcasting station will be formally opened with a special musical service by the church quartet augmented by the following artists: Mrs. W. J. Black, soprano; Mrs. H. W. Schafer, contralto; Harvey W. Ramsay, tenor, and John Enzinger, baritone. J. H. Maunder's cantata, "The Song of Thanksgiving," will be sung.

The regular personnel of the choir is as follows: Frances Alcorn, soprano; Pauline Arnold, contralto; Robert Malone, tenor; O. W. Stone Jr., baritone, and H. W. Schafer, organist and director.

The call letters of the station are W M A Y. It is the only broadcasting station in St. Louis maintained by a church, and one of very few in the country. It will be used every Sunday to broadcast the services on 360 meters wavelength.

Dandruff-Falling Hair!

Quick! A 35c bottle of "delightful "Danderine" will Save Any Man or Woman's Hair—See Dandruff Go!

Don't lose another hair! Don't tolerate destructive dandruff. A little Danderine now will save your hair; thicken and strengthen it; double its beauty. Falling hair never stops by itself! Dandruff multiplies until it forms a crusty scale, destroying the hair, roots and all, resulting in baldness.

Your druggist will tell you that "Danderine" is the largest selling hair saver in the world because it corrects and tones sick, ailing hair every time. Use one bottle of Danderine, then if you find a single falling hair or a particle of dandruff, you can have your money back.

EXIDE BATTERY USED BY ARCTIC EXPLORER

Donald B. MacMillan, the Arctic explorer, has returned from Baffin Land with much new evidence of the value of storage batteries on polar expeditions. The fact is now fully demonstrated, according to F. C. Brockmeier of the local Exide Service Station, that storage batteries are necessary equipment, not only in connection with the scientific work of polar exploration, but because of their value in adding to the comfort of the man and the maintenance of their morale.

Storage batteries furnished current for ignition in the oil engine of the Bowdoin, MacMillan's staunch vessel. There was, also, an electric light plant equipped with the Exide type of storage batteries. With this plant MacMillan's men enjoyed a freedom from the horrors of the Arctic winter darkness. These same batteries furnished current for the operation of a moving picture machine and many otherwise weary hours of enforced inactivity were passed away with the help of moving pictures accompanied by suitable selections from a talking machine.

DORT CARS CROSS AUSTRALIAN CONTINENT

Three Dort stock touring cars, equipped with special bodies, have traversed under their own power the roadless wastes of the Australian continent, crossing unbridged streams, ploughing through deep desert sands, slashing through grass six feet high, and rolling back into the streets of Adelaide with a mileage of 5546 miles in just 67 days.

This expedition was made because Australian Government officials wanted first hand information regarding proposed routes for a transcontinental railroad.

Thomas McCallum, member of the Legislative Council of Southern Australia; Capt. S. S. Whyte, prominent ornithologist; W. Crowder, of the Australian Land Office; Murray Aunger, expert pilot; Donald McCallum and Cyril Aunger made the trip.

Camel trains went on ahead of the expedition with large quantities of gasoline, oil and supplies.

McDonald Week a Success.

When F. C. McDonald, president of the Southwest Nash Company, left on Nov. 16, for a two weeks' vacation on the Gulf Coast, O. C. Haselrigg, sales manager of the company, suggested that the two weeks McDonald was gone should be known as "McDonald week," and every sale to be in honor of McDonald and a personal compliment to him.

Haselrigg reports that the sales during the first week of the contest exceed the first two weeks of the month by 31 per cent.

Hupmobile

With This Fine Rex Top An Open Hupmobile Affords Closed Car Comfort

Hundreds of persons who seek a compromise between a closed car and the open model, are finding the smart combination of the Hupmobile with Rex top precisely what they desire.

One of the pleasing features of the Rex-equipped Hupmobile is the fact that the owner enjoys most of the advantages of the closed car at a slightly more than open car cost.

This low first cost is in keeping with the amazing economy of operation and upkeep, which the Hupmobile affords throughout its long life. It actually costs less to keep a Hupmobile going than you must pay out with many cars, which are not considered to compare with it in comfort, appearance, and powerful dashing performance.

Come in and see the Rex-equipped Hupmobile. Or better still, telephone for a demonstration. Let us show you how thoroughly comfortable, and how distinctive these Hupmobiles are.

SCOBIE NEW PRESIDENT OF EARL MOTORS INC.

At a meeting recently of the Board of Directors of Earl Motors, Inc., the resignation of Mr. Clarence A. Earl as president of the company was accepted. Mr. George C. Scobie was elected as his successor.

Mr. Scobie has been identified with the company as vice president and treasurer and has successfully conducted the financial operations of the company. The Bishop Motors Co. are distributors of the Earl car in St. Louis.

'ASK 'EM TO BUY' PLAN OUTLINED BY RUARK

When and how to sell accessories and taking advantages of the opportunity to "Ask 'Em to Buy" whenever a customer comes to your establishment was outlined to members of the Motor Accessory Trade Asociation Tuesday evening at the Claridge Hotel by W. B. Ruark, assistant director of merchandising of the Automotive Equipment Association of the United States.

Ruark also told of the educational plan inaugurated by the Automotive Equipment Association for the purpose of educating accessory dealers throughout the United States and making them better merchants.

Following his talk several reels of motion pictures, demonstrating the possibilities to a merchant, "Ask 'Em to Buy," were shown.

Robert E. Lee, secretary of the Motor Accessory Trade Association and of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, told of the advantages of associations and the work they are able to do.

H. F. Fahrenkrog, of the Kardell Motor Co. and president of St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association and George Weber, president of the Weber Implement & Auto Co., also made short addresses.

H. H. Fleer, president of the association, presided.

TAYLOR TO TAKE CHARGE OF OVERLAND BRANCH

Frank T. Windle, branch manager of Willys-Overland Inc., Locust at Twenty-third street, announces that Dec. 1 William H. Taylor, president of the Overland Motor Co., Chicago, Ill., will arrive at St. Louis and assume management of the St. Louis branch of the company. Mr. Taylor has managed the Chicago branch for the past five years.

Windle also announced that A. C. Barber, who recently resigned as sales manager of the Willy's-Overland Factory at Toledo had taken the presidency and management of the Overland Motor Co. of Chicago, succeeding Mr. Taylor.

L. G. Peed who was assistant sales manager at the factory has been promoted to the position left vacant by Barber.

Mr. Windle states that while he will remain with Mr. Taylor in an advistory capacity for a few weeks after the first of the coming month, as yet he is not ready to announce his plans for the future.

FUETTERER DISPOSES OF SERVICE STATION

W. E. Fuetterer, president of the Fuetterer Battery Service Inc., distributers for the Cincinnati Battery. Warco Motor Oils, radio equipment and supplies, seat and tire covers and automotive specialties, announced that he has sold the retail battery service station at 3215 Locust street to George F. Wolf and Son, and that from now on the Fuetterer Company would confine their business strictly to wholesale.

The Fuetterer Battery Service Inc. are now located in the building at 2123-25 Locust street.

George F. Wolf, who is president of the new company, was formerly service manager of the Fuetterer Company while his son, George F. Wolf Jr., was connected with the firm in capacity of a salesman. The new company will continue to occupy the premises at 3215 Locust street.

OLDSMOBILE FINISHED IN NEW SHADE OF GREEN

An entirely new shade of green, known as "weathered bronze" has been announced by the Olds Motor Works, of Lansoing, Mich.

In addition to being of an entirely new shade and used for the first time in finishing an automobile, it is especially durable and promises to last much langer than some finishes which have been used in the automobile industry during the last few years.

It is said that the Oldsmobile executives decided, when it was determined that a sport roadster should be marketed, that the car had to be finished in an entirely new shade of specially designed paint to stand all weather tests and it also must be of a "smart" appearance.

An experimental car was turned over to the paint shop and for weeks various men in the department took turns devising color schemes for its finish. The result, after weeks of expericents, resulted in the new shade of green.

WORRELL-NASH MOTOR CO. TO RETAIL NASH CARS

R. F. Worrell, who recently resigned as sales manager of the Southwest Nash Co., and F. R. Culbertson, formerly wholesale representative for the Southwest Nash Co. in Missouri, have organized the Worrell-Nash Motor Co. to retail Nash four and six cylinder cars.

The new company have obtained the building at 3500 Gravois avenue for their sales and service departments. The building is now being redecorated and will be ready for occupancy about Dec. 1.

O. C. Hazelrigg who has been connected with the Southwest Nash Co. for the past two years has been appointed sales manager for the company to succeed Worrell.

AUTOCAR ANNOUNCES INCREASED PRICES

Roadster Luxury Unexcelled

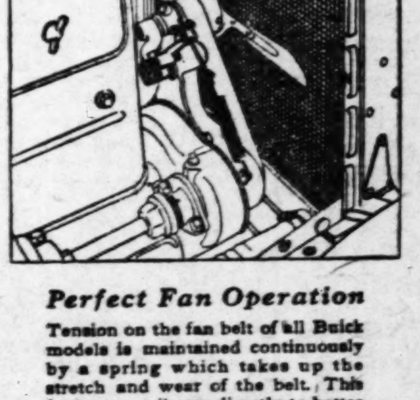
The Buick Six-Cylinder Sport—$1825

With Wire Wheels

As strikingly beautiful as it is luxuriously appointed, the Buick Six-cylinder Sport Roadster brings new zest to motoring.

Riding on the long wheelbase Buick chassis with the distinctive Buick spring suspension and the famous, powerful Buick valve-in-head engine, this superbly fitted roadster contains every refinement for care-free travel. The fine leather upholstery, the shining nickeled fittings, the complete instrument board, windshield wings, tailored top and snug fitting storm curtains are among the many features that distinguish this car in appearance and in comfort.

Anywhere you meet this de-luxe motor car, it not only is the center of attention but motorists also mark it as the car that sets distances at naught and makes driving a continuous enjoyment.



Perfect Fan Operation

Tension on the fan belt of all Buick models is maintained continuously by a spring which takes up the stretch and wear of the belt. This feature contributes directly to better engine performance by insuring proper cooling at all times.

DODGE BROTHERS
SEDAN

Many who could well afford more expensive cars are showing a marked preference for Dodge Brothers Sedan.

They find it easy to drive, economical to run, and comparable in beauty and elegance with cars much higher in price.

In the vast amplitude of Dodge Brothers closed body plant, this sedan is constructed with all the studious precision that marks the work of the finest custom builders.

Eighteen days are devoted alone to the 18 rubbing and varnishing operations which are responsible for the unusual brilliancy of its lustre.

Months of seasoning precede the use of the fine, critically selected ash which gives the body its rugged firmness.

The interior fittings, too, are chosen with thoughtfulness and rare good taste. The upholstery is covered with genuine mohair velvet of a singularly rich and beautiful pattern. The seats are roomy and luxurious.

Steel disc wheels (with cord tires) harmonize in a most effective way with the new grace and smartness which Dodge Brothers have recently brought to the lines of the body.

Panel Steel Body—Seats Four—$1445

To be really complete, a closed car must combine fine body work and appointments with a thoroughly dependable and highly efficient chassis. There can be no compromise in either equipment or mechanics.

When you examine the interior of the Jewett Coupe you will find that the equipment is indeed complete. The upholstery is both beautiful and lasting. Right at your hand you will find every accessory that makes closed car motoring a real luxury.

And, under the body, is a chassis of tremendous strength and performing ability. There you will find the smoothest of six-cylinder motors and driving parts that defy the severest tests of road punishment.

Such is the Jewett Coupe—a thing of beauty when parked in front of your home and the most reliable of companions on the highway. And, though you might expect to pay $800 or $1000 more, for these fine car luxuries, the price is $1445 f. o. b. Detroit.

See the Jewett demonstrate its hill climbing ability at the following moving pictures this week.

JORDAN PREDICTS CAR SHORTAGE IN SPRING

Three things will create the greatest shortage of motor cars in the spring of 1923 that the country has ever seen, says Edward S. Jordan, president of the Jordan Motor Car Co.

First and most important is the utter impossibility of enclosed car body manufacturers producing a sufficient number of bodies to meet what appears to be an insatiable demand.

Second is the certainty of a freight car shortage and a very slow movement of freight throughout the winter.

Third is the increase of $1,000,000,000 in the purchasing power of the American farmer.

Time was when manufactruers of enclosed bodies who did not produce in time for winter delivery, carried the bodies over until the following year. Now the leading manufacturers of motor cars in the country are running close to 60 per cent in closed car production and the interesting thing about the situation is that the demand keeps on increasing regardless of the season.

Everyone who has anything to do with the railroads or with shipments knows that it will be impossible for the railroad companies to move the volume of freight which will be offered to them this winter. It has been almost impossible for them to handle it in the good weather we have had this fall.

The leading automobile factories in Detroit and Cleveland, and other cities, are now making arrangements for driveaways to continue throughout the winter. But these will only supply the demand for cars for spring sales in that area which is included within a radius of 500 miles of Detroit and Cleveland.

In view of the fact that he has not been buying automobiles in any quantity for two years past, it means that the pace of 6500 a day now touched by Ford will be followed by the other automobile manufacturers.

CONNECTICUT ISSUES RULES FOR MOTORISTS

Upon entry into the State of Connecticut, the motorist is handed a card which reads: Mr. Motor Vehicle Operator:

"Your safety and convenience is our duty. We want, need, and must have your co-operation to successfully perform that duty. PLEASE assist us to avoid accidents:

By staying in line and not trying to pass the motor vehicle ahead. Passing on a curve, at the top of a hill or where the sight line is obstructed is illegal and will be prosecuted.

By keeping to the right of the center line of the highway.

By maintaining a reasonable distance from the car ahead in case of sudden stop.

By refraining from cutting in.

By having your brakes and other equipment in good order.

By keeping your speed to the average of the line.

By giving the proper and distinct signal when stopping or changing direction.

By parking your car when it is necessary to stop, completely off the traveled portion of the highway, so as not to restrict traffic.

By obeying the officer's signals and directions.

By being careful and courteous.

"With your assistance in the above we will endeavor to move traffic as fast as safety will permit. Road mopes, who are holding up traffic will be removed from the line."

NEW NASH SIX COUPE NOW ON EXHIBITION

Details providing for the comfort and convenience of passengers are one of the features of the new Nash Six coupe for four passengers now on display in the showrooms of the Southwest Nash Co. A heater insures warmth in the coldest weather, and at he same time ventilation for all weather is provided. The hood ventilator, which may be adjusted to any position desired, and the adjustable two-piece windshield, make possible free passage of air.

The car is equipped with a smoking set, including match box and ash tray, and a toilet case is provided for women passengers. The seats are wide and deep and are upholstered in mohair. There is a folding auxiliary seat with a high, broad back and arm rest.

In appearance the Nash six coupe is similar to other Nash products. Measures are taken to insure safety to the owner and to provide definitely against body loosening, by a special construction of the body.

TALKING STUDEBAKER ATTRACTS LARGE CROWDS

The Talking Studebaker, a regular stock model Studebaker touring car that talked, sang and played music, attracted large crowds daily to the Weber Motor Car Co., showrooms last week, where the car was on display.

The car, which is the property of Sol Dan of Tulsa, Okla., is at present making a tour of all Studebaker distributers throughout the United States. Prior to its exhibit here it was on display in Chicago.

The car, after being introduced to the visitor by Sol Dan, it would answer various questions as to the color of garments worn by the visitor, time of day, sing a song, blink one of its headlights when asked to wink, and hold a general conversation with the visitors.

KELLAM MOTOR TO SELL DURANT AND STAR CARS

The Kellam Motor Co., recently organized to retail Durant and Star cars in St. Louis and St. Louis County, will hold the formal opening of their salesrooms at 7195 Manchester avenue this week.

W. P. Kellam, who is president of the new company, was formerly connected with the West Side Buick Co.

The company's new building has recently been reconstructed and redecorated.

64,864 MOTORISTS VISITED YELLOWSTONE

During the Yellowstone Park season recently closed, 64,864 visitors reached the park by motor, as against 33,358 by rail. No less than 18,379 incoming automobiles and motorcycles passed through the park gates.

This information which is given in the annual National Park Service report of the United States Department of the Interior, throws an interesting light on the extensive use of the automobile for long tours.

Of the individual makes of cars that passed into the park, 2054 were Buicks, nearly 200 more than the next highest number. The report, for the purposes of comparison, gives also the figures for the seasons of 1920 and 1921, showing that in both those years Buick led the next highest by a substantial margin.

This year Ford was first 5529. Buick second with Dodge third with 1361. All cars registered under 1000. state in the Union was by those who motored to the the cars carrying a total of tourists.

GENERAL MOTORS LISTS CARS ON PAMPHLET

In a pamphlet just off the press, General Motors lists and describes its complete line of passenger automobiles.

The five divisons of the corporation that manufacture passenger cars are producing 26 individual types of cars, ranging in size from the two-passenger roadster to the seven-passenger imperial limousine. Of all types, the five-passenger sedan is numerically the most popular; the divisions make seven different styles of this car. Next in popularity comes the two-pasenger roadster, of which sx styles are made. The familiar five-passenger touring car comes in five styles, one from each division. These figures are suggestive of the trend of manufacture, as showing the increasing popularity of the closed models.

If the passehger cars made by General Motors were on exhibition in one hall, with an example of each individual style manufactured, there would be 49 cars shown, divided as follows: Buick, 14; Cadillac, 10; Chevrolet, 5; Oakland, 6; Oldsmobile, 14. The corporation makes 18 cars of eight-cylinder engine, 15 of six-cylinder engine, and 16 of four-cylinder engine.

Besides its pasenger cars, General Motors makes seven trucks, ranging from one to five tons, and three tractors, five-ton, 10-ton and 15-ton.

In the wide range of price classes, the following figures are noted: $500 to $1000, 11 cars; $1000 to $1500, 18 cars; $1500 to $2000, 13 cars; $2000 to $2500, 2 cars; $2500 to $3000, no cars; $3000 to $3500, three cars; $3500 to $4000, three cars; $4000 to $4500, three cars; above $4500, one car, at $4600.

Besides the details on vehicles, the pamphlet states briefly the scope of General Motors and its 67 divisions, subsidiaries and affiliated companies, and its activities on this continent and overseas. Measured by its organization, facilities, financial position and volume of business, the corporation is the second largest industrial group in America.

HUDSON-FRAMPTON TO HOLD NOVEL EXHIBIT

A special exhibit to prove the staunchness of the Essex coach will be on display all this week in the showrooms of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Company, Hudson and Essex distributers.

The exhibit will consist of an Essex coach turned upside down and setting on its top. In this position the body is supporting the weight of the car, which is 2700 pounds. The object of exhibiting the car in this manner is to show that the weight of the chassis does not cause the body to sag or bend and that the windows and doors operate freely.

The exhibit also includes a stripped car in order to reveal the body and chassis construction of both.

Similar details are revealed of all important parts of the body and chassis of both the Hudson and Essex.

Similar demonstrations are now being held at various points throughout the country by Hudson and Essex distributers.

Studebaker

Order Your Christmas Studebaker Now!

In order to have a Studebaker Light-Six Sedan at the door when the family comes downstairs Christmas morning, you should place your order now.

The sedan is the ideal gift because it will provide happiness for all the family—all the year—and the years to come.

The sturdy body of the Light-Six Sedan, like the chassis, is built in Studebaker plants. It is constructed to give long, satisfactory service. Only the finest materials are used. Craftsmanship is unexcelled.

It is cradled on long, strong, semi-elliptic springs. The nine-inch seat cushions, upholstered in mohair velvet plush, are restful. The heater, cowl ventilator and the wide windows, among many other features, add to its year-round comfort and utility.

The reliability of the Studebaker Light-Six Sedan has been proved in the hands of thousands of enthusiastic owners.

It is strictly a quality car. Its low price of $1550 is possible only because of complete manufacture in one of the most modern and complete automobile plants in the world. This means the elimination of middlemen's profits, and the savings are passed on to you.

And back of the beauty and dependability of the Light-Six and its completeness, its advanced design and precise workmanship, is the Studebaker name, which after 70 years enjoys public confidence and respect more than ever.

What greater proof of Willys-Knight performance could you ask than this letter from Mr. R. M. Bennett, in which he says:

"In 1914 my father, Mr. E. T. Bennett, purchased the first Willys-Knight car that came to Memphis, Tennessee. This car is now eight years old, and is not only still running but is more powerful and more quiet than on date of purchase. The car has covered more than one hundred thousand miles and has not required one cent in repairs to the motor. The only mechanical work that has been done is the relining of the brake bands. This car is now being used and driven by my brother and has not seen a garage or overhead cover for the past four years."

Incidentally Mr. Bennett just bought a new Willys-Knight Sedan "sight unseen," and took delivery from the freight car without even a demonstration.

43 DOUBLE-FLAT HOUSES FINANCED BY ONE COMPANY

Through Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Firm Builders Start Work in West End to Cost More Than $1,000,000.

ACCOMMODATIONS FOR 172 FAMILIES

Acquisition of Planters Hotel for Office Building Purposes One of the Week's Distinctive Features.

By Berry Moore.

Builders operating under the auspices of the Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Co. have just launched construction of 43 double flat buildings in different parts of the city west of Grand boulevard. Total cost of these improvements, exclusive of the sites, is estimated at $800,000, all of which will be advanced by the Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Co. Plus the cost of the sites, which include many of the most desirable in the West End, the operations will aggregate more than $1,000,000.

These projects include six 4-family buildings for the northeast and southeast corners of Washington and Rosedale avenues, with three buildings on each corner. These flats, alternating in four five and six rooms, will have tile baths, pedestal wash stands, recessed tubs and other modern features.

This operation will absorb the only remaining unimproved corners in Washington Heights west of the Wabash Railway tracks, which was laid out by the Mercantile Trust Co. and which has proved a notable source of profit to both investors and speculators. The Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Real Estate Co. has been a factor in the upbuilding of this part of the city through loans made by it for construction of flats and apartments on a large scale.

The double flat projects announced by this company, including the two Washington avenue sites embrace 67x150 feet on the north side of Waterman avenue, east of Skinker, 115x125 feet at the northeast corner of Rosedale and Washington avenue, 115x125 feet at the southeast corner of Rosedale and Washington avenue, 200x213 feet on the north side of Laclede, east of Euclid, 100x213 feet on the north side of West Pine east of Boyle, 1[illegible]x213 feet on the south side of West Pine east of Boyle, 50x170 feet on the south side of McPherson west of Newstead, 45x170 feet on the north side of Pershing west of Newstead, 100x213 feet on the south side of Forest Park boulevard east of Newstead, 116x213 feet at the northeast corner of Taylor avenue and Forest Park boulevard, 260x195 feet, embracing the Gerhard block at the southwest corner of Taylor avenue and Forest Park boulevard, 130x160 feet on the north side of Taylor avenue south of Forest Park boulevard, and 400x190 feet in Parkview place.

Construction of all these buildings was begun last week with contracts providing for completion within designated periods. Negotiations for the purchase of the sites, started only three months ago, were conducted exclusively by the Anderson-Stocke-Buermann company. The operations are noteworthy, as through the erection of these buildings the house shortage will be relieved to the extent of 172 flats with a single stroke.

Such Buildings in Demand.

The preponderance of the rental as well as of the investment demand is for buildings of this type, which, under present conditions, as a rule, are entirely leased and often sold from the plans before completion. The Anderson-Stocke-Buermann company during the current year has advanced capital for construction in Hi-Pointe aggregating in cost $1,000,000, in addition to that in other parts of the city.

Planters to Be Office Building.

A distinct feature of the week was the execution of deal by which the Planters Hotel is to be converted into an office building of 560 rooms exclusive of the ground floor and basement. As was stated exclusively in the Post-Dispatch on Wednesday, the 99-year lease of the building has ben purchased by a syndicate headed by John M. Robinson, manager of the Pierce Building, who announces that the structure will be converted at a cost of $750,000.

The building was erected about 30 years ago by a syndicate formed by Festus J. Wade from plans made by the late Isaac S. Taylor, architect of the Mercantile Trust Building and other notable structures, and is finished throughout on a sumptuous scale. When the development of the block was projected by Wade, the project contemplated either a hotel or an office building on a large scale and the original plans submitted were available for either, with slight alterations.

C. C. Nelson of Kansas City, who holds a six-year lease of the hotel building, will surrender possession of the premises on Jan. 1, when the alterations for the office building will be started.

According to real estate sources, Robinson is negotiating with several railroads with a view to renting them with office space in the reconstructed building, notably the Pennsylvania, which it is understood seeks large office space in St. Louis. Several years ago the old Southern Hotel, embracing an entire block at Broadway and Walnut streets, and which is an absolutely fireproof structure, was exploited by real estate men as available for a downtown station and office building for railways entering St. Louis from the east. The Pennsylvania Railroad was mentioned prominently in this connection.

The building was bought two or three years ago by John F. Queeny, president of the Monsanto Chemical Co., who it is said recognized the posibilities of this block and building for railroad purposes. As yet he has disclosed no definite plans for its reclamation.

There has not been an office building on a large scale erected in the central business district since the Arcade was completed, owing to the prohibitory cost of construction. Space in existing buildings of this type is at a premium.

New Tenth and Locust Project.

Negotiations are progressing also, it is understood, for the erection of a tall office building at the northwest corner of Tenth and Locust streets. This site, embracing a quarter of a block, is owned by the First National Bank, which acquired it with plans for its improvement with a structure for its own occupancy, but the advanced cost of building material caused the bank to forego these plans.

F. L. Cornwell, attorney, and one of the largest builders in the city, completed arrangements by which the Famous Players Company was to erect a 25-story building on this site, and $10,000 was deposited with the First National Bank as earnest money for the acquisition of the site, pending a submission of the project to the City Plan Commission, which, however, declined to approve it as violating the zoning ordinance of the district.

150 ACRES NEAR CARONDELET PARK SOLD FOR SUBDIVISION

Federer-Arendes Realty Co. to Cut Third of Tract Into Lots at Once—To Be Called Grand-Dover Park.

A notable transaction of the week was the purchase by the Federer-Arendes Realty Co. of a tract of more than 150 acres lying near Carondelet Park, beginning at Grand boulevard and running west to a short distance east of Morganford road, owned by the Missouri Pacific Railway Co. Fifty acres of the tract, lying south of Bates street, on Grand boulevard and north of Carondelet Park, will be subdivided immediately and placed upon the market. The subdivision, which will be known as Grand-Dover Park, will be subdivided in 300 lots.

The Federer-Arendes Realty Co. has planned to improve this subdivision in the same manner as has characterized its previous subdivision projects. Grading, together with construction of streets, sewers, walks and gas and water mains will be started at once.

This tract of land had been in the possession of the Missouri Pacific Railway for more than 70 years, having been acquired by it when the property was considered suburban, with the intention of eventually occupying it with shops. The rapid growth of the city to the south and the development of the surrounding property as a high-grade residential district, however, made this scheme impracticable. Although the property has been sought by both speculators and real estate dealers, it was not offered for sale by the railroad company until this summer. Even then, the size of the tract and the amount of capital required to purchase and improve it made prospective purchasers hesitant. It is one of the most attractively situated subdivisions in South St. Louis, and affords the last opportunity of its kind that can be offered for homes in that part of the city.

The adjoining properties, both to the east and north, have been developed into the choice residence streets.

The Federer-Arendes Realty states it has received many inquiries concerning lots from home buyers.

Contracts for grading of the subdivision have been let.

DR. GIVEN CAMPBELL BUYS SULLIVAN COUNTRY HOME

Edward L. Bakewell reports the sale of the country home of Frank H. Sullivan of the law firm of Jones, Hocker, Sullivan & Angert, on the west side of Berry just south of the Manchester road, to Dr. Given Campbell for $30,000.

This colonial residence has 11 rooms and three baths. The first floor comprises a large modern living room with sun parlor attached, library, dining room, kitchen and pantries; while on the second floor there are four bed rooms with connecting baths, a sleeping porch and two maids' rooms and bath. The grounds embrace 17.9 acres, embellished with forest trees, an artificial lake, shrubs and flowers of all kinds. The premises also include a tennis court.

Dr. Campbell will occupy the residence as his home. In this sale Dr. Campbell was represented by James C. Campbell. McNair Bakewell acted for the seller in the transaction.

BIG BOND INVESTMENT FIRM ENTERS THIS FIELD

G. L. Miller & Co., New York and Atlanta, Opens Offices in Pierce Building.

G. L. Miller & Co., first mortgage real estate bond investment bankers of New York, Atlanta and other Southern cities, have opened a beautiful suite of offices at 124 North Fourth street, ground floor of the Pierce Building. The office is in charge of G. A. Burnett, manager. The territorial work will be in charge of G. A. Golder, vice president, who has handled the same work at the Atlanta office. The company issues bonds secured by first mortgages on income-producing properties, such as apartments, apartment hotels, commercial hotels, warehouses, office buildings and industrial buildings.

The class of securities, as shown by the record, which are underwritten by this firm are high grade with liberal yield. The first mortgage real estate bond, is one of the most highly developed investments of safety that exists, provided it is properly safeguarded, created by experienced experts and offered by a reputable house.

In addition to the many safeguards thrown around Miller bonds, the investor is protected further by the fact that each bond bears the certification of a responsible bank, which insures the investor that he is not only receiving a genuine bond, buy that the legal details of the trust deed and bonds have been passed upon by independent attorneys.

G. H. Miller & Co. has a record of never a loss to an investor. Back of every Miller bond is the additional safeguard of this company's reputation. This firm has financed many of the finest structures in the South. It has also entered the Northern field and is now bringing out several excellent loans which will be made public in the next few days. Local investors will be pleased to learn that they soon will have an opportunity of investing in local issues which, it is understood, will be brought out soon.

WESTMOOR PARK EXPECTS SPRING BUILDING BOOM

Careful analysis by the Joseph Darst Realty Co., selling agents for Westmoor Park, located at the intersection of Pennsylvania avenue and Clayton road, shows that the spring building planned there will eclipse any record locally. Contractors and building planned there will eclipse vacant home sites are rapidly being sold and that the coming spring will cause an unprecedented demand for sites of all classes.

Referring particularly to Westmoor, Darst emphasizes the particularly choice location of this subdivision and mentions the number of out-of-town people who are freely buying at the expense of the residents of St. Louis. Those who wait until spring, Darst continues, will be confronted with the alternative of paying the enterprising early purchaser a profit, or buying undesirable sites far removed from the city's conveniences. The property now being sold commands a wonderful view o fthe surrounding country, the magnificent homes and large estates close by.

BETTER HOMES EXPOSITION A SUCCESS, SAYS M'CAWLEY

Orman J. McCawley, president of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, speaking of the Better Homes and Building Exposition held under the auspices of the exchange at the Coliseum, Nov. 20 to 25, said "that the exposition, viewed generally from the standpoint of the public, the exhibitor and the exchange, proved a success. The attendance tested the capacity of the Coliseum building, and the exhibitors practically without exception report gratifying results.

The Real Estate Exchange booth, which occupied the central position under the band stand, was unique in the fact that beyond its decoration and lighting effects it contained nothing but the word "Realtor" displayed on the four sides of the central upright of the booth, and in the standard form of letters adopted by the National Association of Real Estate boards. A small printed leaflet was passed out to visitors explaining that the word "Realtor" applied only to real estate agents who were members of the Exchanges affiliated with the national association.

SEIBEL NOT ON COMMITTEE BEFORE THE PRIMARY ELECTION

Printed Report Construed as Indicating He Was Not Intended to Convey Such a Meaning.

In an article in Thursday's Post-Dispatch, regarding protests against the consideration of William Seibel, Clerk of the County Court of St. Louis County, for appointment as United States Marshal here, a resolution, adopted by the League of Women Voters of St. Louis County, was referred to, in the following paragraph:

"The resolution recites that several of the judges appointed for the August primary election were criminals and nonresidents, and states the belief that Seibel could have used his influence to oppose their appointment. Seibel, who is chairman of the Republican County Committee, which recommended the primary officials for appointment by the County Court, is a lieutenant of 'Boss' Fred Essen, whose forces were defeated by the Clean Election victory in the general election."

Seibel was not a member of the Republican County Committee previously to the primary election. He was elected to membership on the committee at the primary last August, to represent Central Township, and was elected chairman by the committee. The language used in the statement regarding the recommendations of the committee for primary judges was not intended to convey the idea that Seibel belonged to the committee when those recommendations were made.

Seibel has been Clerk of the County Court since 1911. The recommendations for persons from among whom primary judges could be appointed were filed with the County Court. Seibel, as Clerk, was in charge of the court's papers.

FRENCH SOCIALIST LEADER WILL SPEAK HERE DEC. 5

Jean Longuet, French Socialist leader, will be in St. Louis Dec. 5 and will speak that evening at Sheldon Memorial. He will discuss some of the statements being made by Georges Clemenceau, former Premier of France, in his speeches in this country, the St. Louis Socialist Committee announced yesterday.

Longuet, a grandson of Karl Marx, will talk on "Europe After the War." In a recent interview with a staff writer for the New York World and Post-Dispatch, he declared Clemenceau did not represent the real spirit of France, but stood for "a militaristic, jingo government, born in the hysteria of war and dedicated to the twin principles of rage and spite." France of today, he said, is seeking peace by establishment of international co-operation.

His visit to St. Louis will be immediately after that of Clemenceau, who will speak here Dec. 2.

1921 TAXES IN U. S. SIXTH OF INCOME

Levy Declared to Be Making Inroads on Surplus Necessary for Progress.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—One sixth of the National income of the United States went into taxes in 1921, according to a report issued today by the National Industrial Conference Board.

"The tax bill in the United States is fast making inroads on the surplus necessary for economic progress," the report declared, "and threatens materially to hamper our growth, especially in view of the uninterrupted rise in local Government taxes."

According to the report, the United Kingdom stands first in the burden of taxes with the United States second and other countries in the following order: Germany, France, Italy and Japan.

Growth of Taxation.

Regarding the growth of taxation, the report said:

"In the fiscal year 1913-1914, taxes paid to national, state and local governments in the United States represented 6.4 per cent of the national income. By 1919-1921 the ration had grown to 13 per cent and by 1920-1921 to 14.3 per cent. In the calendar year 1921, one sixth of the current national income was diverted into tax channels for the support of Governmental bodies in the United States."

Continuing on the situation in the United States, the report said:

"Before the war, state and local taxes had been growing faster than Federal taxes, and Federal taxation constituted but three-tenths of total taxation. In 1919, however, Federal taxation constituted over three-fifths of total taxation and in 1921 Federal taxes amounted to slightly more than one-half of the national total. State and local burdens began to share equal importance with Federal taxation.

Comparisons in 1919.

"In sixteen states, Arizona, Florida, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico North Dakota, South Dakota, Utah, Washington and Wisconsin, state and local tax burdens per capita in 1919 exceeded Federal taxation per capita.

"Per capita tax burdens in the United States in 1919 were highest in New York state, $148.36, followed by Massachusetts, $125.35. Delaware $124.41, Rhode Island, $115.25, and Michigan $105.71, the lowest per capita tax being in Alabama, $26.47."

DRIVER OF DEATH CAR FOUND GUILTY OF KILLING POLICEMAN

Two Chicago Union Men Tried in Connection With Case Are Acquitted by Jury.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25. — Fred ("Frenchy") Mader, former president of the Chicago Building Trades Council, and D. J. McCarthy, union business agent, were found not guilty by a jury tonight at their second trial on charges of having slain a policeman as the culminating act in a campaign of terrorism directed against an arbitration wage award in the building trades.

John Miller, confessed driver of the automobile from which came the shots that killed the policeman, was found guilty and his punishment fixed at 14 years in the penitentiary.

BACON'S MANTLE MAY FALL ON JEFFERSON

Last of Famous Thespian Family Gives His Views on Role of "Lightnin' Bill" Jones.

Theatergoers are wondering if the death a week ago today of Frank Bacon, the noted actor, does not mean that Thomas Jefferson, last of a famous Thespian family, will assume the mantle of "Lightnin'" Bill Jones, in which he is now playing in St. Louis even as he assumed the mantle of Rip Van Winkle from his father, Joseph Jefferson.

It is a logical conclusion that he will, though no word has been forthcoming on the subject from the producer of "Lightnin'." In reality, though Bill Jones passed away when Frank Bacon died in Chicago, Bill Jones still lives when Thomas Jefferson speaks the merry lines in St. Louis.

It is a case of like father, like son; like creator, like follower. There was a striking physical resemblance between the elder Jefferson and his son; a photograph of Bacon and Thomas Jefferson, taken recently when the latter played in Peoria, Ill., shows these two to have had the same general characteristics—both were elderly and grayed, both wore horn-rimmed glasses, but Bacon was less frail, while, in one critic's opinion, Jefferson was the more appealing.

Realizes Dramatic Inheritance.

The present "Lightnin'" Bill realizes his dramatic inheritance from Bacon. In an interview with a Post-Dispatch reporter at his hotel, after a matinee, he told how he felt about it, and sketched bits of his career. Slim and almost boyish in his movements, his features and actions are those of a courtly actor of the old school. His walk is quick and almost jerky; when he speaks he shifts, from subject to subject, but the lack of continuity seems unimportant.

A Red Cross button and a lodge emblem shone out from the lapels of his brown coat as he met the reporter in the lobby, an apology for a little lateness upon his lips. "Let us go to the mezzanine," he said. It developed that he needed few interviewer's prompts.

"'Lightnin'' is a lovable old character," he said. "I like to play him. Really, he is the modern American Rip Van Winkle. Both of them talked a great deal, but did no harm by it. Both of them drank too much. They were both queer old fellows. Yes, 'Lightnin'' is the new Rip. Will I assume Frank Bacon's place? I cannot say. For one thing, I do not know what the booking arrangements will be.

Famous Thespian Family.

"I suppose you know my family is the oldest one on the stage? The first Jefferson who was an actor was Thomas Jefferson, who began acting in 1717, and played with David Garrick in England. Then there was Joseph Jefferson and Joseph Jefferson II, my grandfather, and Joseph Jefferson III, my father. Come to my room, I'll see if I can find their pictures."

In his room he rummaged about some scrapbooks, talking as he moved.

"My grandfather played Rip Van Winkle for 17 years," he said. "My father played it for 45 years, and I played it for 25 years. I guess the last time I apeared in that part was 12 or 14 years ago. I played Rip in St. Louis at the Old Olympic and Century Theaters, and my father played it at the Olympic. * * * I'm sorry; I cannot find those pictures.

"I shall have a strange experience at Washington University next Monday. A professor there, who is a nephew of the late Eli Hilles Larkin, has a record of my father's voice, which his uncle recorded on a phonograph. It is a scene from 'The Rivals,' played by my father and the late Billy (W. J.) Florence. I shall know that voice, but won't it sound strange? I think they are going to play the record before the students.

Found Movies Uninteresting.

"I went to California 10 years ago to play in the movies. I'm glad to be out of them now. It is very uninteresting to work in the pictures. If you do good work there it is not like on the boards, where applause encourages you, or laughter meets your jokes. In the movies all you see is a cameraman, perhaps, looking bored or glancing at the sky to see how much sun is left. Why, you felt that another man could come from a dry goods store and do your work. Now I am back, and in a beautiful part—I just love it."

Has Three Daughters.

'My father died at Palm Beach, Fla., in 1905. He had four sons: Joe, who was an actor, and Charlie, who started the theatrical firm of Klaw & Erlanger, and who are dead, and Will, who used to be an actor, and myself, who are living. My children are all girls—there are three of them—none is an actress—they are all married out of the profession."

Jefferson's company, which starts it second week at the American Theater today, is scheduled to go to Milwaukee and other northern cities next week. It had been planned for Bacon's company to close in Chicago, after more than 2000 performances there and in New York, Dec. 9, and then open in Boston Christmas day for an indefinite stay. There is a third company, headed by Milton Nobles, playing "Lightnin'" in Southern states.

PRIORITY FOR EXTENSION OF NATURAL BRIDGE LINE URGED

Resolution Adopted by Board of Directors of the Chamber of Commerce.

The Board of Directors of the Chamber of Commerce has adopted a resolution urging that the proposed extension of the Natural Bridge street car line along Natural Bridge avenue, from its present terminus just east of King's highway, to Pine Lawn, be given priority over all proposed extensions and changes in routing of the United Railways system.

Copies of the resolution were sent to President Aloe of the Board of Aldermen and Adam Reis, Sixteenth Ward Alderman, who is chairman of the Public Utilities Committee of the board. A delegation from the Natural Bridge Improvement Association recently appeared before the Public Utilities committee in protest against any extensions or re-routings of the United Railways lines until the Natural Bridge extension had been made. They contended that the first consideration should be the furnishing of service where none now exists. An extension of this line would serve the new northwest industrial district.

K S D CONCERT TERMED PRACTICALLY PERFECT

Third Successful Broadcasting of Local Orchestra Music Effected by Station.

The concert of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, given last night at the Odeon, was successfully broadcasted by Station KSD and reached hundreds of thousands of music lovers and radio enthusiasts in all sections of the United States. This was the third successful broadcasting of a concert by the local orchestra, and the transmission was said by local experts to have been the best of all. Many tests carried out in the last three weeks made it possible to get the exact position for the microphones for producing the best results, and it was said by musical and radio authorities who listened in last night that transmission was practically perfect.

An announcement made by radio during the intermission was that Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover will make an address by radiophone from Station KHJ of the Los Angeles Times-Mirror this evening at 6 o'clock, Pacific time, which will be of especial and vital interest to radio listeners. Station KSD was requested to make this announcement, so that all who desire may be ready to hear Secretary Hoover this evening.

The program announced for broadcasting on Monday will be given by Daniel Sheehan, pianist, and Olivia Marting, soprano. There will be addresses by Ross Crane, noted interior decorator, and Harold Hess of the St. Louis Safety Council. Crane's subject will be "What I Would Do if I Owned a City." Hess will talk about fire hazards of winter heating.

PLANS MADE FOR 1500 ORPHANS TO SEE CIRCUS AT COLISEUM

Carl Hagenbeck-Wallace Show to Be Here During Week Starting Dec. 4.

The Carl Hagenbeck-Wallace circus will perform at the Coliseum here during the week of Dec. 4, under auspices of Moolah Temple, Ancient Arabic Order of the Mystic Shrine. Members of Ainad Temple East St. Louis, are expected to attend in a body on the opening night.

Plans are being made to have 1500 orphans from 15 St. Louis institutions attend the matinee Dec. 5. Phil R. Appel, real estate man with offices in the International Life Building, is raising a fund with which to purchase tickets for the orphans.

Heat Your Home With Oil

REMEMBER—Cold weather is only a few weeks distant. An "OLIVER OIL BURNER," installed in your present heating apparatus, will bring you comforts and conveniences impossible with coal. With the turn of a valve you get as much or as little heat as you want —and WHEN YOU WANT IT. No more fires to build—no more dirty, heavy coal to shovel and carry—no more dirt and labor with ashes—no more sickness from uneven heat—no more worries about coal shortages, poor quality of coal, or high prices. Our "OIL BURNER" can be installed in ANY furnace—warm air, pipeless, hot water or steam, at a VERY REASONABLE PRICE. Sold with an "IRON-CLAD MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE." Phone or write for particulars, or call for demonstration.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity, when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope

JANE.—The quotation is taken from the Ballad of Reading Goal, by Oscar Wilde.

READER.—Luminous paint for watches can be secured at the shops.

MRS. C. A. D.—Dressmaking schools are listed in the city directories.

SEAMSTRESS.—You can obtain the large spools of thread at any of the department stores.

O. B. X. W.—The Webster Groves Orphan Home is located on North Gore avenue.

W. H. K.—St. Louis is a separate municipality. It is not in a county.

BEL.—The St. Louis city limits extend north, as far as Coalbrant road.

SUBSCRIBER.—To remove old paint or varnish coats, apply a mixture of five parts of potassium silicate (water glass, 36 per cent), about one part of soda lye (40 per cent), and 1 part of ammonia. The composition dissolves the old varnish coat as well as the paint down to the bottom. The varnish coatings which are to be removed may be brushed off or left for days in a hardened state. Upon being thoroughly moistened with water the old varnish may be readily dashed off, the lacquer as well as the old paint coming off completely. The ammonia otherwise employed dissolves the varnish, but not the paint.

HOUSEPLANTS.—Have you looked to see if the plant is being destroyed by worms at the roots, has ample fresh soil, or that there is no gas escaping in the house? All these things will help to kill them in time. They may require repotting, the roots having grown too large for the pots, thus harming the plant. Be careful in watering, do not overwater or let the pot stand in water which decays the roots. Saturate the earth and about once a week spray the leaves, using a bath spray to cleanse them. Give them an hour's sunshine a day. If this sort of care does not help to revive them, they may be dying of old age.

D. M. C.—To make Chili con carne: Clean, singe and cut in pieces for serving, two young chickens; season with salt and pepper and Saute in butter. Remove the seeds and veins from 8 red peppers, cover with boiling water, and cook until soft, then mash and run through sieve. Add 1 teaspoon salt, 1 onion finely chopped, 2 cloves of garlic finely chopped, the chicken and boiling water to cover. Cook until the chicken is tender, then remove to the serving dish and thicken the sauce with 3 tablespoons each of butter and flour cooked together; there should be 1½ cups of sauce. Canned pimentoes may be used in place of red peppers. To barbecue meat it should be dressed, seasoned and roasted on a spit over an open fire. Usually a hole is dug in the ground, the fire built in this, then the meat is placed on a spit and turned while roasting.

INTERESTED.—The name El Dorado is Spanish for "the gilded." The term applied first to a South American King said to cover his body annually with gold dust and bathe in a sacred lake, then to a fabled golden city, and finally to a fabled country abounding to an almost inconceivable degree in gold and precious stones. The legend, the origin of which has never been satisfactorily explained, took many variant forms, while the mythical King and his equally mythical dominions were shifted with the utmost facility from one part of the continent to another. The story fired the imagination of the gold-hunting Spaniards, who expended vast sums in sending out exploring parties, most of which returned decimated by privations, fatigue and disease. The name has since been applied to any place abounding in gold or in opportunities for acquiring sudden wealth, and more to a county in California and a city in Colorado. Reference is frequently made to the El Dorado legend in literature and especially in poetry.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

H. I. M.—The tenant can be compelled to move, if he has no lease.

THANK YOU.—The notary who makes out the tax can also acknowledge them.

A. D. S.—The marriage of second cousins is permitted in the State of Missouri.

BOY.—In the congested district automobiles may pass a street car which has stopped, if they clear 6 feet from the lower step or running board of the street car.

X. Y. Z.—If you signed a contract the school can sue you for the tuition and garnish all of your wages in excess of $15 per week, according to laws in Illinois.

BOB.—If your brother-in-law annoys you or molests you, you can sue him for damages and can also have him bound over to keep the peace.

QUERY.—The shed must be built on the man's own land. It ought to be built so that the water will drain on to his own land, not on to his neighbor's. Even though the shed is already built, moving it can be arranged.

JOHN.—The concern will have to pay him whatever price for the stock they agreed to pay him. He cannot compel them to buy it at the book value unless they have agreed to do so.

EMPLOYE.—If you were engaged for a six week's period, they had no right to dischage you at the end of three or four days, especially as they assigned no reason for doing so. You can sue the firm for your wages for the six weeks period.

WONDERING.—There is no ordidance against shaking the rugs from an upper veranda as far as we know. However, when doing it people below and porches below should be considered and whether you are creating a nuisance or not.

HOMELESS.—If your wife refuses to return to California with you, you can sue her for divorce on the ground of desertion. As you intended to return to California and came to St. Louis only for a visit, legally you would be regarded as still a resident of California.

MRS. J. L. K.—If the man has a chattel mortgage on the furniture, then if you fail to make your payments promptly he can take the furniture and sell it. If the furniture brought more than the balance which you owe the dealer, then the excess after deducting the costs of the sale would be turned over to you.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

INQUIRER.—The trouble, no doubt, is entirely functional. We advise teaspoon doses of Aletris cordial at 4 hour intervals.

CROSS-EYE.—The trouble can sometimes be corrected by the use of glasses, if not, by surgical operation.

OLD READER.—The blood pressure at any age would be influenced by abnormal conditions which may be present. At your age we think your blood pressure would be normally about 150 to 155.

C. H.—The trouble cannot be cured without an operation, but can be cured by the injection method. The injection method is simple, painless and does not necessitate confinement to a hospital.

K S D—The matter referred to being a habit the will must be exercised in its correction. No one can prevent your continuance if you do not determine to stop. Any irritating causes should, of course, be removed or taken care of.

MRS. W. A. B.—It is necessary to know exact conditions to advise whether a cure or correction is possible and what would be best for correction of the trouble. You certainly do not expect to correct such a condition by self-treatment. Consult a physician.

THANK YOU.—We suggest the use of Quici oxidi lotion for red hands, dabbed on and let dry every 3 or 4 hours. If after a time this does not correct the condition cover the hands at night with Lassar's paste spread on gauze or cotton, continuing to use the lotion during the day.

B. T.—Most insomnias are due to a derangement of the general health. The cure is the location and treatment and cure of such derangement. Most of these cases need study, as the derangement is often obscure. Temporary relief is of course easy, but drugs engender a habit and should be avoided, excepting when they are absolutely necessary to tide over emergencies. Insomnia does not exist in a healthy body, therefore the cure is to bring the body to normal or to relieve the mind of cares.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of my dear husband and father, John A. Hoffman, who departed this life, Nov. 25, 1914. Gone but not forgotten.
Sadly missed by WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In loving rememberance of my dear mother, Sarah A. Burns.
Sadly missed by
SON, RELATIVES AND FRIENDS.

In sad, but loving, memory of our dear son and brother, Clarence F. Arnold, who departed this life Nov. 26, 1918:

Today recalls sad memories
Of our loved one gone to rest,
And those who think of him today
Are the ones who loved him best.

Sadly missed by all who loved him. (c)

In loving memory of my dear father, James Lawrence, who died Nov. 26, 1921:
I think of you, father, in silence,
No eyes can see me weep,
But many a silent tear I shed
While others sleep.
Sadly missed by his daughter,
ESTHER.

In loving memory of our darling daughter and sister, Earline Esther Werner, who departed this life Nov. 29, 1920, in her fourth year. Depths of our sorrow we cannot tell the loss of our darling we loved so well.
Sadly missed by
PARENTS, BROTHERS AND ALL WHO LOVED HER.

In memory of our dear daughter and sister, Lulu Roller, who departed this life four years ago, Nov. 25, 1918.
Oh how sad we feel today we missed your smiling face,
With all our friends and kindred near, no
One can take your place.
Sadly missed by
PARENTS, SISTERS AND BROTHERS.

We desire to extend our sincere thanks to the relatives and many friends for their beautiful floral offerings, kindness and sympathy shown us in our sad bereavement through the loss of our darling little daughter and sister, Thelma. We also wish to thank Reverend Wahl for his kind words of consolation; also Stock & Co. for their kind services.
MR. AND MRS. ROY PEARCE AND DAUGHTER, ALMA.

In memory of our darling baby, Marie Frances Weber, who departed this life Nov. 25, 1921:
But grief and care will never dim
The brightness of her dancing eyes;
The laugh that was so merry here
Is merry still in Paradise.
Sadly missed by
PARENTS, GODPARENTS AND ALL WHO LOVED HER.

In memory of my dear wife, mother and grandmother, Mrs. Charlotte Bartels, who departed this life one year ago, Nov. 22, 1921:
Upright and just in all her ways,
Faithful and honest to the end of her days;
With one so loving, kind and true,
Though hard it was to part with you.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND, CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN.

In loving memory of our dear father, John H. Marsh, who departed this life one year ago, Nov. 27, 1921.
Upright and just in all his ways faithful
And honest to the end of his days,
Forgotten to the world by some he may be,
Dear to our hearts and memory he will always be.
Sadly missed by his CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN.

In loving memory of our dear mother, Anna Wieners, who departed this life four years ago, Nov. 30, 1918:
Upright and just in all her ways,
Faithful and honest to the end of her days;
Forgotten to the world by some she may be,
But dear to my heart and memory she will always be.
Sadly missed by her daughter,
MISS MANDA WIENERS. (c)

In loving memory of our dear mother, Anna Weinberg, who departed this life one year ago, Nov. 25, 1921:
When evening shadows are falling
And we are sitting all alone,
To our hearts there comes a longing
If only mamma would come home.
Beloved mother, true and kind,
No friend on earth like you we'll find.
Sadly missed by
DAUGHTER AND GRANDCHILDREN. (c)

In memory of George H. Boekers, whose death occurred two years ago, Nov. 29:
He was upright and just in all his ways;
Faithful and honest to the end of his days;
Forgotten to the world by some he may be,
But dear to our memory he will always be.
Anniversary Requiem Mass at Our Lady of Perpetual Help Church Wednesday, Nov. 29, at 7:45 a. m., and at St. Engelbert's Church Friday, Dec. 1, 7:45 a. m.
MRS. EDNA BOEKERS AND CHILDREN.

In memory of our beloved son and brother, Stephen A. English, who departed this life, Nov. 26, 1921.
One long year has passed since that sad day,
When one we loved was called away,
God took him home, it was His will,
But in our hearts he liveth still.
Requiem mass, Monday, Nov. 27, at 8 a. m., at Holy Name Church.
Sadly missed by
FATHER, MOTHER, BROTHERS AND SISTERS.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of my daughter, Mildred Beahan; my son-in-law, Tom Beahan, and mother, Mrs. Schutz:
Four years roll by;
What grief since that sad day,
Three loving ones were taken away.
MRS. LULU ERBE, loving mother.

In loving memory of our dear son and brother, who departed this life Nov. 22, 1918:

The stars are softly shining
Upon the lonely grave,
Where sleepeth without waking,
Dear Eugene, we loved, but could not save.

Sadly missed by father, mother, sisters and brother. (c)

In loving memory of our darling daughter and sister, Teresa Kister, who departed this life four years ago, Nov. 23, 1918:
She bid no one a last farewell,
Said good-by to none;
Her loving heart had ceased to beat;
Before we knew it she was gone.
Her cheery smile and kindly ways
Are pleasant to recall.
She had a kind word for each one,
And died beloved by all.
Sadly missed by father, mother, sister and brothers, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Boggiano and family, St. Charles, Mo.

Myrtle Walton (nee McFarland), died four years ago, Nov 23, 1918.
You are gone but not forgotten by the one who loved you dearly.
Sadly missed by parents, daughters, sisters and brothers. McFARLAND FAMILY.

In sad and loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Anna Decker, who departed this life five years ago, Nov. 26, 1917:
God's golden sun is shining upon our mother's grave;
The one we loved so dearly, and tried so hard to save;
And when we lost you, mother, we lost our dearest pal.
We love you and we miss you, and forever shall.
So, rest in peace, dear mother; you're safe in heaven's bower.
The day when we shall meet you grows nearer every hour.
Sadly missed by husband and children and all who knew and loved her.

In memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Bertha Link, who departed this life Nov. 21, 1916:
In our fancy we can see you,
Like a star your light does shine,
That will lead us as we travel
Down the path of life's decline.
Oh, 'twill be a glorious greeting
When we meet on yonder shore;
Sadness will be turned to gladness,
Then from you we part no more.
So rest in peace, dear mother,
You're safe in heaven's bower,
The day when we shall meet you
Grows nearer every hour.
Sadly missed by:
SONS, DAUGHTER, SON-IN-LAW AND GRANDCHILDREN.

FRANKLIN

FRANKLIN 1920 5-passenger touring. This light, economical, high-grade touring car is in first-class mechanical condition, has been refinished by us in Brewster green, renickeled, and has every appearance of new. The Franklin is the most practical car for year-round use, as it has no water to freeze or boil, is easy to operate, easy riding and will give you 20 miles per gallon on gas and 15,000 to 20,000 miles on cord tires. $1100.

FRANKLIN TOURING 1921. 5-passenger; cannot be told from the present car, and is in excellent mechanical condition, with new paint, and almost new tires; at this time of year Franklin cars are in great demand, account of air cooling, and this car is a real bargain at the price asked. If you want a car for real service and economy, consider this one and you will always be glad that you bought a Franklin.

STUDEBAKER TOURING 1922. Light 6 model, very little mileage; every part in perfect condition; a genuine bargain.

FRANKLIN 1921 7-passenger touring; a car that has seen no abuse; repainted and renickeled, cannot be told from new; equipped with wire wheels and Kelly cord tires, two bumpers. Look this over and see for yourself the wonderful value. $1450.

OLDSMOBILE 1920 5-passenger touring; repainted and renickeled; in A1 condition; 80 per cent new tires; a snappy buy at $485.

HOLMES TOURING, 7-passenger; is air cooled; late 1921; used by a careful driver, who takes real care of his cars. This car was taken in on a sedan a few days ago. We have gone over it carefully and had it repainted. It's a real car and a real bargain. If you buy this car you will be satisfied and you'll never drive anything but an air-cooled car again. See it, ride in it and decide for yourself. $1100.

FRANKLIN 9 Touring, reconditioned; A1 condition. $600.

We also have the following cars that have been put in first-class condition:

Opportunity Day

HAS ARRIVED—TAKE ADVANTAGE OF IT!

Now Is the Time to Buy a Good Used Car

We have had a WONDERFUL sale of NEW STUDEBAKER MOTOR CARS all this season. It usually lets up in the late Fall, but STUDEBAKERS have sold just as readily as they did in the SPRING and SUMMER MONTHS.

The only difference is people are now buying more closed cars than they did in the Summer. In fact, 66% of all our sales this month have been CLOSED CARS. This makes it a little hard for us, because CLOSED CAR BUYERS always have a car to TRADE IN.

We have PICKED out the best and have taken them in at prices that we know would SELL THEM. We have the following SPECIALS FOR THIS WEEK. See them if you are thinking of buying by Spring. They will be a good deal higher when the weather is warmer. You had better save money by buying NOW.

Ford 1921 Sedan
Auburn 1921 Touring
Hudson 1921 Speedster
Dodge 1921 Roadster
Elcar 1920 Touring
Studebaker 1919 Special Touring 6
Willys-Knight 1922 Coupe
Lexington 1921 Touring
Gardner 1921 Touring
Studebaker 1921 Special 6 Coupe
Roamer 1922 Touring
Studebaker 1921 Special 6 Sedan
Studebaker 1920 Big 6 Touring
Oakland 1919 Touring
Studebaker 1921 Special 6 Roadster
Ford 1921 Coupe
Dodge 1921 Touring
Liberty 1920 Touring
Dodge 1920 4-Door Sedan
Moon 1919 Touring
Ford 1922 Coupe
Chandler 1919 Sedan
Hudson 1920 Coupe
Westcott 1920 Sedan
Jordan 1920 Brougham
Chandler 1920 Chummy

The above is a list of SPECIALS FOR THIS WEEK. No better bargains can be had in St. Louis. You should see them before you buy.

ACTION SOUGHT ON GRAIN FUTURES ACT

Chicago Board of Trade Would Suspend Operation of Law Until After Decision.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—A motion to advance the hearing of the appeal of the Chicago Board of Trade from the decision of Judge Carpenter at Chicago in the case brought to test the constitutionality of the grain futures act will be made in the Supreme Court Monday, and the court will be asked to suspend the operation of the act until 20 days after it gives its decision.

In the brief which will be submitted by Henry S. Robbins, counsel for the Chicago Board of Trade, it will be pointed out that similar suits have been filed in the courts by the other principal grain exchanges of the country which trade in futures, and that by agreement the other cases are to abide by the final decision in the Chicago case.

Declaring that the "grain futures act" was enacted to take the place of the "future trading act" which was held by the Supreme Court to be unconstitutional in all its regulatory features as beyond the taxing and commerce powers of Congress, the brief asserts that "the new act re-enacts verbatim all the regulatory provisions of the former act," and is therefore quite as objectionable.

Instead of forcing the exchanges to become "contracting markets" by a prohibitive tax on all future contracts not made by its members upon a qualifying exchange, the brief states, the present act seeks to attain the same results by imposing a penalty and imprisonment upon any person who makes a future contract for grain except through a member of an exchange which has become a contract market.

"In other words," the brief continues, "the grain futures act is the same as the future trading act minus the tax imposed to enforce and plus a provision making noncompliance by members of the exchanges a crime."

The new act, it is asserted, attempts to support its validity by reciting that manipulation upon the exchanges causes sudden and violent fluctuations in prices, which constitute a burden upon interstate commerce in grain. But this is not true, the Chicago Board of Trade contends, and in support of its position it will submit to the court a chart of wheat prices in Chicago covering a period of 81 years and will present the affidavits of 22 professors of political economy in prominent universities of the country.

Unless there is a stay in the enforcement of the law pending final decision traders will become confused, the brief says, "and desist from futures trading, thereby curtailing the market resorted to, especially at this season of the year, for 'hedging' by those who are now buying extensively the farmers' grain."

The importance to the public and to the grain exchanges of an early decision as to the validity of the new act is so apparent, the brief adds, that no argument will be presented to support that part of the motion.

—REMEMBER—YOU NEED— TO GET ONLY 3 SUBSCRIBERS

Surely, you can persuade three friends or relatives who do not now read THE POST-DISPATCH to each subscribe for a term of six months for the daily editions at 50c a month, and help you to earn a Saddlekick! And surely you'll agree, when you see the Saddlekick, that the award of so worthy a prize is extremely generous payment for the effort necessary to get THREE SUBSCRIBERS to St. Louis' ONE BIG Newspaper.

Carefully read the terms of this great offer. Send the enrollment blank at once, and be first in your neighborhood to earn a Saddlekick. Start today.

The Saddlekick* Is Not on Sale in St. Louis Stores. The Manufacturers Have Promised to Give Their Entire Output to Boys and Girls in POST-DISPATCH Territory. The Manufacturers Tell Us That the Saddlekick Has a Retail Value of $7.50—But YOU Can Get One ABSOLUTELY FREE!

PARENTS: Santa Claus could bring no more acceptable gift for a red-blooded boy or girl than the SADDLEKICK. See samples on display in the Circulation Department of the POST-DISPATCH 12th and Olive Sts.

Send the Enrollment Blank at Once and Be the FIRST in Your Neighborhood to Earn a Saddlekick.

NOTE—We expect to quickly absorb the factory's production of Saddlekicks and must make the offer subject to withdrawal without notice. If sufficient supplies are available, we propose continued distribution of Saddlekicks to and including Saturday, December 23, but we recommend that every boy and girl eligible enroll without delay.

Terms of the Offer—Read Carefully

Offer is open only to boys and girls who are not identified with the sale or distribution of the POST-DISPATCH, and who reside within St. Louis carrier delivery limits, including East St. Louis, Belleville, Granite City, Venice and Madison in Illinois; and Kirkwood, Webster Groves, Florissant, Valley Park and Maplewood in Missouri.

3 subscriptions are required—each for 6 months. No extra credit for yearly subscriptions.

New subscriptions are required—from persons not now reading the Daily POST-DISPATCH, whether purchased from newsboy or newsdealer, or delivered by carrier.

Daily subscriptions are required. No credit allowed for Sunday POST-DISPATCH subscriptions. A Sunday POST-DISPATCH reader who has not been reading the Daily POST-DISPATCH may subscribe through you under this plan.

Verified subscriptions are required. We investigate the validity of the order and the subscriber's responsibility. All orders are received subject to acceptance or rejection by the POST-DISPATCH.

Home-Delivered subscriptions are required. Business district readers are better served by newsboys and cannot be included under the terms of this offer. This makes necessary a definitely restricted area, and orders will not be accepted for delivery within the district bounded

TWO MEN ARE SHOT IN POOLROOM BRAWL

Police Unable to Discover Who Started Shooting at 111 North Broadway.

Detectives last night were trying to unravel the mystery of who started the shooting in a pool room at 111 North Broadway, at 8:20 p. m., and which resulted in the critical wounding of John Underwood, 27 years old, of 1938A Penn street, and the injury of the proprietor, Peter Theodore, 40 years old, 6452 Oakland avenue.

Underwood, who said he was a bellman at the Planters Hotel until about a week ago, was shot through the right arm, the bullet then penetrating his right side and lodging inside. An internal hemorrage led physicians at the city hospital to believe his lung had been punctured. Theodore was cut over the left eye by glass when a showcase was shattered by a bullet.

Policemen who heard the shots found the poolroom deserted, except for Theodore, holding a revolver in his hand. Discarded poolballs and cues showed the haste with which customers had departed.

Meanwhile, three young men, who said they had started to enter the poolroom, took Underwood to Police Headquarters, and said they had seen him stagger out, wounded, and throw a revolver away. Theodore said that Underwood, whom he had known about six months, came to the poolroom and created a disturbance about 6 p. m. Theodore said he ejected him, after he had refused to leave. Underwood came back and started shooting at 8:20 p. m., Theodore declared, and Theoore admitted that he returned the fire till Unerwood left the place.

Theodore was taken to confront Underwood, and Underwood declared, in the presence of Chief of Police O'Brien, that Theodore was the man who shot him. Underwood denied that he had fired any shots, but said he had gone to the place to play pool and was attacked by some quarrelsome strangers, after which he was shot.

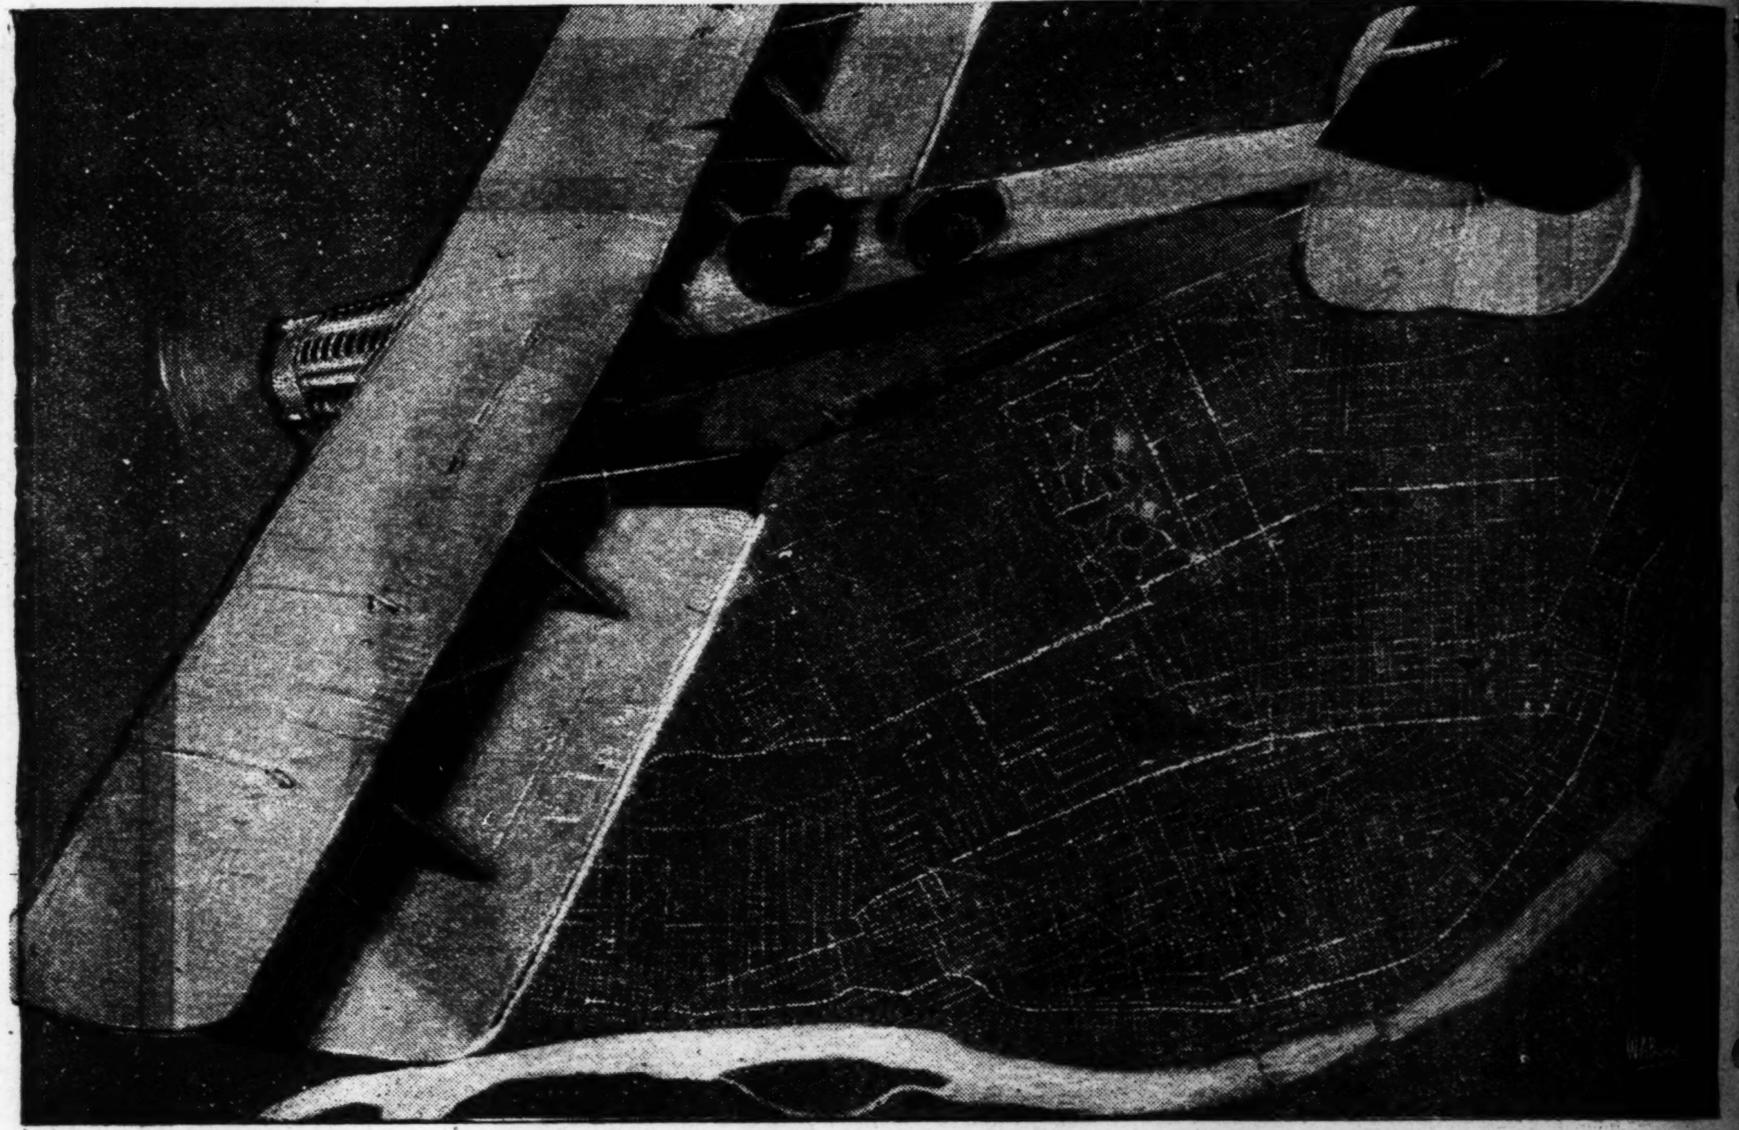
What You See as You Fly Over St. Louis at Night

A Jeweled City in Dazzling Moonlight



WHILE many St. Louisans have viewed this city from an airplane by day, very few have had the opportunity to see it by moonlight from above the clouds. This experience befell a Post-Dispatch reporter who ascended from Scott Field by courtesy of Col. Chalmers G. Hall, Commandant, to greet Lieut. John A. MacReady of the Army Air Service, on his recent attempt at a nonstop flight from California to New York.

MacReady had written that he would pass over this city about 2:30 a. m. As has been told, he got lost above Eastern Kansas and was late reaching St. Louis, but did pass over about 4 a. m. and was forced down by radiator trouble at Indianapolis.

The reporter, in the following article, gives an account of what he observed over St. Louis while reconnoitering the skies for sight of MacReady.

The city is like an artistic design studded with countless blinking lights—Broadway's graceful curve contrasts with the sharply defined squares of downtown and the diagonal thoroughfares to the west, while the river is like a silver ribbon—Above earth's vapors, the moon is so bright that one gazing at it has to squint one's eyes.

IT WAS 2:40 a. m. when we ascended from Scott Field. Like Arctic explorers, we were clad in heavy furs as protection against the crisp, chill air that one encounters in high altitudes, especially at night. We soon surmounted the dim, foggy mists that lay close to the earth as we climbed into the infinite through mellow moonlight.

Once above these earth vapors, we found something in the heavens that only the wonders of aviation can disclose to man, an unobscured view of the moon, constellations and stars that are set in "that inverted bowl we call the sky."

Heading westward at first, with the nose of our mechanical bird tilted upward as though in defiance of the elements that so long decreed that man should not fly, we passed over Belleville and East St. Louis. Their lights were partly obscured by a dense pall of smoke, through which the moon valiantly sought to illuminate the slumbering precincts of Southern Illinois.

At 4000 feet and still climbing, we passed above the Mississippi River and were far over the veil of vapors that always obscure much of the beauties of the universe, be the night ever so clear.

It is known that mists and gases constantly given off by the earth dim the brilliance of the heavenly lights to the man on the ground, and to view the universe in the splendor of its pristine beauty one must be high above the murky atmosphere in which we dwell.

These vapors are more dense than we imagine, unless we pause to reflect upon what makes the sun so dim on the horizon. This, as has been often explained, is because we see it when low, through thousands of miles of land and sea vapors that tone down its brilliance. It is more brilliant when directly overhead because this pall does not extend beyond a height of a few thousand feet.

If the brilliant sun is dimmed by earthly atmosphere, what must be the deteriorating effect upon the gentle moonlight that suffuses the time of our dreams with a celestial sheen?

What must Wells, the pilot, think of this new world so recently disclosed to man? A glance out of the rear pit at the aviator's emotionless countenance disclosed only an interest in the prospect of sighting MacReady.

As for things of beauty—

"A primrose by a river's brim,
A yellow primrose was to him—
And it was nothing more."

To Wells it was all in the day's work as he pointed our mechanical marvel upward, upward, upward, so that he could peep over and beyond a towering fogbank in the far southwest that rose majestically like a translucent iceberg.

Apparently unaffected by the wonders that unfolded themselves before his vision, Wells directed the plane this way and that in sweeping, graceful maneuvers that thrilled one with the beauty of their rhythm, while the huge Liberty motor that lifted us higher and higher emitted violet-hued flames through the exhaust pipes on either side of the fusilage.

A mile high over St. Louis at 3 o'clock in the morning, in virgin atmosphere! The sky became an immaculate azure that only artists dream of; so pure a color that it may be copied forever without producing a shadow of its like.

There was a moon in full radiance such as man on earth had never seen, and the Pleiades, that conspicuous loose cluster of stars in the constellation Taurus, how they cast sparkling smiles upon the airmen!

They seemed delighted with the call of the two adventurers, these seven daughters of Atlas and the nymph, Pleione. Greek mythology informs us that these stars were once maidens and were transformed into stars, the invisible seventh concealing herself out of shame for having loved a mortal.

Viewed from a height of 5000 feet the moon cast brilliant, bluish beams upon St. Louis that were transformed into multicolored and fantastic shafts as they encountered and shot through the earthy gases and shimmered on the housetops damp with dew, while similar beams, playing upon the river's bosom, made it appear like a silvery ribbon.

The effect of looking down from a great height upon the city bathed in moonlight is like that of gazing through a screen upon a stage setting suffused with soft electrical effects. St. Louis appeared from above like a landscape of artistic design studded with innumerable blinking lights.

In contrast with the sharply defined squares of the downtown blocks, the southwestern part of the city, with its diagonal thoroughfares, impressively heightened the effect, while Broadway, from end to end, at a glance, skirted the city with a sweeping and graceful curve. Outstanding thoroughfares marked by the more brilliant lights were Grand boulevard, stretching to Broadway on the north, and King's highway.

Tiny, moving lights here and there denoted the moving vehicles, automobile headlights being discernible as distinguished from the lights of street cars.

Pale-red and dim were the lights of the city and they seemed to flicker in an effort to match the brilliance of the constellations. But the tiniest star, as seen from on high, outshone them all and seemed to twinkle with amusement at the feeble effort from below.

Off to the west were the county villages and towns, appearing no larger than one's hand and sleepily blinking at the sky, and far away to the south, 40 to 50 miles, one could discern the faint outlines of the glow of other towns.

MacReady was not in sight. He had lost his way and toured the heavens for 500 miles off his path before getting back. Still circling above the sleeping population of St. Louis in the brilliant night above, Wells was becoming bored.

"It's of no use," he remarked. "I think we ought to return to the field; nothing doing up here."

The moon at that height was so bright that one had to squint the eyes to look it in the face. We ought to remain up always, I thought, but our gas was getting low, and as the faithful engine would soon require replenishment of the things of the earth, I reluctantly agreed with the prudent pilot that it would be best to leave the world of the stars.

Shattered Romance of American Girl Who Hoped to Be Queen

Granddaughter of Irish immigrant climbed almost to the throne before little incident in Paris put an end to the dream—Varied marital experiences of Helen Kelly-Gould-Thomas, who was wooed by a Prince on a bobsled—Planned to finance campaign to make her husband King of Albania :: :: :: ::

THE Prince and Princess sat together in a Paris theater. Onto the stage slipped a lithe and sinuous dancer from Damascus, a beauty of a distinctly Oriental type who might have played a star part in the Thousand and One Nights' Entertainment.

Leaning over toward his wife, the Prince, impulsively and not too gently, detached a corsage boquet of white orchids from the Princess' bosom and tossed it to the dancer on the stage. And at that instant the fabric laboriously and expensively reared by a climber who aspired to be the first American Queen to sit upon a European throne came tumbling about her ears. It was in effect as cataclysmic as if someone had yanked the throne away as she was about to take her seat.

The Prince in this case was His Royal Highness Nureddin Vlora, claimant to the throne of Alabania, whose father had been Grand Vizier in the Turkish court of Sultan Abdul Hamid. The Princess, born Helen Kelly, was the granddaughter of Eugene Kelly, who came as an immigrant from County Tyrone, Ireland, and would have felt miserably out of place in any royal court. Grandfather Kelly was not a social climber, but he knew how to get to the top of the financial ladder. He applied this knowledge so diligently that he became one of New York's most powerful bankers and the rival and bitter business enemy of Jay Gould, maker and breaker of railroads.

Many a gigantic battle for control of railroad properties was waged between Gould and Kelly. Their enmity was a byword in Wall street and so intense did it become that it extended even to the social life of the Goulds and Kellys and assumed almost the menacing proportions of a family feud.

Grandfather Kelly died in the early '90's, full of years and in the consciousness that he had left his family well provided for. This provision took the form of stocks, bonds and property valued at many millions of dollars.

The enmity of the Gould and Kelly families continued until, in the third generation of the house of Eugene Kelly, love broke down the barriers of hate and New York one morning found itself gasping with surprise at the announcement that Helen Kelly, granddaughter of Eugene Kelly, had announced her engagement to Frank J. Gould, youngest son of Jay Gould. Though the wealth of the Kellys and the Goulds was approximately equal, the Gould family was then at the height of its financial and social power, and many a climber would have given a great deal to break into its charmed circle. The wedding of the daughter of the house of Kelly and the son of the house of Gould was regarded as a matter of moment not only in the social but also in the financial world because it marked the burying of the hatchet by the two powerful families and merged two great fortunes.

The marriage was not happy. The rapprochement between the families did not last long. There were quarrels and several separations for brief periods, due in part to lack of continued friendly feeling between Gould and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Edward Kelly. At one time, it was said, the mother-in-law was barred from the Gould home.

Mrs. Gould sued for a legal separation in 1908. Her husband retaliated by employing detectives to watch her. This so angered her that she sued for an absolute divorce, and this was granted to her in 1909. She received $108,000 cash, in lieu of dower rights, and $40,000 a year alimony.

A year later she became the wife of Ralph Hill Thomas, nephew of Washington B. Thomas, a wealthy sugar refiner. Thomas died of pneumonia in 1914, leaving an estate of $2,000,00 to his widow.

Though once divorced and once widowed, Helen Kelly-Gould-Thomas was not plunged in gloom. In fact she attracted much attention by reason of her vigorous gaiety. As a dancer she showed an excess of vigor usually displayed only in more strenuous athletic pursuit. It was said of her admiringly that in Paris she tangoed so stressfully that she injured herself so badly that an operation was necessary and that while in the hospital she fretted at the enforced inactivity and expressed her eagerness to go tangoing again. In all outdoor sports she was an energetic player and was known at home and abroad as a perfect example of the athletic American woman.

She was following the winter sports in Switzerland when she was introduced to Prince Vlora. He was a strapping fellow, six feet tall and very muscular, with a bright, open countenance and a hearty laugh.

This has been called "the bobsled romance." Soon after the introduction the Prince invited Helen to go coasting with him on his bobsled, which he had named "Creme de menthe." Alpine coasting is one of the most exciting and exhilarating of sports. The invitation was readily accepted and the Prince and Old Man Kelly's granddaughter took many wild slides down the snowy slopes. All this happened about five years ago. They were married in New York a few months later.

The wedding was private and simple, but it brought into view a royal prospect. Albania had no King, but was eagerly looking for a suitable candidate for the throne. Prince Vlora believed his chances as good or better than those of other pretenders. His Princess, still with an ambition to climb, felt that it would be a great distinction for America if one of its heiresses should ascend a throne. Word went out from Paris that Princess Vlora was preparing to invest her fortune in the project to make her husband King. Truly, the bobsled romance was rising to a pinnacle of glory.

The union of the Prince and Princess Vlora had been a curious juxtaposition of temperaments. Their first bond had been that peculiarly Occidental thing, athletics and outdoor sport. But the Prince was at heart a levantine. Beneath his tastes of mountain sledding and rough climbing, quite natural in an Albanian, lay the mood of the seraglios of Stamboul, of coffee houses and supple-bodied dancing girls, and in the progress of his married life he revealed certain characteristics that were really too exotic. It was not that the Princess disliked the exotic. Incense, candles, batik, statuettes of Buddha—these no advanced American woman can disdain. But there were the dancing girls.

The Princess Vlora in her Alpine sport costume.

The royal dream that faded when the Prince threw flowers to a dancer.

Paris was caught by the enchantment of the East. All sorts of strange personages from Asia were received and feted everywhere. In the theaters Oriental dancers were all the rage.

Prince Vlora took his Princess to the theater constantly. She noted the fervor with which he applauded the dancers from the outlands. She was disturbed. Might not these haunting Islamatic reminders lure her Prince away from the monogamy that Mohammed never taught?

One night the Prince and Princess sat and watched a slim, dark girl, a dancer from Damascus, as she writhed on the stage. The Prince watched her with an infatuated gaze. When she had done he turned to the Princess. On her bosom lay a boquet of white orchids. He snatched the flowers and tossed them at the feet of the dancer.

With this, the throne of Albania underwent a change of destiny. The Princess Vlora would renounce a royal crown rather than stand for any such goings on by a husband. The Prince was too fond of the theater. That was just like the Goulds. It was all right to fancy the drama as a means of expression, or to take an artistic interest in the playing of players, but those admirations that go so far as to tear the orchids off a wife's bosom to throw to a dancer—that was too much. The cables soon carried the word that one American woman, at least, would not become a Queen. The Prince and Princess Vlora had separated.

And now a French divorce court has sealed this change in the destiny of nations.

WHO KILLED POOR ANNA WILKENS?

HELEN LANGE.

MRS. ANNA WILKENS

HENRY WILKENS.

All San Francisco wept for Henry Wilkens when, returning from a picnic, his wife was shot and killed, as he said, by bandits — Now Henry Wilkens is held for the murder of his wife—Astounding confession of man who says he drove the death car—Two other murders and a suicide have been direct results of investigation :: :: ::

WHEN Henry Wilkens carried the body of his wife, Anna, into a San Francisco hospital the night of May 20 last and was told by the doctors that she was dead, he cried in heart-broken anguish: "Why didn't they shoot me instead of her? They have taken all I have." Then he fainted.

And the next morning, when the newspapers told how Anna Wilkens had been shot and killed by automobile bandits in the presence of her devoted husband and their two small children, all San Francisco wept for poor Henry Wilkens.

Now that same Henry Wilkens is on trial for his life, charged with his wife's murder. At the first trial a jury disagreed. Many who wept for him are now clamoring for his conviction. The strange ramifications of the case have led to two other murders and a suicide. Charges of blackmail and collusion have been bandied about. A sister of the slain woman has besmirched her own good name in open court and two attorneys have been sentenced to jail for contempt.

Returning to San Francisco in an automobile from the picnic grounds at Felton, Wilkens, his wife and their children, Henry, 8, and Helen, 4, were overtaken by a strange car. The 8-year-old boy tells the story:

"When the other automobile drove up beside us, mamma told us to get under the blankets and pretend we were sick. Then I heard a man tell papa to give him all the money he had. A few seconds later came the pistol shot. Then mamma said: 'He shot me right in the heart.'"

Wilkens, summoning a passing machine, carried his dying wife to the hospital, with the story that Mrs. Wilkens, seeing one of the bandits take aim at her husband, threw herself in front of him, and received the bullet through her heart.

Then came the astounding confession of Arthur Castor, who drove the death car.

Today San Francisco is asking the answer to three questions:

Has the maniacal suicide of Walter Castor, brother of Arthur, appeased the cry for vengeance for the murder of poor Anna Wilkens, killed mercilessly and without offense, in the presence of her husband and two little ones?

Will Arthur Castor, who confessed to driving the death car on the evening of the murder of the helpless woman, be called upon to pay the penalty? He has implicated himself, his brother Walter, and charged the husband, Henry Wilkens, with being the instigator.

Or will Henry Wilkens, the husband, enmeshed in a tangle of contradictions, be made to pay the full penalty?

Many of the facts of the tragic evening are undisputed. As it neared the city limits the Wilkens car was crowded to the roadside by another. At this point events are obscure. Henry Wilkens tells his own version. One man jumped out, and, with drawn gun, demanded money. Wilkens gave the robber three $100 bills. Then the bandits saw two diamond rings on Mrs. Wilkens' fingers. They ruthlessly tore these rings off. Wilkens reached for his gun to protect his wife. Mrs. Wilkens threw herself in front of her husband to save him with her own life. The bandit shot.

The State Automobile Association offered a reward of $5000 for the capture of the murderers. The story of the $100 bills was printed in the newspapers.

Not long after came the Castor confession. It fell like a bombshell upon the city. And then, on the basis of this confession, came another startling development, involving Wilkens with the beautiful sister of his wife.

On the witness stand, pretty Helen Lange, the murdered woman's sister, a girl just recently arrived from Germany, told of Wilkens' attentions to her before and after the crime.

As though this were not enough to add to the sensational features of the strange case, Walter Castor, hunted by the police, slew one police officer and the wife of a brother, Robert Castor, and then killed himself.

On June 1 the two Castor brothers, Walter and Arthur, were questioned at police headquarters. Arthur Castor had tried to get a $100 bill changed at a garage. In their possession when detained they had two $100 bills. Captain of Detectives Matheson kept one of these bills, telling them they could return in two days and get it. They did not return. Instead they left town immediately.

Wilkens had been called to the police station to identify the Castor boys. He stated that he had never seen them before. Later developments showed that he had worked with Walter Castor in an automobile truck house for five months. So well did they know each other that they familiarly called one another Walter and Henry.

The Castor brothers were well known to the police. Their father, Charles Castor, had been a respected member of the San Francisco police force 11 years ago. He was killed while trying to arrest a murderer. Walter Castor had served five years in San Quentin prison for the murder of William Dwyer in San Francisco in 1912. He was then 18 years of age. At the time of his arrest he was on probation for burglary.

Another new development that cast suspicion on Wilkens was the revelation that Mrs. Wilkens had filed suit for separate maintenance on May 8, asking $150 a month from Wilkens. She alleged cruelty. On May 1, she said, he had taken her to an attorney's office and there tried to persuade her to sign papers that would give him a divorce. Wilkens said the filing of the separate maintenance suit was all a mistake.

Wilkens stated that the death car was a Dodge. Attorney Garfinkle, his wife and son, who, in a passing machine, rendered aid to Wilkens the night of the murder, said the car was a Hudson. Later they identified a car hired by Walter Castor the day before the murder. It was a Hudson.

On June 9 Wilkens was subjected to a test on the famous lie-detecting machine of the Berkeley police force. This machine purports to show accurately the psychological reactions of the person examined. Wilkens was questioned relative to the murder of his wife. Dr. Larson of the Berkeley department said the machine indicated that he answered truthfully.

Up to this time the San Francisco public had been bitterly assailing the police for persecuting this man, who had been bereft by bandits. The police were accused of trying to cover up their own inefficiency. Wilkens was near a nervous breakdown. He was permitted to go to Seigler Springs with his children to recuperate.

June 13 Arthur Castor was arrested at Eureka, Cal., on a bad-check charge and returned to San Francisco. He then confessed to his attorney, William Herron, that he had driven the death car on the night of the murder, and implicated his brother, Walter, and Wilkens.

Arthur asserted that a few days before the murder he had gone with his brother to Wilkens' office to deliver a tire. While there Walter talked with Wilkens. When they left Walter said he had a "job to pull off" soon and would give Arthur $450 to help him, the confession said.

On Decoration day, Arthur avers, he drove the Hudson car, with his brother in it, to Felton. They parked the car and waited until Walter had talked with Wilkens. Soon after the conference Wilkens started for San Francisco with his wife and children.

According to the confession, by pre-arrangement with Wilkens, they followed closely. When Wilkens gave the signal by blinking the tail lights of his car the pursuing machine closed in, crowding the Wilkins car to the curb. Walter jumped to the running board of the other machine and Arthur drove on a few feet in the dense fog.

He heard a shot and the cry of a woman. Then Walter came running to the car and ordered him "To beat it from the neighborhood." Arthur asked about the shot and Walter's answer was: "Never mind about that. Beat it out of here."

Arthur said Wilkins had conferred with Walter the day before the murder.

This, in brief, is the Castor confession, which the defense has charged was the result of a frameup to railroad Wilkens.

Arthur Castor is an auto mechanic, 25 years old, and married. He was promised immunity for making the confession.

Another Castor brother, Robert, said he sold his two brothers the machine in which they escaped to Eureka. Wilkens paid a part of the purchase price, he said.

On the strength of the confession Wilkens was arrested at Seigler Springs on June 14 and formally charged with the murder. At the same time a warrant was issued for the arrest of Walter Castor.

Then came the revelations of Helen Lange as to Wilkens' friendship for her.

This new development created a sensation, for it apparently furnished a motive for the murder.

For six weeks the police hunted for Walter Castor. Then a telephone tip from a woman informed them that Walter was hiding in San Francisco.

Four policemen rushed to the home of Mrs. Robert Castor, known to the police as Annie Downs Castor. She was found at home and told them Walter had spent the night there and had gone to the home of his mother.

The police, with Annie Downs Castor, rushed to the family home of the Castors on Kansas street. Mrs. Minnie Castor, the mother, opened the door in response to their knock. She denied that Walter was there.

Annie Downs Castor loudly replied: "He was with me this morning and started for here." In this way she warned Walter that the police were there, but she also sealed her own fate, for he knew she had betrayed him.

Rather than frighten Mrs. Castor, the police entered the house without drawn guns. This act cost them dearly. Walter was waiting for them, armed. Detective Sergeant Timothy J. Bailey was the first man in the house. Walter shot him through the heart. He then turned his pistol on Detective Ernest Gable and shot him through the eye. He fired two shots at Detective Jere Dinan, both missing. Dinan fled for help.

With curses for her betrayal of him, Walter then followed Annie Downs Castor into a bedroom and shot her to death. He then shot and killed himself.

Walter had 50 rounds of ammunition on his body when he killed himself. His gun was .38-caliber, the same caliber that killed Mrs. Wilkens.

When the case came to trial in September the defense maintained that Walter Castor alone had planned and executed the crime. Wilkens was declared to have become reconciled with his wife, and to be a maligned man who was being railroaded in order to allow the District Attorney's office to secure a conviction. Charges of frameups were hurled back and forth.

Two cellmates of Castor swore that he had admitted to them that he had lied in making the confession. The reputation of these witnesses was torn to shreds.

Helen Lange told of her relations with Wilkens amid the sobs of the spectators. With his frame heaving in convulsive shudders Wilkens admitted the Lange girl's charges, but said he had confessed to his wife and been forgiven.

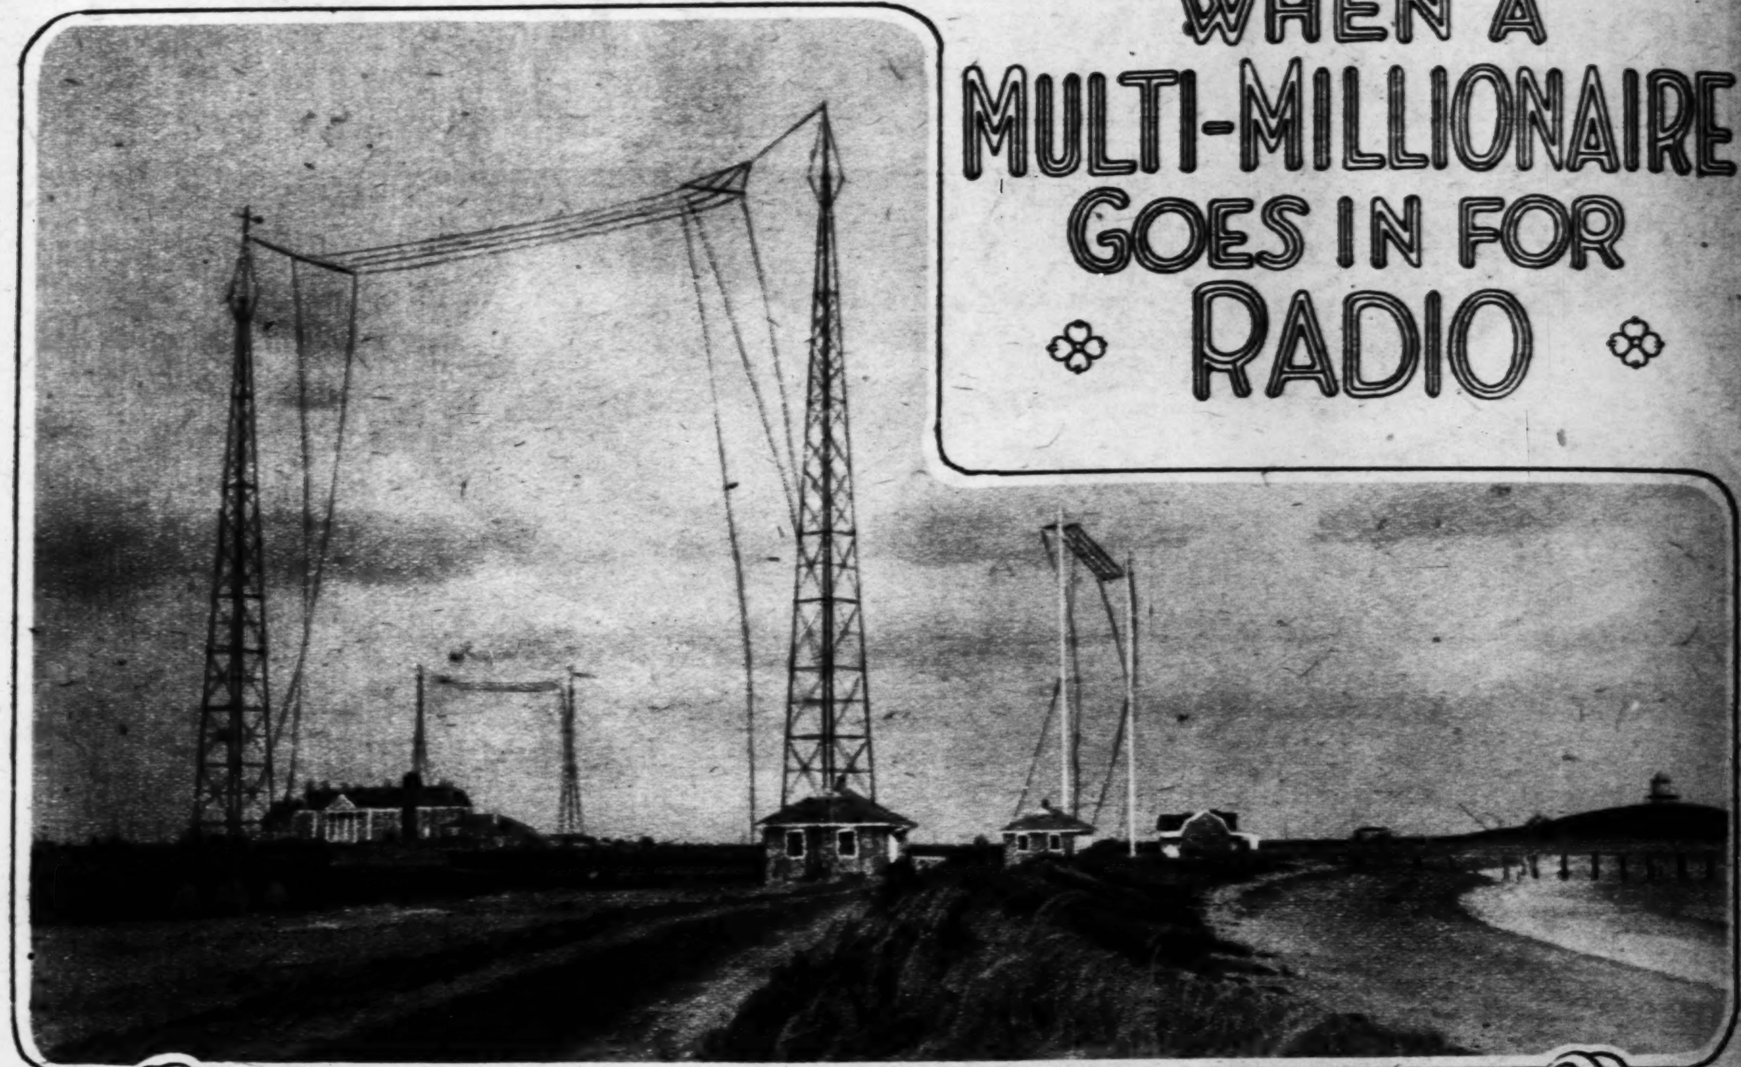
Even the jurors wept when Wilkens told of the night of the murder and reiterated that the deepest feeling in his life was the love for his wife—that he loved her and her alone. At one time, when the prosecution grilled him unmercifully and forced him to go over the details of the killing several times, he cried out piteously:

"Could you ask me to repeat these details so often if your wife had been killed in that way?" Then he collapsed.

Either Henry Wilkens is a consummate actor, or he is a weak man who is being fiendishly "framed" in an effort to secure a conviction. The three women members of the jury voted for acquittal. The jury split six to six, after six weeks' trial and 23 hours' deliberation.

Foreman Howard C. Tibbitts said that those who voted for acquittal thought the State had not proved the guilt of Henry Wilkens beyond a "reasonable" doubt. Those who voted for conviction placed little credence in Castor's story and less in Wilkens'. They convicted on corroborative evidence and disregarded both the story of the accused and the accuser.

WHEN A MULTI-MILLIONAIRE GOES IN FOR RADIO



A view along the beach of the 253-acre estate of Col. Green, showing three sets of towers for radio aerials.

At his estate on Buzzard's Bay, the son of Hetty Green has built the largest amateur experimental station in the world—His plan to aid progress in the science includes free lectures by staff of experts, annual prizes of $5000 and $2000 for best ideas of amateurs, use of his plant for experimental purposes and invitation to college professors to test their own theories there in summer, on Col. Green's payroll

IF THE late Hetty Green were alive today she would be amazed, and perhaps scandalized, at the use to which the millions that she accumulated by hard work and shrewd investment are being put. At the time of her death she was the richest woman in the world. And yet she might be pleased, for vast sums of the money are being devoted to a worthy and practical purpose by her son, Col. Edward H. R. Green, who today is so crippled that he cannot get around actively like many of the young men he plans to help.

Col. Green is one of the most enthusiastic of the many thousands of amateurs whose receiving and transmitting stations dot the United States and Canada.

On his big estate, called "Round Hills," at South Dartmouth, Mass., about eight miles from New Bedford, and on the wind-swept shore of Buzzard's Bay, he has built the biggest amateur experimental station in the world. There is a powerful broadcasting station and another being built, a big loud-speaking tower, which sends music for miles over the country, and one of the finest radio laboratories to be found anywhere.

Here Col. Green keeps open house for radio enthusiasts, offering them free use of the facilities afforded by the laboratory, the paid engineering staff and the great assemblage of radio apparatus. Trained engineers, radio experts and skilled workmen of all kinds are now busy erecting on the Round Hills estate a new group of radio broadcasting, reception and experimental stations which will be the most powerful in the country. The undertaking is not for his personal profit. Whatever discoveries may be made at this big plant will be the property of the discoverers, if they choose to benefit; otherwise the discoveries will be given to the great and fast-growing radio public.

Col. Green believes that the future advancement of radio lies much in the hands of the enthusiastic amateur, who will spend days and nights working over some little problem, testing and experimenting for the sheer fascination and love of the thing, without thought of ultimate profit. Some of these amateurs may have brilliant ideas, but, through lack of means, may be unable to work them out. He intends to aid these enthusiasts in testing their theories, no matter what the cost. The expectation is to have everything in readiness by next June, when schools and colleges will close and students who are interested in radio can employ their summer vacation for experiments. Col. Green will establish a free school for amateurs, at which a picked staff of instructors and radio experts will give lectures and teach the advanced part of the science. Other professors will be given a chance to test out for themselves, without cost, any theories they have developed. All the while expert experimental work will be going on, and radio enthusiasts may witness or participate in some, at least, of these experiments.

As one part of his plan, Col. Green will offer a prize of $5000 in cash and a gold cup, both to be awarded to the amateur who is judged as having furnished the idea that has advanced radio farthest during the preceding year. There will be a second prize of $2000 and a silver cup going to the originator of the next best idea.

A second feature of the plan is to send out a call to amateurs offering the free use of this tremendously efficient and powerful plant in the furtherance of amateur work and for amateur experimental purposes. Thus an amateur may take his set to Col. Green and may try it out on any of the efficient apparatus now being installed.

The third feature of the plan is to aid the college professor, who, handicapped, perhaps, by a small salary, though prolific in ideas, is unable to carry on any experimental work outside of his classroom. In the spring a call will be sent out inviting professors to visit Round Hills if they desire. After a hearing, those with promising ideas will be placed on Col. Green's payroll and maintained on the place during the summer for as long a time as they need to conduct their experiments.

They may either build their own sets from materials furnished by Col. Green or have the sets built by his engineers according to their own specifications and under their own direction. They may then hook up their sets on some one of the efficient antennae at the plant.

The loud-speaking tower device is unique, and is one of the developments of Col. Green's own ideas. The tower looks like an old-fashioned Atlantic coast lighthouse. On the gallery of the tower are mounted four large wooden horns. Connection is had with the studio, a short distance away, where the amplifying apparatus is located. This reproduces music and speech with such intensity that it is directed through the horns for a distance of four and one-half miles, clearly and distinctly. Yachting and fishing parties far out in the bay have heard the broadcasting and wondered whence it came.

The four great steel masts to be used in the new broadcasting stations and the four wooden ones now in use can be seen for miles before one reaches the estate, which is located right on the shore of the bay and extends for 253 acres inland and along the shore. A fine macadamized road has been built from the estate to join with the main highway into Dartmouth and New Bedford. An artificial pond has been constructed on the estate, and a beautiful gateway entrance is also under way.

Col. Green has turned his big sun parlor into a radio laboratory, filled with all sorts of apparatus. It might be the radio amateur's idea of heaven, with its profusion of amplifiers, receiving sets, loud speakers and transmitting sets scattered about.

Just outside the house is a pair of 100-foot steel towers which will be used for the new 500-watt station now being constructed near by. Transmitting tests are at present being made on a 100-watt station, about a quarter of a mile from the mansion. This carries an "A" license. The new station will carry a "B" license.

"It is pure selfishness," said Col. Green of his radio plans and experiments. "I am interested in the thing for the pleasure it gives me. I believe, however, that the pleasure afforded by the radiophone should be accessible to every man—not only to the rich, who can have the best of apparatus installed, but to the poor man who must obtain his outfit at a low price, or not at all.

"My aim is to hasten the advent of the low-priced receiving set, to cost not more than $25, which will really be reliable, sensitive and simple in operation. When the majority of people are contented, wars and strikes will be unknown. The way to keep them contented is to keep them entertained in their own homes. The radiophone does that better than any other agency I know of. If I can hasten the day when every home will be equipped with a radio receiver I will be content.

"Our experimental station call is Q L X V. That will take care of nine different transmitting stations. Our broadcast call is W M A F. This carries the 50, the 100 and the 500 watt stations. We are having these different stations all built for experimental purposes only. We have 18 orders out now for different types of loop aerials. What we are after is the practical loop aerial, and we will test them all to see which is the best.

"At present we have four steel masts to carry antennae, each 146 feet high. Then we have eight wooden masts, 125 feet high, and there are three 12-foot loop aerials. The Round Hills radio station is out for quality, not quantity, and we have a unique system for receiving our own broadcasts back by telephone and thereby judging of their quality. At various places on Cape Cod and in other sections, receiving sets have been distributed and others will be distributed, to receive the Round Hills broadcast. Then through the telephone the broadcast reception will be returned to Round Hills, and thus we shall be able to judge of the quality of our broadcasts and not be obliged to depend upon reports from others. One of these receiving sets has been installed in the life-saving station at Cuttyhunk, and another at Broadway and Forty-second street, New York City.

"We have found that the tides affect the wave length. Once at the house here I got terrible reception from our own broadcast and called up the broadcast building to see if they were still on the same wave length. Finding that they were, I instructed them to investigate. Finally they found that the tide had dropped four feet since the broadcasting had begun, which drop had changed the wave length.

"We are having a band room prepared, with a different type of transmitter from that used for soft music or for the human voice. The latter will not go through it, but a brass band with a bass drum, which usually sounds badly, will go out beautifully. We will have special microphones for each station—one type for voice, another for the organ and another for band music. Whatever we do will be either for quality or for experiment. To anyone who listens to our broadcasting of 400 meters the result will be either excellent or rotten."

Once a year the station will publish articles giving full details of all that has been discovered during the previous year, and this will be available for general use.

Col. Green cited the case of five little boys in New Bedford, the oldest only 12, as a sample of what he proposes to do for the young amateur. They had each built a receiving set, but could not make them work, and journeyed to Round Hills seeking help in their difficulties. With Mr. Price of the Western Electric Co., who was at Round Hills at the time, Col. Green worked over their sets at the 100-watt station and had six of the 10 sets the boys brought with them functioning before they departed. There are hundreds of such boys, as well as young men and experimenting college professors, whom the Colonel wants to help.

"We are not going to do the way the big telephone, electric and radio companies do," said the Colonel—"buy up new ideas and patents and quietly shelve them because they are such radical improvements that the companies would have to scrap hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of apparatus already made up to sell. We are going to give the boys a chance to put their ideas and inventions before the public.

"We shall institute the prize contest with a board made up of one representative from the newspapers, one from the colleges, one from the radio amateurs, one from the engineering societies and one representing the Round Hills Radio Corporation. These five will act as judges. Then we shall invite amateurs throughout the world to submit their ideas to the board."

The mystery of Col. Green's interest in radio is really no mystery when the facts are known. He became an enthusiast back in 1898, but through pressure of business was obliged to drop it. Not long ago, during an illness in Texas, he wanted something to help pass the time and recalled his interest in radio. He took it up again, and resolved to make it a hobby worth while. Now he thinks, eats and sleeps in terms of radio.

MISSOURI'S WONDER CHILD TO WHOM THE FAIRIES GAVE A GOLDEN VOICE

An intimate and revealing study of 15-year-old Marion Talley, of Kansas City, whose voice stood the supreme test before experts of the Metropolitan Opera Company—Though she is a high school girl her hair has never been bobbed—Her home town has so much faith in her that it will provide funds for her further musical education—Has twice sung leading grand opera roles ::

THERE are two stories in Marion Talley, 15-year-old Kansas City musical prodigy, who so electrified blase New York grand opera experts that, after hearing her sing, they predicted that she would some day be a Metropolitan Opera star.

One is her golden-toned voice. It has left the musical world speechless in wonder.

The other is her hair. It has never been bobbed. And Marion is a junior in high school and will be 16 years old next month.

Marion Talley, heralded as Missouri's future Patti, Galli-Curci, Melba, in her recent triumph in New York has scored one for the antiflappers.

Persons seeing her for the first time puzzle their brows and wonder how she possibly could happen in this age of Hawaiian-haired, joy-riding, self-conscious youth.

Missouri's golden-voiced girl at her desk in her Kansas City home.

She seems to have stepped out of some old album of the past, a quaint, old-fashioned little girl, with a skirt well below her knees, her slick, brown curls falling naturally over her shoulders, without trace of a "rough" or ribbon, or even a coquettish hairpin. They form the frame for her round, childish face that knows not powder, rouge nor lipstick and out of which her tranquil blue eyes regard the world with trust and innocence.

The girl's personality is almost as unusual as is her voice. When Kansas City, last spring, following Marion's debut with the Kansas City Grand Opera company, woke up to the knowledge that a potential prima donna was in its midst, there was a scramble to see, as well as to hear, the child singer.

The night following her appearance in the title role of "Mignon," Marion occupied a box at the opera with her parents. All eyes in the house were turned frequently to the little girl who, in her simple dress, sat listening to the music, unconscious of the attention being focused upon her.

Murmurs of comment spread through the audience. And out of these most frequently echoed the words: "And she hasn't even got her hair bobbed."

Marion wouldn't mind having it bobbed, she says. She was almost the only girl at Manual Training High School last year with long curls. But Mrs. Talley, Marion's mother, wouldn't permit such a procedure. And that settles it for Marion. She still is an obedient little girl, retiring and modest, who speaks when she is spoken to, who "minds her books, plays with her toys," yes—and even "thinks of something besides the boys." No one ever has been able to find that she has given boys a passing thought except that of calm friendliness.

So carefully sheltered has the girl been in her upbringing that her mother has accompanied her on every music lesson she has taken except one.

The Talleys live in a simply furnished apartment at 1309 East Ninth street, in Kansas City. The baby grand piano dominates the interior. Charles M. Talley, Marion's father, is a telegrapher for the Missouri Pacific Railroad. Although born in Nevada, Mo., Marion has lived most of her life in Kansas City. Her center of interest always has been her home—her parents and her sister Florence, two years older than herself, who plays her accompaniments.

Marion Talley coming home from school.

Going to Sunday school and taking part in the church entertainments have been the main diversions of the Talley sisters.

Marion is of a religious turn of mind. She has worked in Christian Endeavor and, until recently, when her musical duties became so strenuous, she taught a class of little girls at the Independence Boulevard Christian Church.

Last Christmas she found time from her school studies and from her lessons in voice, piano and violin to make each of her pupils a little bouquet of wool flowers.

Marion has expressed a wish that she might use her voice in religious singing. But grand opera promoters are not likely to let her elude their grasp. In her recital in Kansas City recently at which, under the auspices of a group of citizens, $10,000 was raised to pay for her musical education, she chose religious songs—which she loves best—"Angels Ever Bright and Fair" and "No Night There," for her opening and closing numbers.

At her farewell to Kansas City before leaving for New York, she sang one Sunday night in the First Christian Church, where her voice was discovered. The song she chose was "The Lord Is My Shepherd." Hundreds were turned away that night and crowds stormed the sidewalks in front of the church.

Students of the subconscious mind would find an interesting study in the method in which Marion Talley's gifts manifest themselves. Not only does she sing without the slightest effort, but her other music, her violin and piano, come naturally to her and she disposes of her school studies with the greatest ease. With all of her manifold duties, the girl never is rushed, hurried or nervous.

Last spring when Marion was rehearsing nightly for her roles with the Kansas City Grand Opera company, Mrs. Talley became fearful that she would lapse in her school studies.

"Don't worry, mother; I'll pass all right." Marion would tell Mrs. Talley.

She came home the last day of school, swinging her sailor hat by a cord and cried triumphantly: "Well, mother, I passed in everything."

Although Marion is so deeply interested in music that she is loath to spend many hours away from it, yet she always has "kept up" at school without burning midnight oil. As a child, music was dearer to her

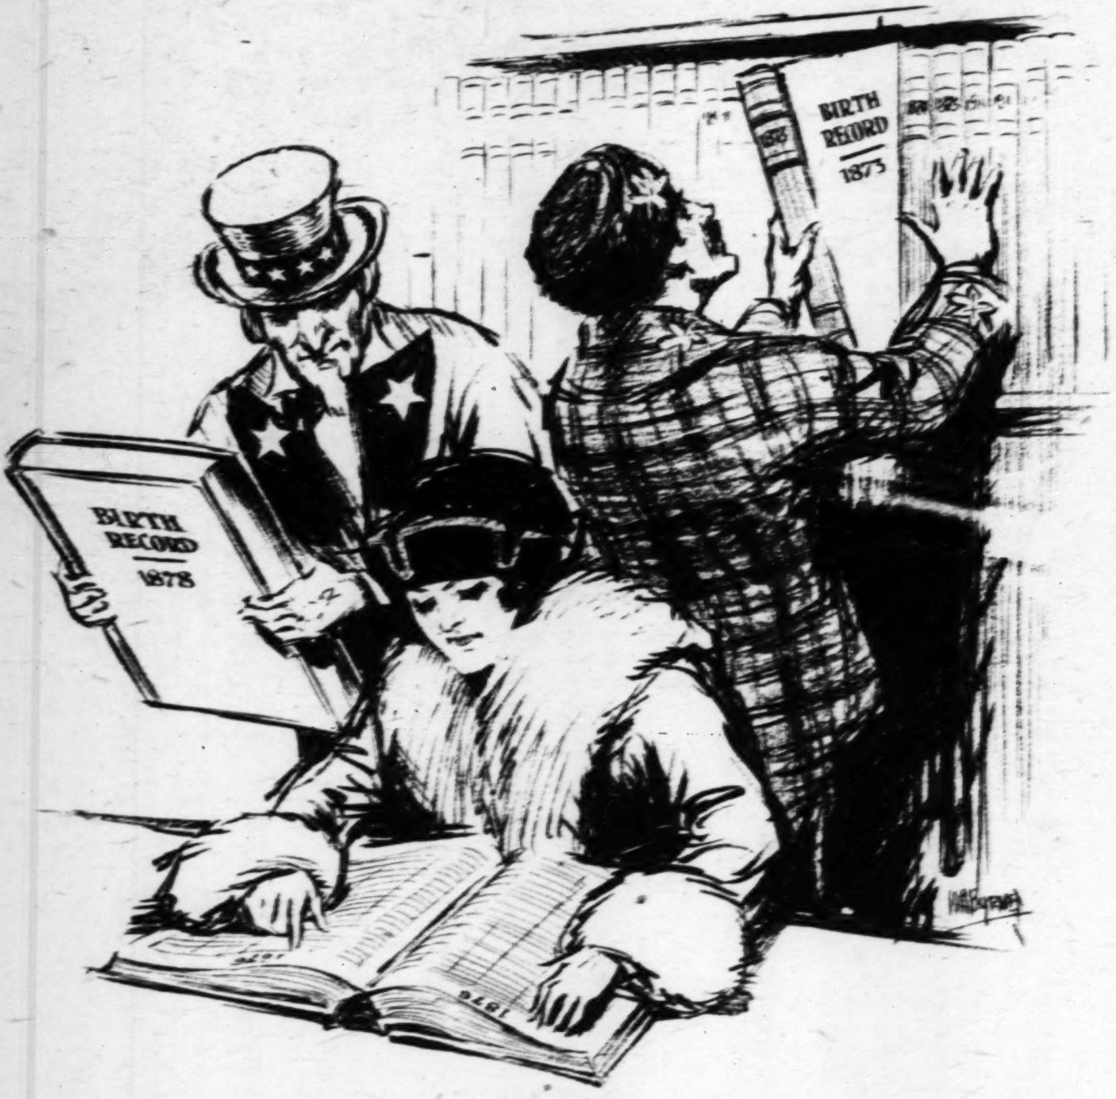
TWO COUNTRIES TRYING TO TELL WOMAN WHO SHE IS

ENA WELCH



Ena Welch, actress, claims $500,000 estate of James F. Swigart, who made a fortune in real estate after the Chicago fire—Memories dormant for more than 50 years are being awakened by investigations in the United States and Canada—The romance of "Aunt Sally's place" and the clog-dancing ship captain who died with a knife in his neck—Courts can't answer baffling question, "Who is Ena?" :: ::

IS ENA WELCH, actress, the legal heir to the half-million-dollar estate of the late James F. Swigart of Chicago, who made a fortune in real estate after that city was destroyed by fire? This puzzling question is baffling the courts in two countries. Learned Judges in the United States and Canada are wrestling with baffling and conflicting evidence in an effort to determine whether Ena Welch, as she asserts, is the daughter of Swigart or whether she was born the daughter of Tom Jim Davis, a noted Canadian ship captain and clog dancer, several years before her mother, Sarah Davis, first met Swigart in Chicago.

Ena Welch in her younger days was regarded as one of the beauties of the American stage. At the age of 22 she married James A. Welch, who died a short time later. She then returned to the stage and appeared in the supporting companies of DeWolf Hopper and other famous actors. She is still in that profession.

A known fact is that Mrs. Sarah Davis was housekeeping for Swigart in Chicago from about 1875 until her death in 1895. A crucial point to be determined is whether she had a little girl with her when she arrived in Chicago to assume management of the bachelor Swigart's home or whether she later married Swigart and the girl was born after that marriage.

Swigart died in Chicago in 1917 and his estate is being settled by the Probate Court there. If Ena Welch's claim is not upheld the only legal heir to the estate will be Swigart's sister, who has been adjudged insane.

Depositions in connection with Ena Welch's claim have been taken in Chicago, Watertown, N. Y., Cape Vincent, N. Y., Utica, N. Y., and at Kingston and Wolfe Island, both in the Province of Ontario, Canada.

All of the oldest inhabitants of Wolfe Island have been examined, with dramatic results, as to happenings there more than 50 years ago.

The testimony of these witnesses revived an old murder story and revealed the odd career and untimely end of Tom Jim Davis, most popular man on Wolfe Island, who died with a knife in his neck. That Kingston and Wolfe Island did not always have their present reputation for peace and quietude was shown by much of the testimony.

Tom Jim Davis was a famous character on Wolfe Island. He was tall and athletic, and, what was more important in those days, he was a noted clog dancer. No party was complete without him and there was great rivalry among the girls as to who should win this handsome cavalier. In the summer months he sailed the Great Lakes as a ship captain. In the winter he returned to Wolfe Island, danced at all the entertainments and basked in the smiles of adoring femininity.

Sarah Saunders of Cape Vincent, N. Y., just across the St. Lawrence River, was very beautiful. Moreover, she was divinely tall and a splendid dancer. She became the favorite dancing partner and, eventually, the wife of Tom Jim Davis. They made their home with Davis' mother, Sarah Davis, who kept a tavern known as "Aunt Sally's Place." This was a famous resort and "Aunt Sally" was a great entertainer, many dances and parties being given at her tavern.

At all of them the young son, Tom Jim, and his fair bride carried off first honors. A few months after the wedding Tom Jim went to Cape Vincent to visit some friends, and in a brawl in a saloon he was stabbed in the neck and killed. Billy Warren was charged with murder, but was exonerated by a Justice of the Peace and never prosecuted further.

Tom Jim's body was immediately taken to the island and carried on the shoulders of his friends clear across the island to Aunt Sally's place, where he had made his home. He was buried from Aunt Sally's and laid to rest in the little cemetery behind the Anglican Church. The only thing that remains to mark the grave of the once famous man is a little granite slab, broken in two and lying flat on the ground. "Here lies the body of Tom Jim Davis, died December 7th, 1865," is the inscription on the stone. Aunt Sally, his mother, and William Davis, his father, now lie at either side of their noted son.

About three months after his death his widow gave birth, the defense claims, to a baby girl, who was named Ena by its mother and Aunt Sally. The young widow and child, the evidence in Kingston tends to show, remained at the old home for about three years and then moved to Marysville, Ontario, where the widow opened a millinery store, but the business did not prosper and some time later the widow and child went away, it is said to Chicago. Here, then, is the woman who arrived in Chicago when James Swigart was prospering and who began keeping house for him.

Many of the witnesses, old men and women all of them, some nearly 90 years of age, testified they remembered the baby well and some of the women recalled holding it in their arms. They swore the baby was christened in a little schoolhouse not far from Aunt Sally's, by a traveling preacher.

Quite different testimony was given last September in Watertown, N. Y., when depositions were taken there at the instance of the claimant. A number of witnesses swore they were residents of Wolfe Island at the time it is alleged Ena Davis was born there and that to their knowledge no child was ever born to Tom Jim Davis and his wife, Sarah.

James F. Swigart went to Chicago from an Illinois farm in 1867. He started in the express and hauling business and at this he made a fair living, but he got his first real start in the financial field in 1871, just after the great Chicago fire. He entered the real estate business and took advantage of the great profits to be gained in the period of reconstruction after that disaster.

In 1875 or 1876 a widow named Sarah Davis became Swigart's housekeeper. Leaving the management of household affairs to her, Swigart devoted himself to business and was continuously prosperous. He built many houses and flat buildings and laid out and sold large subdivisions. He became an Alderman and one of Chicago's most prominent citizens.

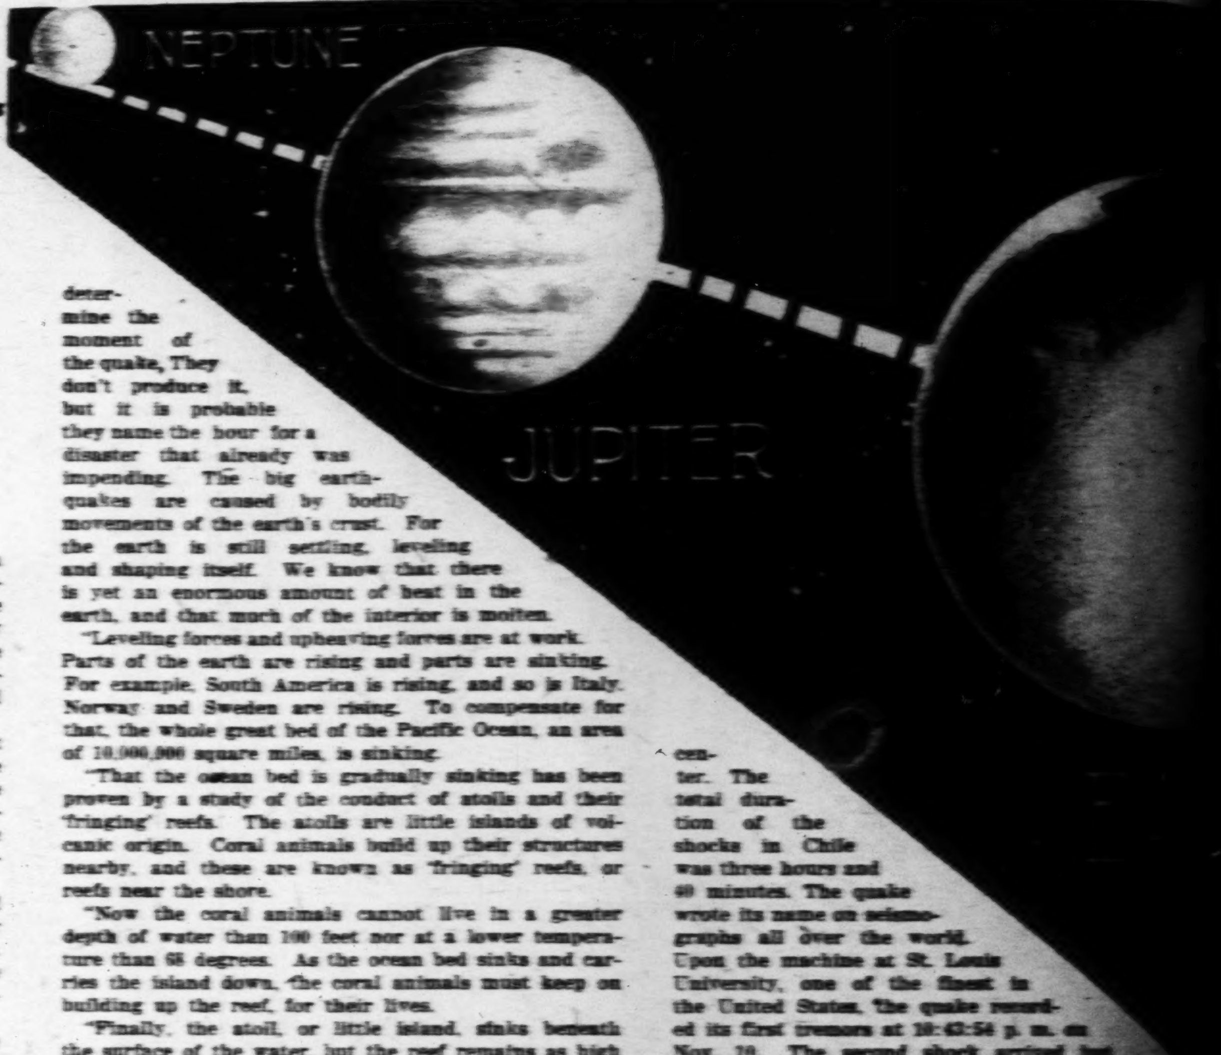
The long lapse of time since Mrs. Sarah Davis' arrival in Chicago has made it extremely difficult to settle the vital question which has been propounded again and again: "Did Sarah Davis bring to Chicago a daughter named Ena? Or did she come alone and later marry Swigart and bear him a daughter who was christened Ena?" Some witnesses have testified that they saw a beautiful little girl with Mrs. Davis when she arrived in Chicago and others have said she arrived alone. The case is complicated by the fact that a search of all available Chicago archives has thus far failed to disclose a record to show the marriage of Swigart or any notation of Ena's birth or christening.

Swigart died alone in one of his gloomy flat buildings, asphyxiated by gas, at the age of 73, Oct. 17, 1917. All his personal property went into the hands of a Public Administrator, Gordon A. Ramsay, and his large estate holdings were handed over to two conservators by Judge Henry Horner. The conservators are A. A. Worsley of the Chicago bar, and who was Swigart's attorney for many years previous to his death, and W. J. Roach, a well-known politician.

About two weeks after Swigart died, Ena Welch filed a claim for $10,000 for services rendered to the deceased some 30 years previous. This claim was never pressed to a decision for the whole matter was changed by the filing of a petition by the same Ena Welch in June, 1922, wherein she states that she is a natural child of the late James F. Swigart and claims all of his estate.

Three Planets Wheeled Into Line

On the same night that gigantic shocks spread destruction and death in Chile, a conjunction of Mercury, Jupiter and Neptune with the earth and sun occurred—It may only have been a coincidence—But the Rev. Martin S. Brennan, priest-astronomer of St. Louis, believes that the quakes were impending and that the unusual grouping of heavenly bodies "determined the moment" of catastrophe :: :: ::



WHEN a great earthquake happens on the same night that there is a conjunction of several planets with the sun, men of science wonder if any connection can be traced between the two events. Just this rare combination did occur, a few weeks ago, and has led to much interesting discussion.

Of course, it may have been only a coincidence that the appalling earthquake in Chile arrived about the hour that Mercury, Jupiter, the earth and the sun were to be in a straight line, with Neptune almost in conjunction, too. On the other hand, it may be evidence in support of the old theory that the planets do occasionally bring about quakes on earth.

Experts in such learned fields as astronomy and seismology, or the science of earthquakes, consider the recent catastrophe one of exceptional importance. Whether or not it is to be accepted as evidence will be the basis of widespread investigation and many arguments.

But on the face of it, those who believe that the severe earth shocks and attendant tidal waves in Northern Chile were unloosed by the influence of the planets Mercury, Jupiter and Neptune seem to have a strong case.

At the hour that the upheaval began, which was within a few minutes of midnight, Nov. 10-11, the conjunction of the three planets with the sun and the earth was approaching. It is the force of the sun's attraction that holds the planets in their orbits and prevents them from dashing off into space, forever, along straight lines. To a much lesser extent, because their mass is so much less than that of the sun, the attraction of the planets is exercised upon each other.

During a conjunction of the three planets, the sun, 92,500,000 miles away, and Mercury, 56,500,000 miles from the earth, were in line and exerting their pull upon the earth. Upon the other side of the earth, but situated along the same imaginary straight line, were enormous Jupiter, 389,500,000 miles from earth, and Neptune, 2,702,500,000 miles. Neptune was not quite in conjunction, this time, but nearly so.

The result, then, was such a condition of strain, due to the force of attraction exerted by the various bodies thus temporarily in line, as the earth does not often have to withstand. If it was only a coincidence that this Chilean quake, with its large loss of life and property damage, occurred at the time of the conjunction, then it was, indeed, one of the most remarkable coincidences on record.

Among the first reports of the disaster, a message from Valparaiso stated that Rear Admiral Martin, director of the naval meteorological service, had pointed out the nearness of the conjunction and of the earthquake and declared it to be significant.

Conservative scientific opinion does not hold that the conjunction of the three planets, the earth and sun really "caused" the earthquake, as the word "caused" usually is employed. But that the unusual relative positions of those bodies, and hence the unusual force of attraction which could be exercised, may have precipitated a movement of the earth's crust which already was impending. Even that, considering the enormous distances which intervene between the earth and the planets would be a marvelous thing enough.

One adherent of the theory that the conjunction of the planets played its part in the disaster in Chile is the Rev. Martin S. Brennan, pastor of the Church of SS. Mary and Joseph, in Carondelet, and widely known as an astronomer.

"There was an absolute conjunction of Mercury and Jupiter," said Father Brennan. "Neptune was close to it, but not absolutely in conjunction. With 21 times the mass of the earth, Neptune is the third greatest of the planets. Its attraction is diminished by its awful distance from the earth. Mercury is so small as to be almost negligible. Jupiter, of course, is the greatest planet, with 310 times the mass of the earth.

"The sun and these bodies all pulling together at the same time certainly would have an effect on the earth's crust. It is even claimed that when the moon, a tiny object compared with either Jupiter or Neptune, but much closer to the earth, is over the meridian it has an effect on earthquakes.

"It is absolutely certain that the real cause of earthquakes is in the earth itself. But outside influences might determine the moment of the quake. They don't produce it, but it is probable they name the hour for a disaster that already was impending. The big earthquakes are caused by bodily movements of the earth's crust. For the earth is still settling, leveling and shaping itself. We know that there is yet an enormous amount of heat in the earth, and that much of the interior is molten.

"Leveling forces and upheaving forces are at work. Parts of the earth are rising and parts are sinking. For example, South America is rising, and so is Italy. Norway and Sweden are rising. To compensate for that, the whole great bed of the Pacific Ocean, an area of 10,000,000 square miles, is sinking.

"That the ocean bed is gradually sinking has been proven by a study of the conduct of atolls and their 'fringing' reefs. The atolls are little islands of volcanic origin. Coral animals build up their structures nearby, and these are known as 'fringing' reefs, or reefs near the shore.

"Now the coral animals cannot live in a greater depth of water than 100 feet nor at a lower temperature than 68 degrees. As the ocean bed sinks and carries the island down, the coral animals must keep on building up the reef, for their lives.

"Finally, the atoll, or little island, sinks beneath the surface of the water, but the reef remains as high as it was in the first place, due to the self-interested efforts of the coral animals. When the island finally disappears, the 'fringing' reef becomes a 'barrier' reef, or one at a considerable distance from shore.

"The whole bottom of the ocean is sinking at the rate of about an inch in a year. As the bed and its burden of water sinks, it breaks away from the land, at or near the shore. As a rule this breaking away is not perceptible. There is no shock, because the rock is not stiff and it gives way gradually.

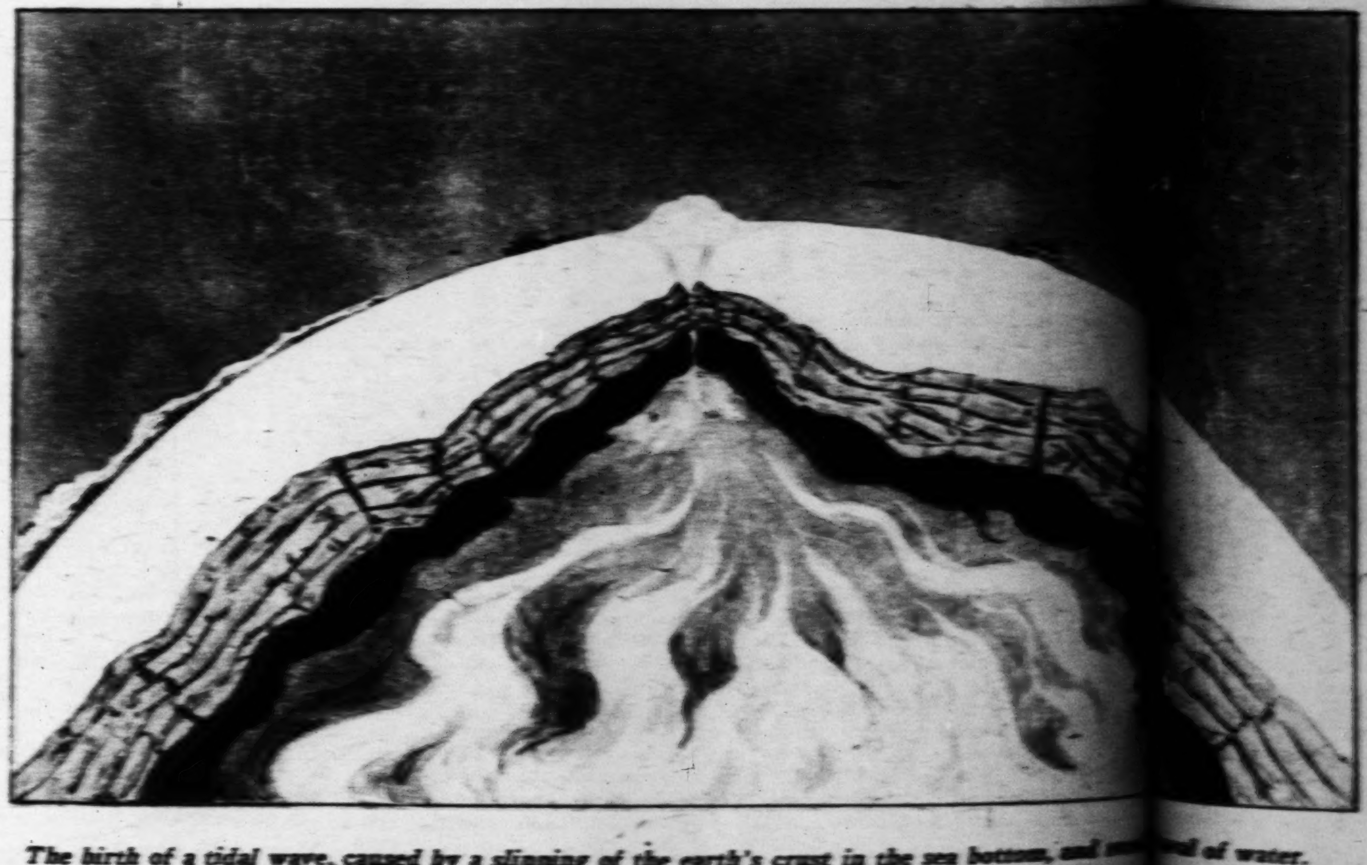
"But in some cases the rocky layers are very stiff and hard, and won't give way gradually. They hold on until the weight is so terrible that they snap off suddenly—and that's the earthquake."

Father Brennan explained that the waves of an earthquake travel in an ever-widening circle, just like the waves which spread out when a rock is dropped into a pool of water. The point on the earth's surface directly above the focus of the disturbance is called the epicenter. Sometimes the center of disturbance and the epicenter are the same. From this point the waves of the quake travel outward, at a speed which varies from 10 to 30 miles a minute. This explains the various hours at which the same quake is registered upon the seismographs at stations far distant from the epicenter. The total duration of the shocks in Chile was three hours and 40 minutes. The quake wrote its name on seismographs all over the world. Upon the machine at St. Louis University, one of the finest in the United States, the quake recorded its first tremors at 10:42:54 p. m. on Nov. 10. The second shock arrived just nine seconds later. The principal shock was felt at 11:01 p. m., and the last at 1:2[illegible] a. m.

Even before news of the death and destruction [illegible] Chile had been received here, the St. Louis [illegible] record had been put down as denoting a quake of "[illegible] lence and destructive intensity," estimated to be [illegible] 4800 miles southeast of St. Louis.

Among the foreign cities where seismographs [illegible] istered the quake were Heidelberg and Koenigsberg, [illegible] Germany, Brussels in Belgium and Florence in [illegible] At the first two towns the record covered a period [illegible] three hours and in violence recalled the Messina quake of 1908. Brussels estimated that the location was [illegible] Mount Titicaca, in the Andes. This is not far from the devastated area, in Northern Chile. At Florence the sharp angles and ellipses of the record recalled the Valparaiso and Buenaventura quake in 1906.

The extent of the shaken area and the havoc wrought may be judged from the fact that three days afterwards, when communication had been largely [illegible] with the quake area, the estimate of the dead was between 1500 and 2000 persons, while it was [illegible] that a stretch of territory along the coast for [illegible] miles and to a depth of 250 miles had been almost denuded of human habitations.



The birth of a tidal wave, caused by a slipping of the earth's crust in the sea bottom, and [illegible] of water.

All along the coast, vessels which could not escape by steaming out to the open sea were swept on shore to be left high and dry, or were dashed against the rocks. Several ships at sea, not aware of the quake on shore, encountered big waves and turbulent waters which terrified those aboard.

The tidal waves accompanying the Chile earthquake were typical of the upheaval in the ocean which often, but not always, follows a quake on land. At Antofagasta and several other places the water first retreated from the shore, far beyond the low-tide mark, and then came rushing back in a great wave which some observers said was 50 meters high. At Antofagasta this phenomenon was repeated five times. Two days later, at the same town, the water ebbed and then came booming back much in the same manner as on the day of the first and greatest shock. The terrible movement of water which comes as an aftermath when there has been a shifting of the earth's crust in the ocean's bed or nearby is called a "tidal wave," but erroneously. While it simulates the ebb and flow of a gigantic tide, in reality it has nothing to do with tidal action. The correct general name for it is seismic sea wave.

At Coquimbo, where a vivid electrical disturbance added its terrors to the scene, the waters receded for a distance of 300 yards beyond the low-tide mark, then returned in an immense wave which, as at other ports, was estimated to have been 50 meters high. Again and again this movement was repeated while the populace fled. Big freight lighters were carried five blocks beyond the low-tide mark and left there.

The Meteorological Institute at Santiago announced that the quake coincided with the passage of a sun spot over the central meridian of the solar body, and that the spot was the largest which had been observed this year.

Whether there is any connection between sun spots and earthquakes has been a question frequently raised

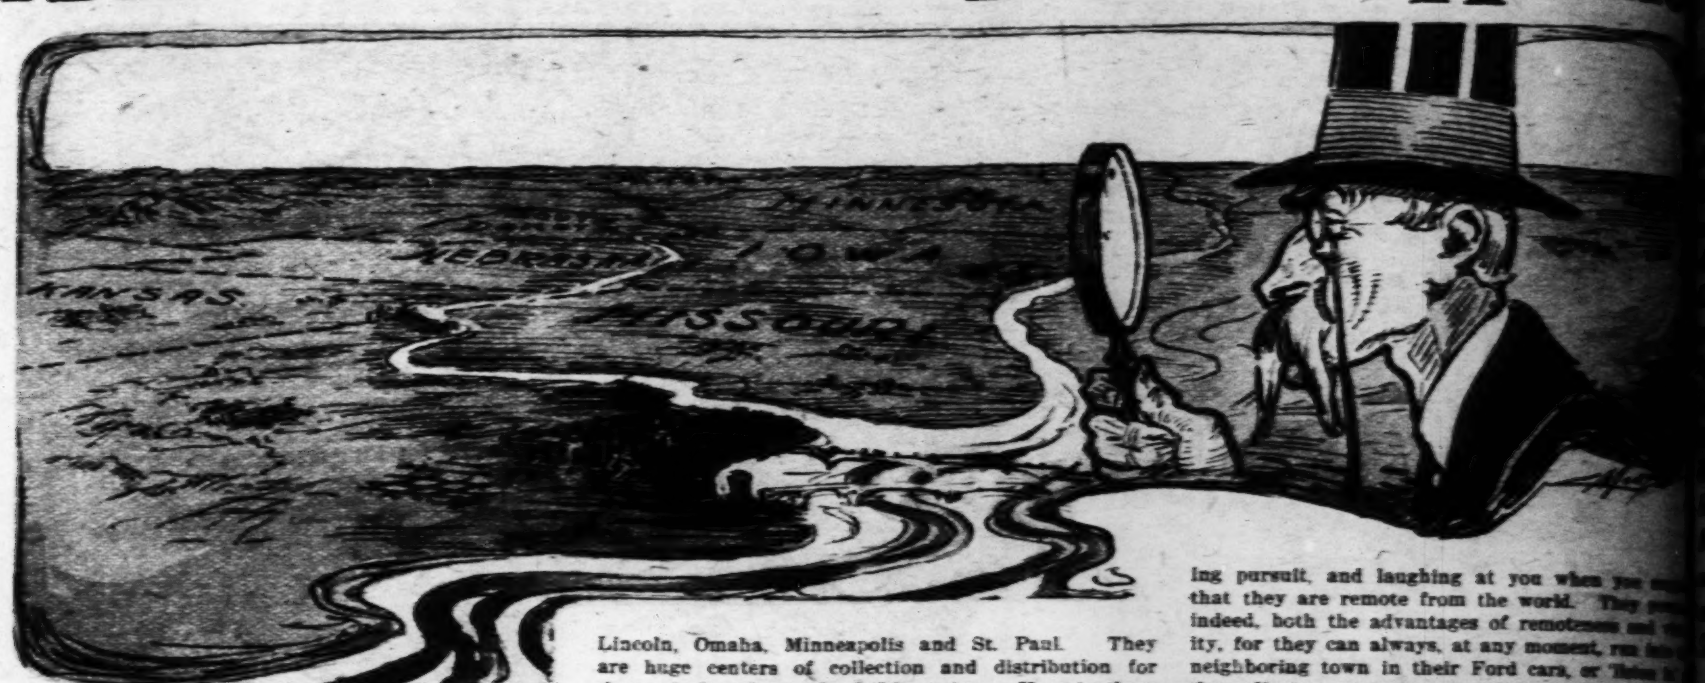
At Last An Englishman Discovers Americ



Harold Spender, noted author, journalist and traveler, tells his own people in England what he saw and learned in the great Mississippi Valley—For instance, he found soil 100 feet deep in "the granary of the world"—Met workingman who says this is fast becoming a slave country. :: ::

AT LAST an Englishman has discovered America. An Englishman who knows how to write has visited, traversed, inspected and dissected Mid-West America, the real America, and told his own people about it. Heretofore the British authors and journalists who have "done" America have limited their observations, in the main, to the East. Kipling, to be sure, when a somewhat callow youth, entered the United States at San Francisco and emerged at New York, stopping briefly at Chicago and a few other intermediate points, and produced his sarcastic impressions of America. More recently W. L. George made something more than a car-window tour of observation through America's insides and wrote about it in a more friendly vein. But for the most part the great Columbian Hinterland has been ignored by British writers.

The real discoverer is Harold Spender, noted author, journalist and traveler. Mr. Spender spent some weeks this fall with a party of his countrymen in touring the Middle West and the South. In a series of articles for the London Daily Telegraph he wrote his impressions. His purpose seems to have been to give his readers a look-in at an America which no doubht has remained for them until now an undiscovered country. The purpose of this compendium of excerpts from his articles is to give Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine readers a glance at their own country through the eyes of a competent observer from England.

Mr. Spender made what he calls "a lightning tour of the Mid-West" in three October days, traveling through Kansas, Nebraska and South Dakota, into Minnesota. "In this brief space of time," he writes, "we have visited five important cities of the Mid-West, with rare and extraordinary opportunities for a bird's-eye view of their splendid development and amazing possibilities. * * * Cities so young and yet so splendid, so modern and yet so finished, so enterprising and yet so secure.

"What are the impressions left on British minds after this rapid survey? There is, first, the impression of amazing natural resources being developed at lightning speed by the quickest intelligence yet seen on this planet. Take that great valley of the Missouri River, up which we traveled from Kansas City through Lincoln and Omaha right as far as Sioux Falls, that pioneer outpost of the earlier stage of settlement. So rich is the soil, so fertile right down to a depth of about 100 feet that at present no cultivator needs artificial aid for the production of those rich and bountiful crops which make this part of America the granary of the world. * * * Dotted throughout this tremendous country are the great cities of Lincoln, Omaha, Minneapolis and St. Paul. They are huge centers of collection and distribution for the agricultural wealth of this region. Here in these cities capitalists collect the wealth of the soil, turning the corn into flour and the hogs into bacon, converting at immense speed the vast and varied products of these river valleys into food both for their own continent and for ours. Here you see the great elevators and the great stores, which seem to overshadow mere man, and to hint at the moment when machinery will have taken the place of humanity. Everything is on a vast and colossal scale. Huge organizations seem to overshadow the individual farmer. The speed of the mundane movement is dizzy and dazzling for the poor European, and while he watches all this wealth he reflects forlornly on his darkened continent, dismayed and depressed by a thousand human problems. Here he sees a nation that has apparently decided to throw its whole energy into its own development, and —for the moment—seems to think only of Europe in order to pity her."

The University of Kansas, at Lawrence, was an eye-opener to Mr. Spender and his party. "A gigantic university, with 5000 students, young men and young women," he found there, "with every variety of 'faculty,' from classics to dentistry." Thus did Kansas and her big State school react upon the British journalist:

"These young men and young women come, for the most part, from the scattered farms of Kansas. They are trained in all the scientific sides of their agricultural pursuits, and they go back to run their farms in the most up-to-date fashion, linked to the world by the universal motor car and the universal telephone, now supplemented by the extending radio. That is the reason which explains why you will find on the remote farms of the Mid-West men of the highest intelligence and culture, finding in agriculture a stimulating pursuit, and laughing at you when you

The other day I met a man who had taken a motor tour of 4000 miles right through Canada. No wonder the railway companies are becoming alarmed.

"It really looks as if the motor car, running on a vast state system of concrete roads, and passing from good hotel to hotel in these beautiful cities, might in the end seriously challenge the American railway."

Mr. Spender fell in love with Kentucky. "At Louisville we were feasted and toasted to our hearts' content. * * * The people here in the South—both men and women—are great riders, especially in Kentucky. They gave us an old Kentucky dinner in a little model Kentucky house—made of logs and plaster—on the fairgrounds. The dinner was very simple, of sweet potatoes and yams, the inevitable chicken, and old Kentucky cornbread. It was a most delightful evening, and we all sang 'The Old Kentucky Home' with tears in our eyes. Why is it that that song, like 'Home, Sweet Home,' seems to touch a common chord in the hearts of all English-speaking folk wherever they meet together?"

Invading Tennessee, the British party heard echoes of the Civil War. Writes Mr. Spender:

"Here we are at Chattanooga, on the Tennessee River, just where it divides the State of that name from the State of Alabama. They do not see many British citizens here and so their greeting has been doubly enthusiastic. They have motored us up and down through their high mountains. They have feasted us twice within 24 hours—once on the veranda of their beautiful country club and the second time in the guest room of the Patton Hotel. They have shown us their marvelous battlefields, for it was here in 1863 that there took place some of the most desperate battles of the Civil War, during that phase of the struggle when it seemed that the Confederates were about to block in the North, before Gen. Sherman leapt forth like a thunderbolt from the Union lines, broke the blockade, and marched through Georgia to the sea. All the hills round here are covered with memorials of that great struggle. But in the process of time the bitterness of memory has abated, and the Northern and Southerner now live side by side, joining in the common industries of peace in this new gigantic city which has sprung up on the ruins of a devastated township."

After commenting upon the abounding resources and amazing energies of the South, Mr. Spender finds occasion for another open cut at the high tariff "passed" by President Harding, as he phrases it:

"All this development has taken place during the last 20 years only. For it took these Southern states nearly a quarter of a century to lift up their heads after the terrible exhaustion of the Civil War. But now the South is open to immigration from the North, and men of energy are streaming in. Let Manchester look to it. For one hears in this State the dangerous heresy that America might possibly in the future convert her own raw cotton goods on the spot. With free trade there is little doubt that she could do so in the course of a generation. But as long as she adheres to her present policy of high tariffs and high cost of living I do not think that Manchester need be afraid."

Americans who have the habit of going to Europe for "scenery" may learn something from Mr. Spender by reading his observations on Chattanooga's picturesque setting:

"Surrounded with her mountains, steeped in her warm climate and embraced in the curve of the Tennessee River, Chattanooga reminds me of one of those beautiful European cities of the Tyrol which are the gems of Europe. It is far-flung, like most of the modern American cities. For the motor car in America has opened up a world of new living, and has practically abolished the old, close-built towns. With the help of a marvelous cable railway that runs up the very walls of the precipices, the citizens here are enabled to work in the town and live in the mountain. Such things are trifles to the American genius, that all-conquering power which seems here to make mock of nature. These mountains give health to the people working on the torrid plains, and with the true American sense of equality all people have a share in these benefits, thanks to the cheap Ford motor car and the cable railway."

Penetrating still farther into Dixie, Mr. Spender visited Birmingham and Atlanta. "Here in the South," he writes, "the age of chivalry is still alive." Then he waxes eloquent and finally gets facetious:

"It is still a gallant, reckless country, this of the South. Here the air is filled with a spirit of romance and adventure which one misses in the North. And now these qualities of daring and energy have rushed into the work of reconstruction and development. Business here is one long romance. On the top of one of the beautiful hills that surround the city of Atlanta is the 'Wood of the Thousand Patents.' For there

The CRUISE of the "SCANDAL"

BY ~ VICTOR BRIDGES

"ONE must never forget," said George, solemnly, "that rank has its duties as well as its privileges. As your elder brother and the head of the family, I naturally take an interest in your career."

"Fire ahead," I replied, gratefully. "I'm always ready to listen to wisdom, especially from a Cabinet Minister."

There was a short pause.

"Well, then," said George, "my advice is that you should accept this invitation from Lady Bulstrode, and make up your mind to settle down."

"To do what?" I asked in dismay.

"To settle down," repeated George, with some firmness. "It would be a good thing if you were to get married," he added.

"What, on my income?" I exclaimed. "It wouldn't keep some women in frocks."

"There are some women," replied George, "who can very well afford to pay for their own frocks."

I looked at him with surprise and pain.

"You are not doing anything so immoral as to suggest that I should marry for money?" I asked.

George carefully removed the ash from his cigar.

"To contract an alliance with a wealthy woman," he observed, "is not necessarily the same as what you are pleased to call marrying for money. Besides, marriage must always be a matter of give and take. If a woman brings you a reasonable dowry, you, on the other hand, are able to offer her one of the oldest names in the country, an unimpeachable social position, and—er—a certain measure of youth and good looks."

"That's all very well," I said, "but where does one find these gilded and easily pleased females?"

Again George's brow contracted.

"There are plenty of charming girls in society, who at the same time are by no means paupers. You are sure to find one or two at Grendon, for instance."

"Oh, ho!" said I. "Now I begin to understand. By the way, who's living at Strathmore now?"

George looked at me a little suspiciously.

"There's no one there at present," he replied, "except old Donald Ross and his wife. I want to sell the place if I can; it's no good to us."

"Oh, don't sell it," I protested. "It's the only one of our numerous family mansions I could ever stand." Then I paused. "I left a boat there last time I was in England," I added. "If I'm booked to go to Grendon in 10 days' time, it's highly necessary that I should have a short holiday first. A smart country house party bang on top of two months of London would just about finish me."

"Well?" said George, raising his eyebrows.

"Well," I finished, "I could just put in a week's sailing nicely, and write my paper for the Fortnightly at the same time. I shall make a snug little base on Kerrin Island, and do my scribbling there."

"Kerrin Island!" repeated George, incredulously. "Why, the place is deserted. No one has been there for years."

"Yes, they have, George," I said. "I spent a fortnight there the last time I was home, and, what's more, I built myself a most superior hut. It ought to be as sound as ever."

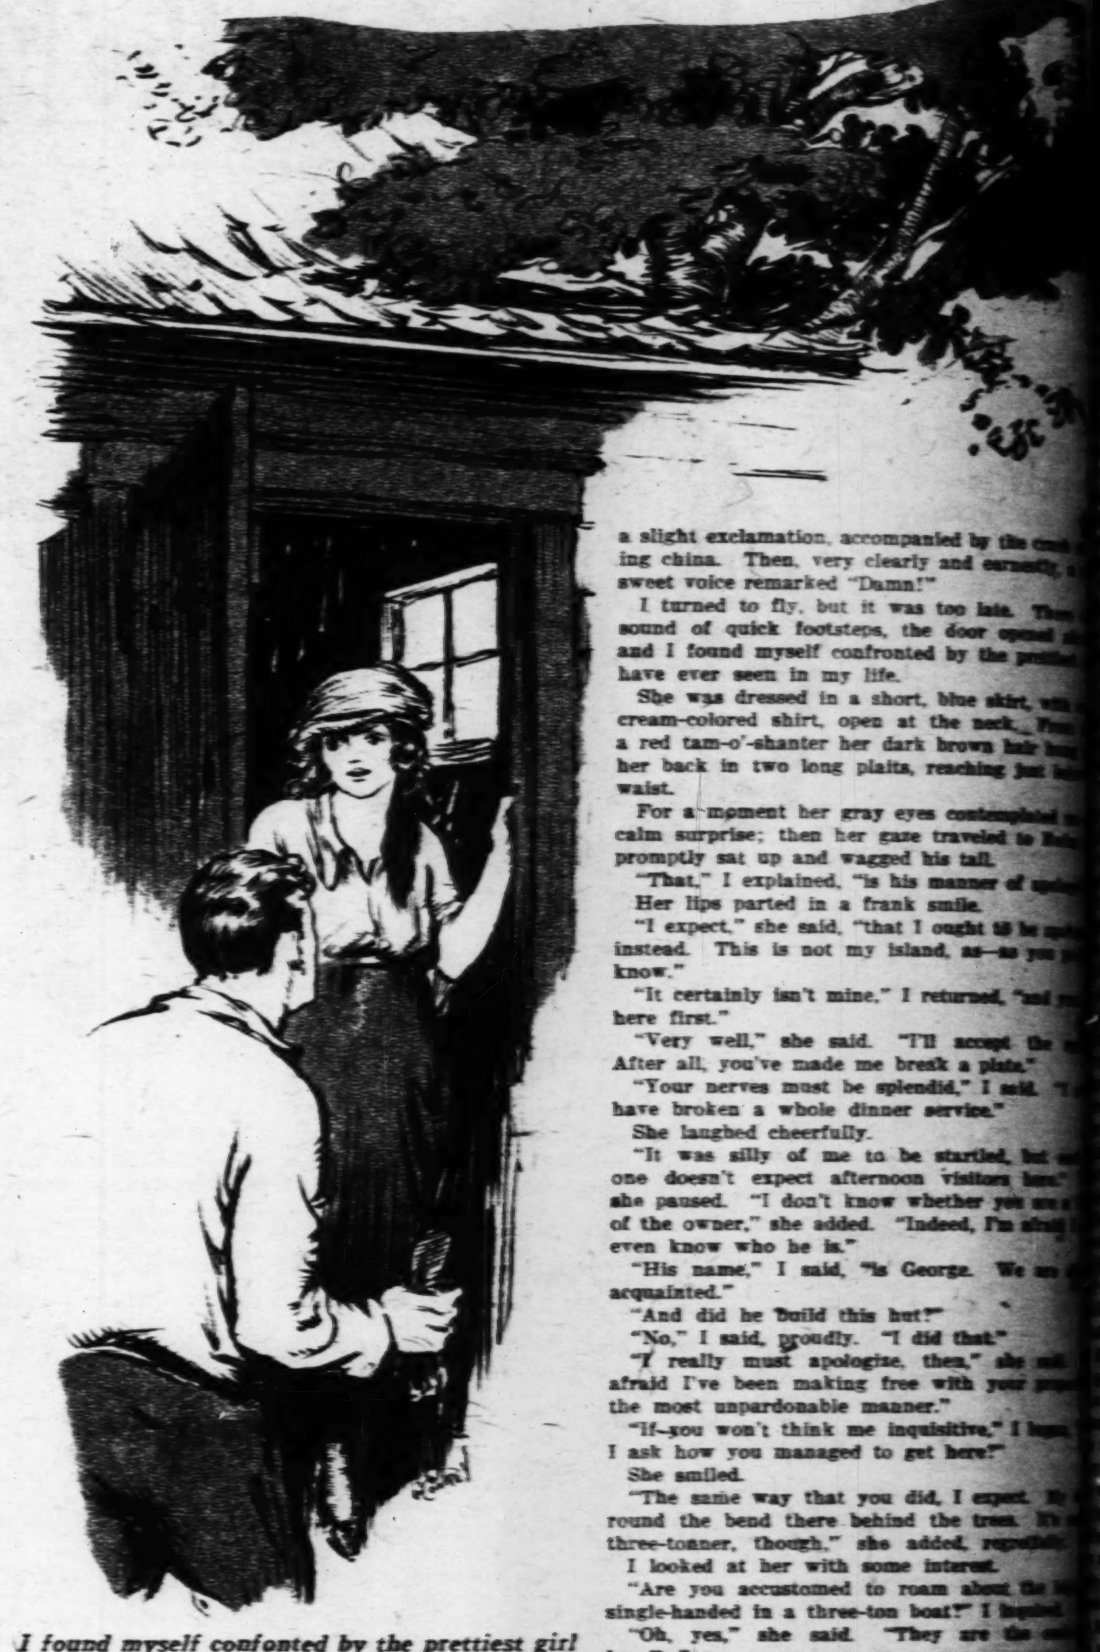
At this point George consulted his watch.

"Well, please yourself," he said. "So long as you go to Grendon I suppose that's all we can expect. I shall hope to hear soon, however, that you are adopting some really serious and permanent interest in life."

"If it should take the form of an heiress, George," I said, "I will wire you at once, without fail."

Exactly two days after this sporting promise I found myself in the excellent company of the sea and the sky, about three miles off the land, near Inverness. I was not alone. Sitting in the bows of the boat was the most disreputable, rough-haired terrier puppy that ever forced his society upon his betters. His name was Rufus and he had been presented to me by Donald Ross. Perhaps it would be more accurate to say he had presented himself and that Donald, with the simple philosophy of his race, had merely acquiesced in the arrangement. For from the moment that I had arrived at Strathmore, Rufus had joyously but firmly adopted me as his new owner.

Although only a four-tonner, my little boat, the Scandal, was a rare seagoing craft, and the faithful Donald had looked after her with such honest care that the sails and rigging were as sound as on the day when I laid her up.



I found myself confonted by the prettiest girl I had ever seen in my life.

Stowed away in the locker I had a large hamper from Harrods', a change of kit, a "Primus" stove and a generous supply of baccy and books.

There are two places on the island where you can get a safe anchorage, one a small sheltered bay on the farther side, and the other a kind of shallow estuary looking out towards Strathmore. I decided on the latter as being the nearer.

Rufus evidently realized we were going ashore; for the moment I hauled alongside the tiny collapsible Berthan boat which we had been towing behind us, he jumped in hurriedly and sat down in the sternsheets. Then he looked at me and grinned.

A very few strokes brought us to the shore, which at this point consisted of a marshy stretch of saltings about 20 yards broad. I tugged the boat up out of the water, and, preceded by Rufus, picked my way from tuft to tuft towards the edge of the wild, heather-covered down of which Kerrin Island is chiefly composed.

The whole place is only about half a mile wide, but one cannot see the hut until one is almost up to it, as it stands on the farther side of the island, under the shelter of some rising ground.

Rufus reached it before I did. Rounding the base of the little hill, I found him lying on the grass, contemplating his discovery with every symptom of surprised approval.

"Yes, my son," I said, "you may well look awestruck. That superb edifice"—— Then I stopped.

"Well, I'm hanged!" I added, incredulously.

There, just to the right of the hut door, I had caught sight of a wood fire, crackling and blazing away in the most cheerful and unabashed fashion.

"Rufus," I observed, "there is some cursed intruder here!"

I strode across the intervening grass to the door of the hut, and rapped loudly with my knuckles. I heard

They were in such delightful contrast to her own splendid joy in life.

It was only on the night before she went away that I found out how fond I was of her. She was lying on the grass, her chin in her hand, and her gray eyes staring thoughtfully into the fire, as she listened to my description of some place I had once visited.

In the middle of my story it suddenly struck me that on the following evening she would not be there. I went on talking, but somehow or other all the interest and color had died out of my yarn.

For a moment or two she looked at me without speaking. Then she sat up.

"What's the matter, Stephen?" she asked, pushing her hair back from her eyes.

"Nothing just now," I said. "I was wondering what Rufus and I were going to do tomorrow."

"You must do that mysterious work you were talking about. You haven't begun it yet; and it's all my fault."

"But I can't work when I feel lonely," I objected.

"Two days ago," she said, "you told me a desert island was the only place you could write in."

"Yes," I said, "but I was younger then, and not so experienced."

She laughed—that low, sweet laugh of hers that always reminded me of deep water. It was only with a big effort that I crushed back a sudden wild impulse to take her in my arms.

As it was I jumped up, just a little abruptly.

"Astarte," I said, "it's time you went to bed. All good sailors turn in early the night before a voyage."

She held out her hand.

"You're right, Stephen," she said. "Good night."

I bent down, and very lightly I kissed the tips of her fingers.

* * * * * * * *

Midway the next morning found me, with Rufus by my side, standing in somber isolation on the extremest promontory of the island. Three miles away the Penguin, now merely a white speck on the water, was just rounding the big bluff of Strathmore Head.

No one has ever worked much harder than I did during my remaining three days on the island, and no one has ever been more persistently haunted by the vision of an absent face. I wrote the whole of my article for the Fortnightly—13 solid, chunky pages all about Kashmir—and at the end of it I found that I was even fonder of Astarte than when she had left the island.

If I had only had some clew, however vague, I could at least have followed it up; but Astarte had gone away from me leaving herself as much a mystery as ever.

Apart from sheer luck, my only chance of finding her seemed to lie in tracing the Penguin. I eventually decided that the best thing to do at the moment was to go on to Grendon. I couldn't get out of the visit now without appearing rather rude; and I was just as likely to pick up some information about the Penguin there as I was anywhere else. Besides, I very much wanted to see old Lady Bulstrode.

So on the Saturday morning, after fastening up the hut, I came back on board the Scandal and pulled up my anchor for the last time. It was an ideal summer morning, all blue and gold, with a nice breeze off the sea.

The Scandal, with every bit of sail she could carry, leaped merrily through the water, revelling in her job like the gallant little boat she was. By the time we ran alonside the Strathmore landing stage I had as nearly as possible recovered my usual serenity. As medicine for a disordered heart, I'll back the sea against literature any day in the week.

The local Highland railway abandoned me late in the afternoon at a little wayside station some six miles from Grendon, where I had wired to be met.

The Bulstrode family turnout, with its magnificent red wheels, black horses and orange livery, was waiting there in answer to my summons. It was just 6 o'clock when we turned in at the lodge gates of Grendon and drove up the long avenue of fir trees.

Lady Bulstrode welcomed me heartily. "My dear boy!" she said, taking my hand in both of hers. "My dear boy! I am so pleased to see you!"

She looked just as she did when I had seen her last in London, five years before—old, shrewd and kindly.

"Sit down!" she said. "Sit down and let me have a good look at you."

Rufus, who had been keeping modestly in the background, came squirming out from under the sofa and sat down, with much tail-wagging, in the middle of the room.

"I couldn't help bringing him," I explained, apologetically. "He adopted me at Strathmore last week, and his motto seems to be the same as Ruth's, 'Where thou goest I will go.' Do you mind dogs in the house?"

"I mind nothing," said Lady Bulstrode, "except rheumatism and traveling third-class. Come here, boy!"

She held out a hand to Rufus, who crawled up and seated himself carefully with his back against her skirt.

"George told me you were in these parts," she went on; "or, as he put it, 'pigging it upon some absurd island off Strathmore.'"

"Dear George!" I said. "He has all the simple candor of a British statesman."

"He has quite a high opinion of you," returned Lady Bulstrode, "though he thinks you're a little mad."

"I had a talk with George the other day," I said. "He thinks it's quite time I settled down."

"What do you think about it?" asked Lady Bulstrode.

"I think," I said, "that one Cabinet Minister in the family is quite enough."

"Ample," agreed Lady Bulstrode, hastily; "but, after all, there are plenty of other openings in life for an energetic and honest young man."

"Yes," I said, "and I've found mine. So long as 900 pounds a year lasts, I'm quite content to go on tramping round the world—especially if editors will pay me for scribbling about it. Mine is a useless life. I've never had any illusions on the point. If I had, George would have shattered them long ago."

"George," she returned, "is too serious to live. I tried to get him up here for a few days, and he said things were so bad at Westminster that he couldn't be spared. Those were his actual words."

I nodded.

"They would be. There's no bally mock modesty about George! Who is here, by the way?"

"Well, there's no one at the present moment except Alan's two children and old Mrs. Fawcett. I have got a regular smart house party coming for you tomorrow, though." She looked at me mischievously. "There's Miss Faversham and her mother"—she began to tick them off on her fingers, "a good-looking girl, lots of money; her father is the big contractor, Faversham & Kent, you know. Then there are the Gordons—the K. C. and his wife; and the McCullochs from Innestair—another pretty girl there; and Raymond Sturgis, and old Lord Pembrey. I shall want you to play host, Guy."

I groaned.

I looked up and for one radiant, blinding moment I thought I'd gone mad.

Sensations While Flying 206 Miles an Hou

The landscape is such a blur that pilot uses the horizon in maintaining the proper altitude, says winner of the Pulitzer trophy race—Flag poles and the tall, dry limbs of trees are difficult to see ahead, and they loom up unexpectedly — Nerve strain of high speed is called "terrific," and the worst period is the landing :: :: :: ::

THE sensations experienced while flying through the air at a speed of more than 200 miles an hour, and the special difficulties which the pilot encounters, are described in this interesting article by Lieut. Russell L. Maughan, U. S. Army. Lieut. Maughan won the Pulitzer trophy race and set a new world record at Selfridge Field, Mich., on October 15.

The officially estimated speed of the winning machine, an Army-Curtiss airplane, was 206 miles an hour for the 155.3½ miles it had covered. The only other contestant who approached Lieut. Maughan's record was Lieut. Lester J. Maitland, in a twin Army-Curtiss plane. The latter's average speed was 203 miles an hour.

Both of these men bettered the 100-kilometer record established last September by Sadi Le Cointe, the Frenchman, who averaged 202 miles an hour. The previous world's record for 200 kilometers was set in October, 1921, by George Kirsch, the French flyer, with a speed of 174.81 miles an hour.

Lieut. Maughan was flying forest fire patrol out of Eugene, Ore., when he received orders to report at Garden City, Long Island, to make preparations for participating in the Pulitzer trophy race. The article is based partly on what he learned in five weeks of training there, and partly on his experiences in the race.

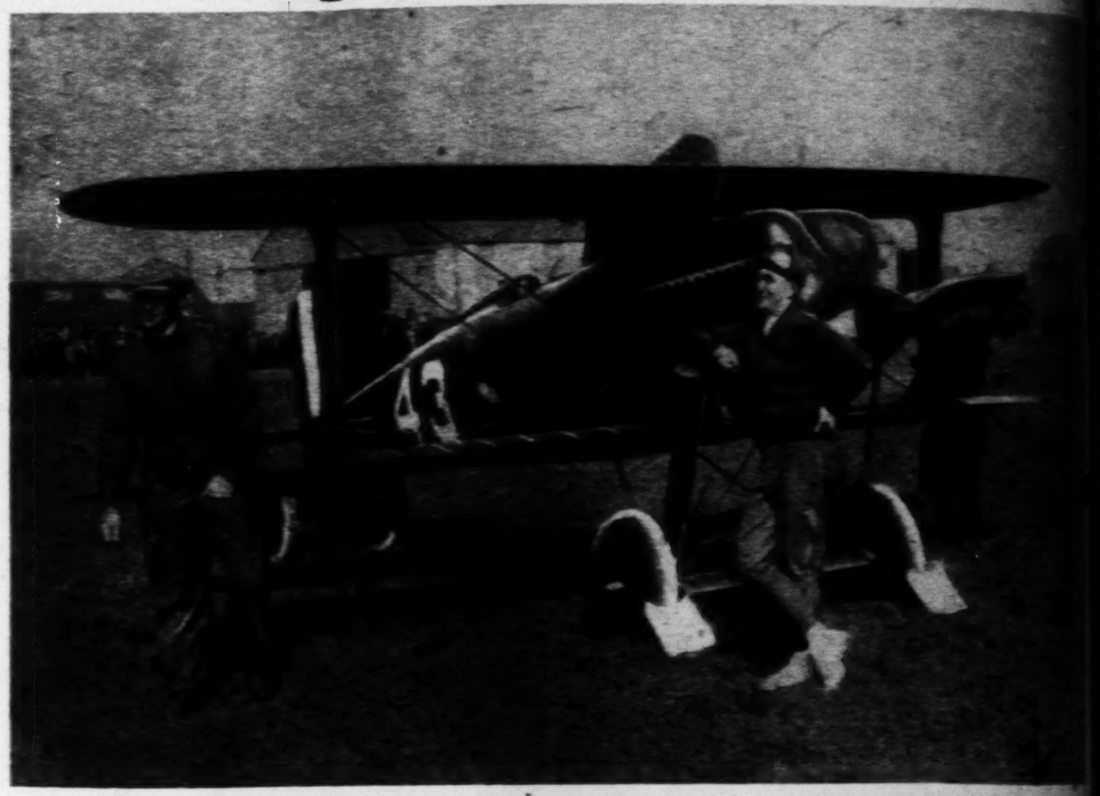
By LIEUT. RUSSELL L. MAUGHAN.

TO DESCRIBE all my sensations while traveling at more than 200 miles per hour is impossible, as the terrific wind that eddied and whipped around me, and the streaking of every object, was such a contrast to ordinary flying. The landscape? There is no immediate landscape, or if there is it can only be described by calling it a blur.

When in your automobile you look at the road from 100 to 200 feet in advance if you are traveling slowly and twice as far ahead if you double your speed. Traveling at speeds above 200 miles per hour you use the horizon as the means of judging your altitude and only occasionally do you look at the ground or trees to check and see that you do not get too close.

It is estimated that as great as 10 per cent can be added to the speed of the plane if you are within 10 feet of the ground, so the logical thing to do is to fly as low as possible without actually hitting. I flew the Pulitzer race as close to the ground as I dared. On the other hand, the lower you get the greater the danger of hitting and crashing and you have but to close your eyes and imagine the result of hitting anything when traveling at this tremendous speed. To add to the danger the plane will not fly level. If you could control the plane at this speed all would be well and there would be no danger, but it is impossible to eliminate the slight up and down movement, or "weaving."

Keeping the correct altitude is done more with your subconscious mind than with your active mind. With the latter you are busy keeping the proper direction and taking note of the obstacles that are looming in your path. If you are to pass over a bunch of trees or a barn you unconsciously climb to go over them, and only in the moment of passing over do you glance down to check your clearance.



Lieut. R. L. Maughan, United States Army pilot, and the plane with which he won the Pulitzer at Mount Clemens. In a test flight after the race he established a new world's speed record of 248 miles an hour.

If all the objects you passed over were approximately the same height it would be easy, but flagpoles and tall dry limbs of trees have a habit of showing up at unexpected moments and are extremely hard to see from a distance. It is for the unexpected things that one must continually be on the lookout.

Then, too, if you could see directly in front it would be much easier, but because you are seated in your cockpit with a motor and windshield in front of you, you must get your direction by looking far to the side and as nearly as possible to the front. Only by turning your plane slightly to the side is it possible to see what is in front of you on your course, so it will be seen immediately that objects that are not readily discernible from a distance are decidedly hazardous.

In flying a course for record it is almost impossible to keep the plane traveling down a straight line between the poles, as the poles and a half dozen men a half-mile away are blended in the general haze and blur of the landscape. To obviate this and make the ends of the course prominent, several automobiles were stood at each end so as to attract attention.

As in the case when speeding in an automobile, the speed you attain can only be approximately judged. A difference of 10 or 20 per cent makes no difference in the air and is not noticeable if gradually gained or lost and it is only by glancing at your instrument board that you can get a correct idea of your speed. However, if you open the throttle quickly you not only notice the difference, but are surprised that the motor could hold so much unused power. You are jerked back into position and are at once tensed up more than before, even though you had thought that your nerves could not possibly stand any more strain.

And truly the nerve strain is terrific. From the moment you open the throttle to take off to the moment of landing you are on a strain that cannot possibly be realized elsewhere. To this must also be added danger. As if to calm your nerves and seemingly your danger, the warmth of the cockpit and the roar of the motor have a tendency to lull you to

Three Planets in Line—and an Earthquake

in the last few years. Their respective periodicities are said to show an interesting correspondence, but the theory has not been generally accepted by astronomers. On the other hand, some sort of correspondence between sun-spot maxima and severe electrical disturbances is quite well established.

"The sun spot had no effect," declared Father Brennan. "It is true that the largest sun spot of the year appeared Nov. 5, but it was not a large one, compared with those of other years. In fact, it was quite an ordinary spot. And we must remember that there usually are spots on the sun, large or small. For it to be quite free of them is rather unusual."

Earthquakes, explained Dr. W. J. Humphreys, meteorological physicist of the U. S. Weather Bureau at Washington, are produced by a slipping or breaking of the earth's crust as a result of strains. These strains may be caused by the shrinking of the interior of the earth through temperature changes, changes in loads due to rapid erosion taking material from one place to another in the course of a few hundred years, or from the tendency of higher land to flow out to sea.

From what he knew of the Chilean quake, Dr. Humphreys said that it seemed to have been produced by higher land moving out to sea. The actual break in the crust occurred at some distance from shore, and this sudden change in the ocean floor at that point produced a tidal wave. As there were several such waves, there must have been several "faults" or breaks in the earth's crust at the sea bottom which created the different huge billows in the incompressible water.

He said it was probable that the crack extended for a hundred miles or more.

Why the conjunction of Mercury, Jupiter and Neptune with the sun probably "set the day" for the earthquake in Chile, but cannot be regarded as having caused it, was explained by the fact that although the three latter greatly exceed the earth in mass and hence in force of attraction, the enormous distances intervening cut down that force.

As an example, Father Brennan instanced the respective influences of the sun and the moon upon earth's tides. The moon, with a diameter of 2160 miles, weighs one-eightieth as much as the earth. But it is only 238,793 miles away. And the sun, with a diameter of 860,000 miles, weighs more than 326,000 times as much as the earth. But it is 92,500,000 miles away.

Now, the force of gravitation is inversely as the square of distances and proportionately as the
So the net result, as far as earth's tides are may be stated in these words: The moon tides are

That the larger planets do exert this force upon smaller ones is undeniable, and the earth with its miles of diameter is just a tiny pellet beside Jupiter and the sun. But even a conjunction of all seven planets and the earth with the sun would

"Come along, Guy," she said; "that's the dressing bell. I will take you up to your room, and then you can tell me if there's anything you want."

Dinner passed off in a very cheerful fashion. Even the most somber person would find it difficult to be dull with dear old Lady Bulstrode. Afterwards we all adjourned to the big, rambling, book-lined apartment which served a triple function as a library, a billiard room and a smoking lounge. Here, with the stimulus of coffee and cigarettes, we continued to talk until about 9:30, when Lady Bulstrode got up from her chair.

"I am going to bed, Guy," she said. "These good people are sure to keep me up to the most scandalous hours all next week, and I mean to get some beauty sleep while I have the chance. I am growing too old for prolonged dissipation."

"So am I, Mary," chimed in Mrs. Fawcett. "I shall come with you."

"I don't want to drag you off, Grace," went on Lady Bulstrode, turning to Astarte. "Perhaps you'll stop and play Guy a game of billiards."

"Yes, please do, Miss Conway," I said. "It's against my principles to turn in before 10, and I shall be frightfully lonely if you desert me, too."

"Very well," said Astarte, quietly; "but I expect you're too strong for me."

Lady Bulstrode accepted the candle I offered her.

"Don't you believe her, Guy," she said. "Grace is a sort of female John Roberts. She beats all the men we have here."

"Mine will be an easy scalp then," I returned. "I haven't touched a cue for two years."

"I am sorry for you," said Mrs. Fawcett, kindly. "Good night."

"Good night," I replied, opening the door. "At least one can die gracefully."

For a moment after they had gone out we both stood silent and still. Then I closed the door, and came up to where Astarte was standing under the big lamp.

"My dear," I said. "Oh, my dear!" And taking her hands, I gazed steadily into her wide, gray eyes.

"Dear Stephen," she said, gently. Then she released her hands, and put them behind her back. "I want to make things quite clear," she added. "I suppose Lady Bulstrode has told you who I am?"

I nodded.

"Well, in a way, that explains everything. You see, I spent three years with father before he was killed, and the whole of that time we were either sailing about in the Hyacinth, or else making little expeditions into places like Patagonia or New Guinea. You can imagine what effect a life like that would have on a girl of 17. By the time I was 20 I'd almost forgotten that there was any other way of living except in a ship or in a tent. As for wanting anything else," she shrugged her shoulders, "I don't suppose two people have ever been happier together than father and I were."

For a moment she paused.

"Then," she went on, a little wearily, "he was killed. I can't tell you what that time meant to me. You see, somehow or other I had never thought of life without him. He was so strong and brave and splendid, it seemed impossible that he could die like other people. I was trying to think things out, trying to make up my mind what to do, when Lady Bulstrode wrote to me and asked me to come here. So I came, and here I've been ever since."

"And you've been—been happy?" I asked, for want of a better word.

"Oh, yes. Who could help being happy with Lady Bulstrode? She's the dearest, kindest, jolliest soul in the world, and I owe everything to her. Still, as you see, I don't always tell her the whole truth. After all, there was no harm in it," she went on. "If you and Rufus hadn't turned up, no one would ever have been any the wiser. That did complicate matters."

"You make me feel like one of George's official explanations," I protested. "I'd have gone, you know, if you'd insisted on it."

"I didn't want you to go a bit. You see, I thought I should never see you again, and that it wouldn't matter. Well," she looked up, smiling, "we must just forget all about it," she added.

"I don't think we can do that," I answered. "You see, I want to go to Kerrin Island for part of our honeymoon."

She made a slight movement, but I went on.

"My dear heart," I said, "do you imagine that I'm going to let you go again unless you absolutely send me away from you?"

"You're a dear, Stephen," she said, softly, "you're a dear; but—but it can't be."

"And why not?" I demanded.

"Oh," she said, pitifully. Then, with an effort: "You see, I don't love you, Stephen."

I looked steadily into her eyes.

"That's not true," I said, calmly. "I think we'll tell each other the truth, dear, whatever it is."

"Very well." Her gaze met mine unflinchingly. "I do love you, Stephen," she said, "but I'm not going to marry you, because I know all about you."

"I'm sorry for that," I said. "It's certainly enough to prejudice anyone."

She smiled, a wan little smile.

"Oh, my dear, I didn't mean anything unkind. I only meant that Lady Bulstrode has told me all about your career and your ambitions, and how necessary it is you should marry a rich woman. Do you think I'm going to spoil your life because I'm fond of you?"

"No, I don't," I returned, "but I think you would if I gave you half a chance." Then I paused. "As it is," I went on, "I shall simply buy a marriage license and a good second-hand, 30-ton boat, and come and carry you off by force."

"I won't, Stephen—I won't. I'm simply not going to ruin your career for you."

"My career!" I echoed. "Do you think I want to sit on a stuffy green bench and listen to people like dear old George, when I can sail the blue seas and love you?"

"It certainly does sound more attractive," she admitted, weakly.

"Of course it is," I said. "We'll simply take up life where you left it off when your father died. I'll buy that boat, and we'll wander about the world just as we please for a thousand years, and we'll love each other like the sea loves the wind and the night loves the stars."

With shining eyes, Astarte leaned forward.

"My Stephen," she said, "you make it very hard."

I took her in my arms and kissed her.

"Well," I asked, softly, "have you anything else to say, Astarte, before we play billiards?"

She looked up and I saw the old, delicious smile breaking through her tears.

"Only that I was right, after all," she whispered. "I said you were too strong for me, Stephen."

How to Make Your Own Complexion Clay

Every woman now realizes the amazing results obtained by using a good face clay. Complexions can be completely transformed. Skins that are coarse, sallow and lifeless have responded as if by magic. Impurities can be removed and a soft, exquisite texture revealed. So much sunshine has come to me since using my own preparation that I have decided to let every woman share in my secret. I really believe that now a good complexion is within every woman's reach and rather than put my preparation up in expensive packages, I have decided to sell the recipe so that you can make it yourself. For a few cents you can secure from any druggist a sufficient quantity of the pure ingredients to make enough of this wonderful face clay to last for several months. It is easy to make—the directions are simple and I will send complete recipe and full directions upon receipt of $1.00. If not entirely satisfied, your $1.00 will be refunded. Missouri's Wonder Girl With a Golden Voice even than dolls. She began trying to sing from the time she could talk.

"She would sing when she sat in her high chair," said her mother, "and whenever she was happy she would break into song. I remember once when she was 3 years old she embarrassed me greatly. I took her into a store to buy her some shoes and when she saw some little black ones with the red tops being brought out she started singing at the top of her voice."

Marion comes of a musical family, her mother being one of a family of 15, all of whom were musicians. Her grandfather, Gustav Braun, used to direct the members of his family in a chorus.

Next to music, candy making claims Marion's interest. "Let's make candy," is her first request when she has any leisure. She also likes to swim and is a skillful diver.

The real discovery of the girl's voice came when she was 11 years old. It was made by John R. Jones, who then was director of music at the First Christian Church in Kansas City. Mr. Jones had been brought from Spokane, Wash., to reorganize the music of the church. One day Mrs. Talley and her two daughters volunteered for his choir.

"Not this little girl!" exclaimed Mr. Jones, looking at Marion. "Why, she's too young for an adult choir. You and your older daughter may come into it though," he told Mrs. Talley.

Then, observing Marion's disappointed face, he added: "Oh, well, come along. You may sit in the choir, too. Only you mustn't sing too much."

At the first rehearsal, he detected Marion's childish treble rising above the other voices. Eeven then it was unusually full in volume, with the power of an adult voice.

"Come here, my child," he commanded.

Marion went to him and he had her sing alone. Afterward he put her on the front row beside Mrs. Jones and began giving her special instructions in tone.

"Your daughter will be singing in the Metropolitan Opera House in New York before she is 18 years old," Mr. Jones told Mr. Talley.

Although he did not give her regular lessons, Mr. Jones gave special attention to developing the head tones in Marion's voice and keeping her voice away from her chest. He sought especially to develop the silver thread of tone which he recognized running through her full, rich notes.

During that time Marion appeared in various church entertainments and the beauty of her voice became known in limited church circles. About three years ago, at Mr. Jones' suggestion, she began her studies with Ottley Cranston, who then was with the Kansas City Conservatory of Music.

At her first lesson Mr. Cranston recognized her voice as one of rare promise. Last winter, when he was assigning parts for the operas to be presented by the Kansas City Grand Opera company, he gave her two important roles, that of Arline in "The Bohemian Girl" and the title role in "Mignon."

Even before her triumph in grand opera, however, the city had learned of its child musical wonder. Following an inter-high-school musical contest in February, in which all honors were won by Marion, newspapers carried her picture and told of her talents.

Marion's greatest hour came when she sang the role of Mignon with the Kansas City Grand Opera company in May. It was the first time on any operatic stage that a girl so young had sung this role, which, although a child's part, always had been presented by seasoned singers. Kansas City gave the girl singer a tremendous ovation.

After the grand opera triumph crowds flocked to the churches and all other places where the young girl sang. Various great musicians who passed through the city gave Marion hearings. With every one it was the same verdict—"marvelous."

"I never in all my life heard anything like it," exclaimed Mme. Schumann-Heink after listening to Marion's clear, pure tones in "The Wren," a difficult coloratura selection by Sir Julius Benedict. It was the same song that Marion sang for Frantz Prochowsky at his Chicago studio and on which she never had a lesson. She learned it from listening to the phonograph record by Galli-Curci.

Marion was taken to Prochowsky's Chicago studio to have her voice tested. She was accompanied by her mother and sister and by John T. Harding, a Kansas City attorney, who started the movement to have the city raise funds to finance Marion's education.

"The voice is ten times better than you think," was Prochowsky's verdict.

Mme. Galli-Curci, after hearing Marion sing, said: "I never heard so mature a voice in one so young."

All the great musicians advised study in the East with the best teachers, travel abroad, private tutoring in the languages. But the salary of a telegrapher does not provide for such a budget.

However, the girl's talents had aroused Kansas City's civic pride. Mayor Cromwell became interested and through his efforts and those of Mr. Harding and J. A. Harzfeld, another attorney, an organization was formed to raise funds to finance Marion's education. Seats for her concert sold for $5 to $100 each. The proceeds amounted to $10,000.

Then came the trip to New York, the try-out at the Metropolitan Opera House and the little Kansas City girl's conquest of such czars of the musical world as Otto Kahn, head of the Metropolitan, and Giulio Gatti-Casazza, Metropolitan director.

These critics echoed the feelings of most audiences in their reactions to the girl's singing. Doubting and cynical at first, expecting to find an over-press-agented prodigy, they remained to wonder at her larklike tone.

The girl's poise and dramatic ability, as demonstrated in her appearances in grand opera and also in her try-out, will aid materially in her operatic career. Her self-control, her calm, is remarkable. An old-fashioned girl, quiet and retiring, yet she is never bashful and she does not know the meaning of embarrassment or nerves. She stood in the great Metropolitan Opera House when she sang for the galaxy of critics, as tranquil and unruffled as if she were singing in the Sunday school exercises at her home church.

Amid all of the "rushing" that followed her try-out in New York, with lines of newspaper reporters and photographers parked outside the door at her hotel, with her telephone ringing continuously with congratulations and greetings, with praise and laudation coming to her on every side, Marion has not forgotten her friends at home. Daily post cards are received from her by heir neighbors and her girl friends, and she has even remembered many passing acquaintances here who merely were kind to her. Those who know Marion best declare that the honors in store for her never will turn her head.

Before her concert, when a new dress for her was being made—a dainty pink silk frock which was the gift of a ess—Marion exclaimed as she was fitted: "I can't imagine why every should be doing so much just for me."

In a note which she wrote to the just after her concert in Kansas City, said:

"Several persons have told me I not become vain nor forget Kansas C
I shall not ever become vain over gift."

Let Me Tell You About the Remarkable Discovery Which Removed My Superfluous Hair at Once and Forever

To look at my face today—to see my skin as free from hair as a baby's and as clear and rosy looking as that of a young girl—you would not believe that I was once literally a "bearded woman" with hair on cheeks, chin and lips, and with a skin coarse and blemished.

A Woman's Experience

The transformation has been marvelous—all through a truly wonderful discovery of Science which immediately banished every vestige of the hair and gave me this perfect complexion—all this at once and forever, after I had tried without satisfaction all the depilatories on the market and had been treated by the most skillful operators of the electric needle.

Now I want every woman who suffers from unsightly, embarrassing hair growths, and who has found that depilatories and electrolysis have only a temporary effect, to know about this discovery which removes the hair at once and removes it permanently. I want to tell women how they can use this method themselves, in the privacy of their homes, and prove, without risking a penny, that it is all I claim for it.

I say that this discovery will remove superfluous hair at once and permanently, and that it is the only method which will do this. Other ways may get rid of the hair for a time, but back it comes—and many of these temporary methods are painful to use and hurt the skin.

The discovery which Science brought to me is unlike anything else you have ever tried. It is not a powder, not a paste, not a wax, not a liquid, not a razor, not electrolysis. It causes no pain—no burning, no itching, no scarring. It not only removes the hair—it gives the skin a new beauty—makes it soft, clear, rosy, free from pimples, roughness and other blemishes. It does not have to be applied by a beauty specialist. You use it yourself. It's the simplest, easiest way you can imagine.

My Free Book Tells the Secret—Send for It

I have written a book which tells how I came to discover this amazing method and how any woman can get rid of superfluous hair at once, and know that it is permanently gone. Don't send a penny—don't make any promise. Just write to me. The book is free. A post-card brings it. Address Annette Lanzette, care Hygienic Laboratories, Dept. 1234, 204 S. Sketched at the FLOWER SHOW

HOW STRONG ARE YOU?

CAN YOU DO THESE THINGS?

Lift 200 lbs. or more overhead with one arm;
Bend and break a horseshoe;
Tear two decks of playing cards;
Bend spikes;
Chin yourself with one hand.

Can you do all or any of them? I can and many of my pupils can. It is remarkable the number of things a man really can do if he will actually make up his mind to be strong. Any man. It is natural for the human body to be strong and virile. It is unnatural to be weak. One leading writer on physical culture says: "It is criminal to be weak." I have taken men who were ridiculed because of their frail make-up and developed them into the strongest men of their locality.

I WANT YOU FOR 90 DAYS

These are the days that call for speed. It once took four weeks to cross the ocean—now it takes less than one. In olden days it took years and years to develop a strong, healthy body. I can completely transform you in 90 days. Yes, make a complete change in your entire physical make-up. In just 30 days I guarantee to increase your biceps one full inch. I also guarantee to increase your chest two full inches. But I don't quit there. I don't stop till you're a finished athlete—a real, strong man.

Are You Satisfied With Your Appearance?

You won't get rich breaking horseshoes—neither does chinning yourself with one hand get you anywhere. But an attractive appearance does. I will broaden your shoulders, deepen your chest, strengthen your neck. I will give you the arms and legs of a Hercules. I will put an armor plate of muscle over your entire body. But with it comes the strong, powerful lungs which enrich the blood, thus putting new life into your entire being. You will have the spring to your step and the flash to your eyes. You will be just bubbling over with strength, pep and vitality.

SUCCESS

Health, Wealth and Happiness await you. Success in both the social and the business world are yours. Did you ever notice the daily crowds shuffling along the street, dragging their feet after them and apparently taking no interest in life? Suddenly you see some one man come swinging into the crowd with a bounding step as though he were just filled with fire. His head is thrown back, his shoulders erect, his chest out and he has a spring to his step that makes him almost fly along. You naturally turn and look at him—yes, admire him, for he has the vim and pep that you yourself lack. Follow him to his business. I don't care what it is—he's a success. He is the man that does the big things in life. His body is full of power and his brain is keen and alert. And just as you admire him on the street, so is he treated in his social life. He's the life of the party—nobody wants a dead one—it's the live one that counts.

A Doctor Who Takes His Own Medicine

Many say that any form of exercise is good, but this is not true. I have seen men working in the mills who literally killed themselves with exercise. They ruined their heart or other vital organs, ruptured themselves or killed off what little vitality they possessed. I was a frail weakling myself in search of health and strength. I spent years in study and research, analyzing my own defects to find what I needed. After many tests and experiments I discovered the secret of progressive exercising. I have increased my own arm over 6½ inches, my neck 3 inches and other parts of my body in proportion. I decided to become a public benefactor and impart this knowledge to others. Physicians and the highest authorities on physical culture have tested my system and pronounced it to be the surest means of acquiring perfect manhood.

AN ALL-ROUND DEVELOPMENT

I am showing herewith a few of my pupils and their personal letters stating what my course has meant to them. My files keep filling up every day with letters of this nature. How I wish I could meet you face to face and show you these many proofs of my notable achievements. As this seems impossible, I publish a few herewith. I do not need tell the public what I have accomplished. My thousands of satisfied pupils do this for me. They are mostly boys and men who wrote me telling of their pitiful conditions, some almost praying that I would help them. Understand I give each and every pupil a treatment adapted to his individual needs. I analyze your case like your family physician. The only difference is that he works on the internal only, while my system affects your entire being, building up a staunch bulwark that defies disease or the numerous germs which attack the human body. Do you want this strong, robust body which your Maker intended you to have? Do you have the desire for success? If not, you are not human. I don't want to hear from you. But if you are sincere

Send for My New 64-Page Book "MUSCULAR DEVELOPMENT"

It contains dozens and dozens of full-page photographs of both myself and my numerous pupils. Also a full description of my offer to you. This book is bound to interest you and thrill you. It will be an impetus—an inspiration to every red blooded man. I could easily collect a big price for a book of this kind just as others are now doing, but I want every man and boy who is interested to just send the attached coupon and the book is his—absolutely free. All I ask you to cover is the price of wrapping and postage—10 cents. Remember, this does not obligate you in any way. I want you to have it. So it's yours to keep. Now don't delay one minute—This may be the turning point in your life today. So tear off the coupon and mail at once while it is on your mind.

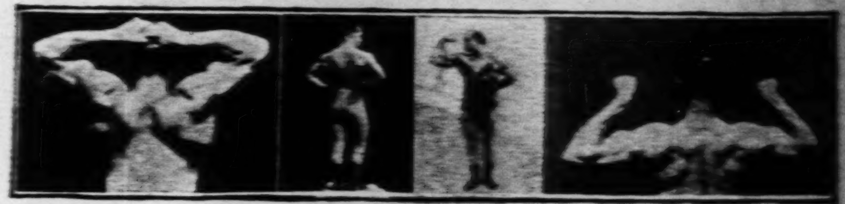
THE ACME OF PHYSICAL PERFECTION



THE illustrations appearing on this page are but a few of the many photographs appearing in my booklet, "MUSCULAR DEVELOPMENT." These are all photographs of my pupils showing the development which they have attained by faithfully following my instructions.

Chicago, Ill.
My Dear Mr. Liederman,

I received my last lesson this morning and I wish to thank you for the kind, friendly interest shown me in the past. I have improved my condition better than I ever anticipated, and you will find me always glad and willing to recommend your course to anyone.

Yours truly, Dr. J. G.

Vancouver, B. C.
Dear Mr. Liederman,

You asked me to measure myself and I have done so. I am now happy to tell you that I have lost seven inches around my waist since taking your course and the fat around my hips and thighs is nearly all gone. I did not imagine when I enrolled with you that I could accomplish such splendid results. I think now if I lose another 5 or 10 pounds I will weigh what I always wanted to.

Again accept my thanks.

Yours truly, W. L.

Tex O'Rourke

Detroit, Mich.
My Dear Mr. Liederman,

I received my first lesson and you cannot imagine how pleased I am with the work you outlined for me for the first week. They certainly are real muscle building exercises, as you claimed they would be, and I know I am going to make rapid progress. I feel stronger and better already.

Your pupil, E. C.

Philadelphia, Pa.
Mr. Liederman,

Dear Friend, Received your final lesson and have completed your course. I thank you very much for the fine training you gave me. You have made a real man of me and have enabled me to defeat many of my friends in strength. I am very much pleased with your course and thank you for all your kind letters and the help you gave me.

Wishing you luck and success in your life's work, I am,

Your friend, A. C.

Cleveland, Ohio.
My Dear Mr. Liederman,

I received your exerciser this morning and it is everything you claim it to be. It surely is the greatest muscle builder to be had, and I am mighty glad I am one of your pupils, for I know you are going to make a real athlete out of me. Your letters are frank and straight from the shoulder.

I am going to send you a photograph of myself in a few weeks as soon as I have time to get one taken.

Wishing you success, I am,

Most sincerely, J. McK.

Cincinnati, Ohio.
My Dear Instructor,

I thought I would write you and let you know how I am getting along.

I have been following your course three weeks now and my arms have gained over an inch. I have also gained three inches on my chest and one-half inch on my neck. Your course is certainly doing wonders for me.

Looking forward with interest to the next lesson, I am,

Your faithful pupil, J. F.

Earle Liederman, 305 Broadway, New York City. November 19, [illegible]
Dear Sir:

I have recently had occasion to thoroughly investigate your splendid course, and I believe that in departing from the old time-worn methods you have worked out a system which is excelled by none.

I have found several of your original exercises to be remarkably effective. There is no reason why any one following your instructions should not rapidly attain perfect muscular development and abounding health.

Accept my congratulations, and my best wishes for well merited success.

Very truly yours, TEX O'ROURKE.

There must be some value to my system of training when such famous men as Tex O'Rourke, who is one of the world's leading authorities on physical culture and who is undoubtedly the foremost trainer of the world's champions, recommends it.

A perfume novelty

new purse-size package from Houbigant—all odors

AT LAST! You can buy your favorite Houbigant perfume in a new small scent bottle which is of just the proper size to nestle in your purse, or tuck snugly away in a week-end bag.

And such a charming bottle, too, —a dainty golden-capped trifle of patterned crystal which might have been inspired by Marie Antoinette herself. Certainly, the scent bottles carried by the patrician ladies of the old French Courts were not more fascinating. It has captivated Paris, not only because of its convenience and generous measure, but because it is a delightful revival of a Louis XVI mode.

For those of you in America who would make this pretty fashion your own, Houbigant has a tiny word of warning, however. Insist on having the container shown in the illustration. Houbigant guarantees the genuineness only of those perfumes that are packaged and sealed by the House of Houbigant itself.

In the new Houbigant scent bottle you have choice of fourteen odors: Quelques Fleurs, Mon Boudoir, Le Temps des Lilas, Violette Houbigant, Parfum Inconnu, Jasmin Floral, Mes Delices, Le Parfum Idéal, Un Peu d'Ambre, La Rose France, Premier Mai, D'Argeville, Coeur de Jeannette, Quelques Violettes. Ask for it at your drug or department store. If not obtainable, send for it. Price one dollar.

What wind and cold do to your skin

—how to protect it

Under exposure to the dry cold winds of winter the skin becomes unusually dry and then cracks and breaks under the strain.

This chapped condition must be guarded against, not only in the depths of winter, but at its first approach when the skin is especially sensitive to the change in seasons.

To guard against the drying effects of wind and cold, protect your skin with Pond's Vanishing Cream. It holds the natural moisture in the skin and keeps it from becoming rough and dry and cracked. Never go out without first smoothing it into your skin. It is absorbed immediately and affords an invisible shield against wind and cold.

This cream is sold in jars and tubes of convenient sizes at all drug stores and toilet goods counters. It cannot clog the pores or promote the growth of hair. The Pond's Extract Co., 131 Hudson Street, New York.

To complete the care of your skin you need a very different cream—Pond's Cold Cream for a thorough nightly cleansing. It is made with just the right amount of oil and not a bit more.

FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST
FOR HEALTH

RAISED TO A NEW IMPORTANCE IN THE LIVES OF MILLIONS

Science has found in the familiar cake of Fleischmann's Yeast a food to combat three common complaints

For fifty years the familiar little cake of Fleischmann's Yeast had been in daily use in millions of American homes. Yet until three years ago it was considered merely a necessary item in baking the most wholesome bread.

And then a series of experiments in some of the country's greatest laboratories raised the familiar foil-wrapped cake to a new importance.

In three years—three astonishing discoveries

First it was discovered that Fleischmann's Yeast was peculiarly rich in vitamin, without which no amount of food can nourish the body properly. And now millions of weakened, undernourished men and women are finding in it the very elements necessary to regain their health and strength.

Then came the discovery that the tiny living cells of Fleischmann's Yeast help to cleanse the body of the poisonous waste that constantly accumulates. And an ever-widening circle of users throughout the nation are finding freedom from the bondage to dangerous cathartics.

And now it has been shown that Fleischmann's Yeast by increasing the number of white corpuscles in the blood acts as a powerful agent in clearing the complexion of many skin disorders. And so a third group, large and growing, are finding relief from painful and embarrassing skin disfigurements.

Everywhere physicians and hospitals are prescribing Fleischmann's Yeast today. Eaten regularly (for it is a food, not a medicine), it is helping hundreds of thousands of men and women to regain the joy of perfect, vigorous health. Letters pouring in from every state in the Union bear daily witness to the new place Fleischmann's Yeast has achieved as a health-builder for the nation.

Appetite and digestion restored

Men and women troubled with loss of appetite and faulty digestion have found that these troubles disappear when they eat Fleischmann's Yeast regularly. The great problem for such people is first to stimulate the appetite, and at the same time make it possible to digest the increased food that is eaten. Fleischmann's Yeast has this remarkable effect on the digestive system. It enables you to eat more, and to get more benefit from the food you eat.

Laxatives made unnecessary

Fleischmann's Yeast does for you naturally and permanently what drugs at their best do only artificially and for a short time.

In hospitals, even chronic cases respond to it and normal functions are restored in from 3 days to 5 weeks.

Fleischmann's Yeast is assuring to thousands a complete daily elimination of waste matter—a body kept clean and free from poisons.

Skin and complexion cleared

Skin troubles are often danger flags of lowered vitality. Fleischmann's Yeast is now established as a food which corrects the basic cause of many disorders of the skin.

That ruddy glow of health—that freedom from such unhealthy skin conditions comes only from perfect health within. Fleischmann's Yeast rids you of these disorders by building up the whole system and keeping stomach and intestines in a natural healthy state.

An absorbing free booklet tells what Fleischmann's Yeast has done for others and can do for you. Send this coupon for it today!
